A Member of George V.'s Household Is Accused of Cheating at Poker.

ROYAL DERBY DINNER UPSET

Other Royalties Absent Themselves to Avoid Meeting the Man Under Suspicion.

QUEEN'S FRIEND INVOLVED

King Makes Strenuous Efforts to Hush the Scandal Up—Accused Demands a Vindication.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 4.—Gossip is busy with the story of a card scandal that may have as sensational developments as the Gordon-Cumming case at Tranby Croft, in which King Edward, then the Prince of Wales, appeared as a witness in court.

The new affair has already had remarkable consequences, among them the abstention of a number of guests who had been invited to attend the King's dinner at Buckingham Palace on Derby night, and the decision of the King to remian in town over the Whitsuntide holiday in order to confer with the persons concerned in the case. His Majesty is doing his utmost to keep the affair quiet and prevent anything in the nature of a public scandal; but so far only a compromise has been reached, which certain parties interested refuse to accept as final.

The person against whom the charges of cheating at cards is made is a member of the royal household who has been winning considerable sums at poker at the St. James's and Marlborough Clubs. His chief accusers are two well-known men. It was in order to hear their charges that the King remained in town on Whitsunday, and last Monday his Majesty had a long interview with them at Buckingham Palace.

The first reports of the affair reached the royal ears on the first day of the Epsom race meeting, and it was intimated that until the matter was cleared up several members of the Jockey Club would refuse to meet the man in question. As he was one of the guests invited to the Derby night dinner, it was suggested to the King that his invitation be withdrawn, or the intimation sent to the undesirable guest that he would be well advised to make some excuse for not appearing.

This King George flatly refused to do unless absolute proof of the charge of cheating was produced. The result was that every royal personage asked to the Derby dinner, including Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duke of Teck, and nearly every prominent member of the Jockey Club, remained away from the dinner.

After the interview at Buckingham Palace on Whitmonday the King suggested to the member of his entourage who was accused, or at all events suspected of cheating, that he leave England, at least for a time; but this the courtier in question point-blank refuses to do. He denies that there is the slightest truth in any of the charges made against him, and declares his readiness to fight the matter out in a court of law if his accusers will formulate their indictment in such a way that he can take action for libel against them.

The King will not allow this to happen if he can possibly prevent it, for several members of the royal establishment are involved in the scandal, among them a woman who is one of Queen Mary's most intimate friends. At the King's request the affair has been compromised for the present by the courtier and his two accusers agreeing not to enter the cardrooms of any of their London clubs; but the matter can hardly be left at that, and the charges made must sooner or later be substantiated or withdrawn.

$2,000,000 CARNEGIE GIFT

For Institute at Pittsburgh—Pensions for Workers There.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, June 4.—Andrew Carnegie has added $2,000,000 to the many millions he has already given to support and enlarge the institutions he has created in Pittsburgh. His latest donation was announced this afternoon at a special meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Institute by Col. Samuel Harden Church, the recently elected President of the board.

The $2,000,000, which makes Mr. Carnegie's gifts to the Carnegie Institute total $24,000,000, is equally divided between the institute and the schools of technology. The gift made it possible for the Appropriations Committee of the Board of Trustees to increase the budget for the ensuing year by $100,000, the income from the new endowment.

President Church announced that the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching had notified him through its President, Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, that arrangements had been made to grant pension allowances to the Director and Faculty of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and also to the Directors of the Carnegie Museum and the Carnegie Department of Fine Arts, and such of their Curators as do teaching work, under the same rules and regulations of learning throughout the United States.

AMERICANS ESCAPE DEATH.

Get Ashore from Blazing and Sinking Launch—Two Mechanics Hurt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 4.—A wealthy American named Kingsland, his son, and two mechanics had a narrow escape on the Thames near Marlow last evening, owing to an explosion on a motor launch belonging to Col. Sir Douglas Dawson of Medmenham Abbey, Marlow.

Mr. Kingsland, who arrived from Paris with his son last Saturday, having leased the Abbey for the season, was taking a trip in he launch when the engine exploded, throwing the two mechanics into the river. The launch caught fire, but Mr. Kingsland and his son got the vessel to shore and escaped just before she sank.

The mechanics were badly burned, and one had to have a finger amputated. The Kingslands had their clothing scorched, but were uninjured.

ALBANIA'S KING NOT SALUTED

Fear of Effect on Rebels Silences Guns of Austrian Warship.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, June 5.—The King of Albania, whose throne seems to be tottering to its fall, has already had to abandon the outward forms of royalty, according to a Durazzo dispatch Dr. Dillon sends to The Daily Telegraph.

"The King and Queen, who, since Essad Pasha's fall, have led the life of prisoners in the palace," he says, "went out to luncheon aboard the Austrian dreadnought Tegethoff, accompanied by the Grand Vizier, aides de camp, and ladies in waiting.

The Austrian warship was to have fired a salute from its guns, and the Cabinet was desirous of having this done. Public criers accordingly were sent into the streets to inform the inhabitants and to exhort them not to be alarmed. The Commission of Control was opposed to this part of the programme on the ground that the booming of guns might prejudice their chances of coming to terms with the insurgents, with whom they were about to have a conference. After a lively discussion the Commissioners had their way and the salute was not fired.

The Commission of Control returned from the conference without coming to any arrangement with the insurgents, whose final demands include the dethronement of the present ruler and the substitution of a Moslem Prince.

CHAS. H. STRAUSS MISSING.

Well-Known Insurance Man Disappeared on May 28—$1,000 Reward.

Charles H. Strauss, agent for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, with offices at 200 Fifth Avenue, has been missing from his home at 155 Riverside Drive, near Eighty-eighth Street, since Thursday, May 28.

The family advertised in the newspapers yesterday and asked the police to aid in the search. A private detective agency was also retained and last evening Charles Riegelmann, an attorney of 44 Cedar Street, a close friend of Mr. Strauss, announced that a reward of $1,000 would be given for information which would lead to Mr. Strauss's return.

Mr. Strauss came to New York from Chicago in December, 1909. He is married and has one child, Aline, aged 3 years. Mrs. Strauss said yesterday that she was unable to account for his disappearance. She notified her husband's brothers, Henry X., Leon, and Milton A. Strauss of Chicago, and they came here to aid in the search. They are at the Biltmore.

At the request of the family Mr. Strauss's books were carefully examined and found to be right to a penny. His home life was happy.

Mr. Strauss was seen last in the hat shop of F. R. Tripler, at Forty-second Street and Madison Avenue, at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of May 28. He bought a golf cap and had his Panama hat sent home. It was thought that he might have taken a train at the Grand Central Station. He is 34 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighs 200 pounds. He was smooth shaven and wore a gray suit and black low shoes.

Mr. Strauss was a member of the Harmonie, City Athletic, Aldine, Woodmere, and University of Michigan Clubs. His mother lives in Chicago. She has not been told of his disappearance.

LOW-COST FOOD BY EXPRESS

Adams Express Launches New Plan for Marketing Produce.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—What is regarded as the most effective blow yet struck at the high cost of living, an innovation that sets up a formidable rival of the parcel post and tends to the elimination of the middlemen, is the establishment of an Order and Food Products Bureau by the Adams Express Company, announcement of which was made here today.

By means of this bureau the company will promote more intimate relations between the producer or dealer and the consumer. The company will become a clearing house for excess production, disposing of fruits, berries, butter, eggs, poultry, fish, meats, and other food articles at a minimum of expense to seller and buyer. The company is responsible to both, delivering the commodities to the buyer's door and the money to the seller, without any intervening agency. The rate on the class of merchandise for which the bureau is designed is 25 per cent. below the commercial rate fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and is no higher than parcel post charges. To the cost of carrying must be added the money order charge, ranging from 3 cents for $2.50 to 15 cents for $40.

A feature of the bureau system is immediate delivery service. Fish, fresh from the water at Chincoteague, Va., in the morning are delivered in Philadelphia the same day. The same prompt delivery applies to crabs from Maryland waters; fruit and vegetables from Delaware and Maryland; poultry, butter, and eggs from the farms of either State or any other points in the Philadelphia zone where the bureau has established connections with producers or dealers.

DENIES MELLEN SHIELDED MORGAN

Ledyard Contradicts Flatly Ex-President of New Haven's Version of His Indictment.

NOT ALLOWED TO BE SWORN

Lawyer Makes Voluntary Statement at Interstate Inquiry—Defends New Haven Directors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Lewis Cass Ledyard, appearing voluntarily today in the New Haven inquiry, without being allowed to be sworn, in order that he might not claim immunity for any act of his in connection with possible violations of the anti-trust law that may have occurred in the efforts to combine all the transportation systems of New England under one control, denied flatly many of the assertions with which former President Charles S. Mellen in his testimony two weeks ago startled the financial world.

He said repeatedly that statements made by Mr. Mellen were not true. The squarest denial came in telling of the trouble that followed a conference between President Mellen and Messrs. Chamberlain and Smithers of the Grand Trunk Railway, when Mr. Morgan broke in on the meeting and said things in regard to the surrender of the New London & Northern Railroad that were alleged by Mr. Mellen to have been made the basis of action by the Federal Grand Jury in New York.

Mr. Mellen's account was that to shield Mr. Morgan he took upon himself responsibility and was indicted for an attempt to violate the anti-trust law when Mr. Morgan should, according to his view, have been the victim. Mr. Ledyard declared that there was not a word of truth in this testimony by Mr. Mellen.

Didn't Offer Himself as Sacrifice.

"I want to say in most unqualified terms," said the lawyer, speaking of the letter Mr. Mellen sent to United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise in regard to the matter, "that Mr. Mellen did not offer himself as a vicarious sacrifice for Mr. Morgan to shield him from indictment. He wrote that letter at his own suggestion; it was the letter not of a man who accepted responsibility for what had occurred. It was the letter of a man claiming innocence, for it was a letter to the District Attorney stating that he was the only one who conducted whatever the negotiations were, as he was the only one who knew what had been done. Therefore, he desired to go before the Grand Jury and tell his story of what those negotiations were."

Mr. Ledyard denied that he or Mr. Robbins had changed or modified the letter so that it was practically their letter and not Mellen's. He said that Mr. Mellen dictated the letter, and when the stenographer came back with it written out, one or two changes were suggested, and that was all. The witness recounted conversations he had with Mr. Mellen and also with Mr. Morgan about the danger of the Grand Jury finding an indictment against one or the other for the Grand Trunk affair. All that happened, he affirmed, was that Mr. Morgan broke in on the conference between Mr. Mellen and the Canadian Directors of the Grand Trunk and asked what they were there for, "in his blunt way."

Mellen told him they were just going to have a talk, and Morgan said: "What are you going to talk about?" Mellen answered that they were going to talk about traffic arrangements, and then Mr. Morgan said: "Well, there won't be any peace until you give up the New London and Northern."

It was not long before Mr. Mellen saw Mr. Ledyard, according to the latter, and brought up the possibility of action by the Grand Jury. "I don't believe," he quoted Mr. Mellen as saying, "that the Grand Jury would indict me if I should go down and tell them my story like a man." Mr. Ledyard said he had responded that he did not think Mr. Mellen had done anything for which the Grand Jury would indict him. Neither had Mr. Morgan. Then the idea of the letter came up and Mellen dictated it.

While they were busy over the letter Mr. Mellen remarked that he thought Mr. Morgan was very much worried. This was about the time of the Pujo investigation, and Mr. Morgan was disturbed over that. Ledyard said that Mr. Mellen stated that he (Morgan) had had some some of "communication with people down here about it," meaning he had written to the District Attorney in regard to the Grand Trunk affair.

Morgan Not a Bit Worried.

"I told Mr. Mellen," said Mr. Ledyard, "that Mr. Morgan could take care of himself," but Mr. Mellen asked him to call on Morgan and see if he was at all disturbed about the possible action of the Grand Jury. This the witness accordingly did. He went to Mr. Morgan's library and told him Mellen was troubled about him, and asked if he was at all worried over the matter.

"Not a bit, not a bit," was Mr. Morgan's reply.

"I asked him," said Mr. Ledyard, "if he had had any communication with the District Attorney, and he replied, 'Not a bit. You needn't worry about me.'"

In conversations between Mr. Ledyard and Mr. Mellen the latter, according to Mr. Ledyard's statements today, insisted that Mr. Morgan never said a word about taking the New London & Northern, and not a word was spoken about acquiring stock.

Mr. Ledyard approached the Billard affair from an entirely different angle from Mr. Mellen's. He said that Mr. Mellen came to him to see if the minutes of the New Haven board could not be changed, saying that an erroneous version of the Billard matter had gone on record and it might make trouble some time if it became known. Ledyard said he told him it was a very serious matter to change records of a stock company. The New York law was strict, and so, too, was the Interstate Commerce Commission. Mr. Mellen insisted that as the record stood it appeared that Billard's profit in the sale and repurchase of 109,748 shares of Boston & Maine stock belonged to the New Haven. He thought the statutes in regard to minutes would not apply in this case which involved an error. Mr. Led-

6 BARNARD SENIORS REVEAL THEIR TROTH

Cross Their Hearts at Class Day Experience Meeting and Name the Lucky Men.

GIBES FOR THE GRADUATES

Public Exercises End with Sunset Song: "Again the Palisades Grow Dark."

At the senior class dinner at Barnard College last night, which was the last event on the class day programme, six young women who are leaving school announced their marriage engagements.

The six announcements were a complete surprise to other members of the class, and came at the annual experience meeting.

The experience meeting is one of the most solemn events of the college year, and consists of a roll call in response to which each girl in turn rises, crosses her heart and her fingers, and tells all the rest of the girls whether she is really engaged or not, and if so, to whom.

Each year the ceremony brings forth a goodly crop of surprises. Girls whom no one had ever suspected of matrimonial inclinations demurely report that it is going to happen some time in the Fall, and girls who had been thought to be set aside, marked off, and appropriated by men known to every one confess that they are going to marry men whom their friends have never even heard of.

The news of the engagement announcements came from Brooks Hall after the banquet, but all the girls who had heard their chums tell their secrets refused to reveal either their names or the names of the men most interested.

Yesterday's class day exercises began with the steps ceremony.

The Senior President, Louise Adams, handed over the cap and gown, with all privileges thereunto attached, to Sarah Butler, incoming Senior President.

Each class sang a farewell song to '14 after the seniors had run through their class songs of earlier years. For the last time they sang the senior song and then gave place to 1915, who took the senior steps and sang the senior song for the first time.

After more singing and cheering the classes marched in academic procession to the Columbia gymnasium, where the class day exercises were held.

The graduating class entered to strains by the student orchestra and took their places on the platform while the assemblage cheered.

Louise Adams, Senior President, delivered the salutatory, and showed how "fortune favors 1914 even if she does have hard luck sometimes."

Marguerite Schorr, in the rôle of Limelight Lionella, gave a history of the class in true movie style. Every time a film was changed the class covered the gap by bursting into song. One was very appropriate, set to a tune popular with organ grinders:

College, '14's growing old,
Silver threads 'mid brown and gold,

it ran—and then some.

Among '14's achievements, last but not least, was the winning of the alumnae parade banner the day before by a clever illustration of "Evolution" through all the laboratory types, earthworm, lobster, fish, frog, monkey, to the finished product of the fashion parade, "The Survival of the Fittest." All the animals were there, crawling, swimming, or jumping about the campus.

Florence Harris's class day song sobered the affair for a few minutes, but fun broke out again when Alice Waller read a nonsensical paper entitled "Advice from the Dodo," slamming the other classes.

To Louise Fox was intrusted the task of giving "Knicks, Knacks, and Knocks" to members of her class. She called forth roars of laughter from the undergraduates, in which families and friends joined without always seeing the point.

The class day poem, by Corinne Reinheimer, was heartily received. Miss Florence Schwarzwälder disposed of plans for the improvement of colleges in a daring speech entitled "Higher Education." She spared neither Faculty nor friend with her wit.

The gift to the college, three drinking fountains, was presented by Ruth Guernsey, Chairman of Senior Week. In the absence of the Undergraduate President-elect, Miss Helen Jenkins received it. She brought the house down with her remarks about the appropriateness of the gift—"Gushing fountains of water—so like '14," as she expressed it.

These were announced as elected to Phi Beta Kappa: Louise Adams, Elsa Becker, Sophie Bilow, Estelle De Young, Caroline Allison Duror, Helen Dourds, Ruth Guernsey, Beatrice Heinemann, Dorothy Herod, Sidney Miner, Sarah Ordway, Margaret Peck, Harriet Poer, Gertrude Raff, and Helen Shipman.

Harriet Winship Poore received the French Prize and Margaret Peck got the Constance von Wahl Prize. The former was founded in memory of Edith Thomas, 1914, and the latter in memory of Constance von Wahl, Undergraduate President of 1912.

Dorothy Fitch, Undergraduate President of 1914, delivered the valedictory, and the exercises closed with the Sunset Song, "Again the Palisades Grow Dark."

The classes then returned to Barnard and entertained their friends there.

THE NORTHLAND ASHORE IN SOUND

PASSENGERS TAKEN OFF

Forward Hold of Vessel Full of Water, But She Is in No Danger—Sea Smooth, Weather Clear.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Friday, June 5.—According to a wireless message received here late last night the passenger steamer Northland is ashore off Bartlett's Reef, about ten miles southwest of here.

The wrecking tug Tasco left New London harbor shortly after midnight to go to her assistance.

No details were given in the message.

The Tasco reported by wireless at 1:30 o'clock this morning that she had sighted the Northland, and would soon be alongside the steamer. The Northland did not appear to be in any great danger, the message said.

The forward hold of the Northland is full of water. The 75 passengers, transferred from the steamer to the Tasco, will be taken to New London.

The sea is smooth, the weather clear, and the Northland is in no danger. There are four fathoms of water at the point where the steamer struck.

A wireless message received in New York late last night reported the plight of the steamer Northland of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, which left here yesterday afternoon for Portland, Me. This message said the steamer was ashore on Gull Island in The Race at the eastern entrance to Long Island Sound. The Northland asked that a revenue cutter be sent.

Within less than half an hour after the Northland was reported ashore a message came from her withdrawing her request for a revenue cutter and stating that she needed no assistance.

The Northland, a speedy boat, capable of 19 knots, but probably making slower time last night because of the thick weather, left her pier here at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was said at the pier last night that her passenger list was not a heavy one on this trip. She carried an ordinary cargo of freight.

The Northland is a steel screw steamer built in 1910 at Wilmington for the Eastern Steamship Company, and commanded by Capt. Bragg. She is 304.4 feet long, 47.2 beam and 19.8 depth of hold, and has 9,731 gross tonnage.

Gull Island lies between Plum Island and Fishers Island in latitude 40:12 N. There is a light on the island, which is off Fort Terry and almost directly south of New London.

WIRELESS PHONE FEAT.

Conversation Over a Distance of 150 Miles, It Is Asserted.

PARIS, June 4.—By means of a wireless telephone apparatus invented by two naval officers, Commander Victor Colin and Lieut. Maurice Jeance, conversations were carried on today over a distance of 150 miles.

The words came with greater distinctness, it is said, than is customary even over a telephone connected by wire, the speakers' voices being clearly recognizable.

The inventors of the new apparatus succeeded in transmitting speech by wireless five years ago. Their instruments were installed in the French battleships Verite and Justice, but they could not be depended upon, chiefly owing to variable quality of the oscillations of the Hertzian waves. By experiment the inventors succeeded in overcoming the difficulties by means of an attachment which filters the waves. They declare that any number of posts can exchange conversations at the same time without interfering with each other, by slightly varying the respective wave lengths.

While antennae measuring 150 feet are necessary for long distance transmission, conversations can be received on the apparatus, which is used by many persons to catch the Eiffel Tower time signals.

FORD TO BUILD HOSPITAL.

Offers to Take Over Detroit's $2,000,000 Project.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, June 4.—Because one of the 10,000 unemployed who were drenched with a fire hose last January while seeking employment at the Ford plant contracted pneumonia and tuberculosis as a result, and Henry Ford could not find hospital accommodations for him in the city, the motor manufacturer today made an offer to the Directors of the General Hospital, now in course of construction, to take over the project, repay all subscriptions, complete the work, and make it a poor man's hospital. He will spend $2,000,000 on the project, and as much more as may be necessary to keep it running. The offer undoubtedly will be accepted. In his letter to the hospital board he refers to the proposed municipalization of the hospital as "a serious mistake, both for the city and from every other point of view." This is a surprise to the public as the Ford interests are supposed generally to be in favor of municipal ownership.

The philanthropic spirit of Mrs. Ford is credited in part for the decision of Mr. Ford to build the hospital.

J. P. Morgan's Son Operated On.

Henry Sturgis Morgan, youngest son of J. P. Morgan, is in the Presbyterian Hospital recovering from an operation for appendicitis. He is a student at Groton School in Massachusetts and last week complained of feeling ill. He came home and was examined by the Faculty physician, who decided upon the operation. He was taken to the hospital on Tuesday. It was said yesterday that he was improving rapidly.

BUTTERFIELD WILL FAT FOR POLITICIANS

Putnam County Republicans in Line for Big Fees in Settling $5,000,000 Joint Estates.

GOOD JOB FOR JOHN R. YALE

Surrogate Southard's Father Remembered—Men Who Vote Right Put in Laborer's Jobs.

With the first day of the public sale by auction yesterday of the furnishings of Cragside, the home at Cold Spring-on-Hudson of the late Mrs. Julia Lorillard Butterfield, widow of Gen. Daniel Butterfield, another chapter in the story of the estate was opened for discussion, and Putnam County has been alive with such discussion ever since the death of Mrs. Butterfield on Aug. 6, 1913.

The situation today is that a $2,000,000 estate, in the settling of which another estate of $3,000,000 is closely involved, is out of the hands of the executors appointed by the will and so placed that its administration is guided by prominent members of the Republican machine of Putnam County and their allies.

Residents of Cold Spring do not allege that any illegal act has been committed. They simply point out that lucrative jobs in connection with the estate are in the hands of the three men who are recognized as supreme political forces in the county and their friends, and that much money in lawful fees and salaries will have gone to these men before the estate is settled. They say that not even such small fry as laborers on the estate have been overlooked, and that after the death of the testatrix several workmen whose political sympathies were not guaranteed were replaced by others who were known to be of the faithful.

Moreover, they say, the settlement will be effected only after intricate legal proceedings concerning both Mrs. Butterfield's estate and that of her first husband, Frederick P. James, in which she had a life interest, have been taken, and that before the matter is cleared up many thousands of dollars in counsel, guardian, and administrative fees will have been paid.

Putnam County, which is strongly Republican, recognizes that there are no more important men politically within its bounds than John R. Yale, Chairman of the County Committee, J. Bennett Southard, County Judge and Surrogate, and State Senator James E. Towner. Another man of political importance, though not equal to the other three, is William H. Berrigan, County Chairman of the Independence League. The latter, though not a Republican, is recognized as having been the political ally of the triumvirate on many occasions.

That is why Putnam County is interested in the fact that John R. Yale and William H. Berrigan are the temporary administrators of the $2,000,000 estate; that Surrogate Southard appointed them, and that Senator Towner appeared yesterday as the auctioneer at the most important public sale that the county is likely to see in a long time.

John R. Yale, whom Putnam County looks upon as its "boss," whether justly or not, is famous as a politician, and is an old-timer there. Of late his political interests have been those of J. Bennett Southard, who is just starting his third term as County Judge and Surrogate. Six years ago Mr. Southard had a difficulty with the Republican Party and did not get the nomination for a second term. He ran, however, on the Democratic ticket, and although a Republican nomination is supposed to mean election, he won as a Democrat. Last November he received the Republican nomination and was elected for his third term.

The appointment of Yale and Berrigan as temporary administrators of the Butterfield estate, which was fought by the executors named by Mrs. Butterfield, does not complete the list of machine allies who have received remunerative posts in connection with the estate.

Surrogate Southard's father, Jacob G. Southard, was appointed to have charge of the maintenance of Cragside. This appointment was not made by the Surrogate, however, but by Supreme Court Justice Morschauser of Poughkeepsie. Surrogate Southard was responsible for the appointment of Hugh Smith and John H. Brooks as appraisers of the estate.

Mr. Smith is a shoe dealer of Cold Spring, with no marked political affiliations, who is considered a responsible and competent business man. Brooks is a stone mason of Nelsonville, near Cold Spring, and is reputed to be useful when some one is needed to round up the vote of the highways and byways. Part of the duties of these appraisers was to value the art works contained in the Fifth Avenue Winter residence of Mrs. Butterfield.

For trustees of the James estate of $3,000,000, in which Mrs. Butterfield had a life interest, the Surrogate named William A. Ladue and William H. Truesdale. The former is considered a capable young man, little in politics, although his father was a prominent Democratic Assemblyman. He is a close personal friend of the Surrogate. Truesdale is a carpenter, and is looked upon as useful to the Republican politicians.

After the will of Mrs. Butterfield was filed for probate and the hearings began, it developed that Nathan P. Bushnell of Peekskill, a law school classmate of the Surrogate, was appointed a special guardian, with William E. McReynolds of New York, to look after the interests of four children of Mrs. Butterfield's grandnephews, whom she had mentioned in the will specifically as not entitled to any of her money "for reasons best known to myself," nor were their heirs to have any.

Later William H. Weeks of Brewster appeared at the hearings under appointment as "special guardian for unknown infants, heirs and next of kin of decedent, if any, published against in the supplemental citation dated Dec. 15, 1913." Mr. Weeks is a friend of "Jack" Yale and a former District Attorney. He ran for the Assembly last Fall when Judge Southard was up for re-election, but was defeated. Mr. Weeks is regarded as independent in his views and is a man of high standing.

State Senator Towner came into connection with the estate as auctioneer of the sale yesterday. The appointment was that of the temporary administrators, as was the appointment as assistant auctioneer of William Andrew Ferris, President of the village of Brewster, who is a cog in the Republican machine. Another man wha shared in the profits is E. W. Addis, Republican,

TEN HURT IN TORNADO.

Storm Sweeps Through a Pennsylvania Valley, Overturning Houses.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERSET, Penn., June 4.—A tornado swept through the Casselman River Valley late this afternoon. Ten persons were injured, one mortally. Many houses were overturned. In the towns of Ursina ad Confluence practically every structure was damaged. Mrs. Henry Cameron, aged 80, of Cameron, was hit by flying timbers, and it is thought will die.

The storm passed quickly, leaving tons of wreckage in its wake. There was a very heavy rain for fifteen minutes. While the storm was at its height there was almost total darkness.

IDENTIFIES MAN OF MYSTERY

Mrs. H. F. Pitkin Says "J. C. R. Is Her Son, Earl W. Iles.

CHICAGO, June 4.—"J. C. R.," the man of mystery of Rochester, Minn., and Chicago, was identified to-day by Mrs. H. F. Pitkin of this city as her son, Earl W. Iles, a mining engineer, who has been missing for eight years. He gave her feeble signs of recognition, but could say nothing, as his vocal cords are paralyzed.

"J. C. R." was found unconscious on the streets here last November. At the Oak Park infirmary, where he was taken, he sometimes wrote the initials "J. C. R.," and at other times "J. P. R." Later he was identified as a man who had escaped from a hospital in Rochester, Minn. He had spent years there and was known only as "J. C. R."

Mrs. Pitkin will take Iles to her home. She heard from him last in September, 1906. He then was in the mining district of Goldfield, Nev.

GIRLS CHEER A DUCKING.

High School Seniors Tossed Juniors Into the Delaware.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., June 4.—Trenton High School seniors engaged early today in their annual cremation exercises at Taylorsville, Penn., bound with rope a dozen or more juniors who interfered and flung them bodily into the Delaware River, while fifty girl members of the senior class looked on and cheered. Parents and the school authorities are highly indignant at the incident, and investigations are promised.

The seniors engaged a special trolley car to convey them to Taylorsville. The juniors learned of the plan and took possession of the car and proceeded to the seniors' camping ground. Then the seniors hired another car and went to Taylorsville, where they found the juniors in possession and a fight immediately started.

The juniors were worsted, and the seniors built a large bonfire, and, despite a heavy rainfall, sat down to a feast of hot frankfurters and ice cream. The juniors came back to the attack again, and again were repulsed. A dozen were taken prisoners. The seniors tormented the prisoners, and finally bound them hand and foot and tossed them into the stream.

MARRIED 6 WEEKS, GONE.

Religious Editor Leaves Bride Who Was a Wellesly Graduate.

Kenneth B. Douglass, for five months religious editor of the Newark Evening News, disappeared on Tuesday from his home, 23 Franklin Street, Newark, six weeks after his marriage to Miss Majorie Stoneman of St. Louis, a graduate of Wellesley College, who was employed in Newark as an efficiency expert at the Bureau of Associated Charities.

Douglass was formerly of Toronto, Canada, and was a graduate of two colleges and a Doctor of Philosophy. At the offices of The Newark Evening News it was said yesterday that he had figured in a divorce case in the West. He told his wife that he was innocent of any wrongdoing, but was told that he would have to produce proof if he wanted to keep his position. The News received a telegram from Douglass yesterday saying that he wished to resign, as he was going to enter a sanitarium. Where the telegram came from was not made known.

Mrs. Douglass said yesterday that her husband told her he was going to see a physician when he left home on Tuesday last.

FRANK HEARING TODAY.

Motion Up to Set Aside Verdict in Phagan Murder Case.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 4.—The next step in the fight on behalf of Leo Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, will take place tomorrow, when Judge Ben Hill will hear the motion of the defense to set aside the verdict on the ground that the prisoner was deprived of his constitutional rights because the verdict was rendered in his absence from court.

Solicitor Dorsey, for the State, will contend that Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, who represented Frank at the trial, waived his presence, but Attorneys Tye and Peeples, who have brought the motion to set aside the verdict, will insist that the laws of every State and the laws of the United States contemplate the presence of the prisoner in the courtroom, and that even his attorneys cannot waive his presence. Mr. Tye and Mr. Peeples have many decisions to sustain their contention, and they believe that Judge Hill will set the verdict aside, which will free Frank.

Should the verdict be allowed to stand the case will be taken to the Federal Courts.

EINSTEIN HOME ROBBED.

Thieves Got Much Valuable Jewelry While Family Was at Theatre.

Burglars entered the home of Julius Einstein at 136 West 121st Street between 8 and 9 o'clock last night, while the family and servants were away, and carried off jewelry which Mr. Einstein told the police of the West 123d Street station was worth several thousands of dollars.

Mr. and Mrs. Einstein and their daughters left the house a few minutes before 8 o'clock to go to the theatre and told the servants that they might have the night off. At 9 o'clock Julius Einstein, Jr., Mr. Einstein's eldest son, returned home from visiting friends in the neighborhood. He noticed that the lights in the house were turned on, although he knew the family was away.

An investigation showed that the front door had been opened with a jimmy, and young Mr. Einstein, summoning two patrolmen, entered the house. They found that the burglars had ransacked every room, overturning furniture and tossing bureau drawers on the floor in their haste. None of the silverware was taken, the burglars having also passed by tapestries of great value.

MILITANT GETS INTO ROYAL COURT

Despite All Police Precautions, Attends Ceremony in Buckingham Palace.

MAKES APPEAL TO KING

Drops on Her Knees Before Him—Monarch Takes No Notice of Her.

IS TAKEN OUT QUIETLY

Her Identity at Present a Mystery—May Be a Titled Woman with the Right to Attend Such a Function.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, June 5.—Despite the most elaborate official and police precautions, the militant suffragettes achieved their ambition of creating a scene at the Court held last night at Buckingham Palace.

A woman got as far as the royal presence and dropped on her knees in front of the King, addressing an appeal to him.

The scene of confusion that followed lasted only a few seconds, and the woman was escorted out.

Just what the suffragette said to the King seems to be in doubt. According to some accounts, all she had time to say was, "For God's sake, you Majesty"—before she was removed. According to other versions she exclaimed, "For God's sake, your Majesty, do not use force!"

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent learns from a witness of the scene that the proceedings were about half way through and at their most brilliant point when a young, good-looking woman, who was approaching their Majesties as they stood to receive the women presented, dropped upon her knees and shouted to the King.

Apparently a Debutante.

It was just before the débutante, as she appeared to be, should have made her obeisance as she drew near to the royalties. Possibly nervousness caused her to mistime her act. Possibly, also, she was not regularly invited for presentation, and hurriedly made her demonstration before reaching the Court official who would have received her name.

Before she could add anything to the few words she spoke two or three officials were beside her. One of them took hold of her arm and addressed her. She rose from her knees without another word and walked quietly out between two officials. The scene was over in a few seconds. Indeed, it passed so quickly that it was unnoticed save by persons close at hand.

The King looked on with an entirely impassive face, giving no indication that he even observed it, though it is certain that he must both have seen the woman on her knees and heard her words.

At the time of cabling the woman's name is unknown. She was dressed in a black gown in accordance with the requirements of Court mourning.

More Than One Demonstrator?

Another version of the incident is that a demonstration was made by two titled women, sympathizers with the suffragette movement. Both had been previously presented, and were in a social position sufficiently high to entitle them to cards for all Court functions. When in the presence of the King and Queen they raised their voices in a demand that votes should be conceded to women, the Court officials promptly intervened and escorted the women to an anteroom, there to await their motor cars, and then conducted them beyond the precincts of the palace.

A third version of the incident is that a woman, when passing the royal presence, fell on both knees and cried in a loud, shrill voice, which could be heard through the throneroom: "Your Majesty, won't you stop torturing women?" The band in the gallery was playing at the time, and the conductor, observing what was happening, gave a signal to it to play more loudly, with the result that the woman's voice was drowned. Col. Sir Douglas Dawson, Controller of the Lord Chamberlain's Department, himself helped to carry the woman out. The proceedings were not interrupted for an instant.

Ever since Mrs. Pankhurst mooted the idea of a suffrage deputation to the King, which was vetoed by the Home Office, the militants had been determined to gain access to King George and bring him personally to task for his Government's attitude toward them. The recent march upon Buckingham Palace was only one of their efforts in this direction. Various other plans were tried, but were nipped in the bud.

Mrs. Pankhurst has been hiding lately in a house in Grosvenor Place, overlooking the gardens of Buckingham Palace, and the police believe that she selected that particular residence, which belongs to one of her supporters, as a coign of vantage whence to spy out the land. The guards around the palace have been doubled.

There are constant patrols around the garden walls inside and out.

Police Heard of the Plan.

Exactly what the militants' plans were, however, remained a mystery till yesterday afternoon. Information then reached Police Headquarters that the suffragettes were confidently expecting to create a scene within the palace precincts at the Court held by King George and Queen Mary last night.

The June Courts are usually the most brilliant of the season. All the world and his wife are in London this month, and, as the earlier Courts are largely given up to presentations from the diplomatic and official sets, general society is more largely represented at the June Courts, which are also usually much more numerously attended.

This is particularly the case this year. In fact, the large number of presentations on the lists for last night's and tonight's Courts was one reason for the violent alarm which the reports of a pending suffragette coup created. Something not far removed from panic invaded Scotland Yard. The nerves of the police owing to the recent series of outrages by the "wild women" have grown ragged. The men in all the Metropolitan districts have been kept on duty for much longer hours than usual, and the higher officials have been in a state of extreme tension.

When the news that the militant leaders were already exulting over the anticipated success of the demonstration at Court reached Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon there was a hurried council between the Scotland Yard chiefs and the Court officials. Every possible precaution, it was thought, had already been taken.

The arrangements were that every carriage approaching Buckingham Palace should pass through a cordon of police, and that detectives who were acquainted with the features of the leading militants be stationed at various points within the palace. Every woman arriving at the palace was to be carefully scrutinized, and special care was to be taken that every card of invitation produced was genuine and bore the name of the guest.

The police were led to believe that some invitation cards were forged, and Scotland Yard's brains were racked to devise means whereby the fraud could be detected.

In the course of the early evening the authorities issued a statement that the extraordinary precautions taken would be found adequate to prevent a suffragette intrusion upon the brilliant function. The palace would be kept sacred, it was stated, and the King would be absolutely safeguarded. All these boastful previsions were proved fallacious.

American Women's Gowns.

There were a good many American presentations at last night's Court, which was the most brilliant so far of the season.

Ambassador Page presented his son, Ralph Page. Mrs. Page presented her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ralph Page; Mrs. Edward Bell, wife of the Second Secretary of the embassy; Miss Dorothy Doubleday, who is a guest of the Pages at Grosvenor Square; Miss Esther Cleveland, daughter of the late ex-President; Mrs. Randolph Mordecai and her daughter, Miss Margarita Pennington of Baltimore, and Miss Mary Sanger, daughter of Col. Sanger of Sangerfield, N. Y.

Mrs. Page wore an exquisite court gown of ivory satin over which was a drapery of gold-embroidered ninon. The bodice was draped with embroidered material and fastened over the shoulders with net and straps of diamante trimming. The skirt was made with a pointed train of gold-brocaded ninon and then, from beneath the folds of the skirt fell a court train of satin, gold-lined and embroidered in different shades of brown silk, forming a flower design, the centres finished with dewdrops in fine diamante.

Mrs. Bell wore a gracefully draped gown of ivory satin, veiled with old lace. Part of the bodice was of diamante and pearls, finished with a deep satin belt knotted at the side. A train of embroidered gold and white gauze hanging from both shoulders was caught up with diamante ornaments.

Mrs. Ralph Page wore a white satin gown trimmed with old lace, with a white chiffon train and gold lace border. He ornaments were pearls.

Miss Dorothy Doubleday was in a gown of white moire antique, with a train of white chiffon bordered with silver lace attached to the shoulders with wreaths of silver roses.

Miss Esther Cleveland was in a simple gown of white satin and tulle. The train was of chiffon, silver bordered.

Mrs. Mordecai was in a gown of pink and silver brocade. The train was of pink and silver tissue draped with pink chiffon. She had a cape of silver lace. Her jewels were a diamond tiara and other diamond ornaments.

Miss Pennington's dress was of white satin, draped with white tulle, caught up with small pink roses and maidenhair fern. The corsage was embroidered with diamante. The train was white satin, attached to the dress by a bow of pale pink ribbon lined with pale pink chiffon. Miss Pennington wore pearls.

Miss Sanger wore a gown of soft white satin. The corsage was arranged with shadow lace and tulle caught up with a sheaf of lilies of the valley. A manteau de cour of white tulle was bordered with crystal trimming, with large bows catching clusters of lilies of the valley down the left side.

Lady Suffolk presented her niece, Lady Irene Curzon, who wore a dainty débutante's gown of ivory charmeuse with a Court train of cloth of silver hemmed with diamante and fastened to the shoulders with diamante mercury wings.

MILITANCY IS WELL PAID.

Many Women Have Left Other Work to Join the Suffragettes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, June 5.—The Times, referring to the proposed plan of the authorities to combat the campaign of the militant suffragettes by prosecuting contributors to the funds of the militant organization and attaching their property, points out that the character of the movement has changed considerably since its early days. Then volunteers came forward in large numbers to do the work. Now it is done very largely by women who are paid, and well paid to do it.

Cases are frequently heard of in which women have given up other employment to join the militants, not from any love for the cause, but merely because the pay is so much better.

It is believed, says The Times, that legal action against subscribers who provide funds for this renumerative employment will have a very considerable effect, but, if not, steps may be taken to secure legislation which will enable the Home Secretary to declare certain societies having no corporate existence to be illegal and to attach their funds.

KEEP CLOSER WATCH ON HUERTA GUNBOATS

AWAIT CARRANZA'S REPLY

Mediators Also Marking Time While President Wilson Considers Outline of Agreement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The departure of the Ward liner Antilla from New York on Tuesday with a heavy cargo of arms for the Constitutionalists at Tampico presents itself tonight as a more interesting, if not a more threatening, incident than ever. There was talk here tonight that the fact of the ship's having been allowed to sail was a breach of the understanding with the mediators, as described yesterday by Mr. Bryan and possibly an infraction of the armistice with Gen. Huerta. Today the Administration, resigning itself to the departure of the Antilla, directed the Navy Department to keep watch on the Mexican Federal gunboats to see of any attempt was made to prevent the cargo frm reaching its destination.

Soon after the capture of Tampico by the rebels orders were sent through Admiral Badger at Vera Cruz to Admiral Mayo at Tampico not to allow the three Federal gunboats that escaped from Tampico to interfere with commerce to and from that port. That order still stands, and the Navy Department has reported to Secretary Bryan each step taken for its enforcement.

At 3 o'clock this morning a dispatch was sent to Admiral Badger informing him of Gen. Huerta's reported declaration of a blockade at Tampico against the Antilla and directing him to watch and report any movement of the little gunboats.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the answer came that the gunboats had not moved, and that information was sent to Mr. Bryan by Secretary Daniels.

It was pointed out here tonight that any attempt on the part of the American warships to prevent the Federal gunboats from interfering with the Antilla would in itself be an act of aggression against Gen. Huerta's forces. Such an act in ordinary circumstances would mark the end of the armistice to which the United States informally bound itself pending the Niagara conference. And the end of the armistice might bring mediation to an end.

It was said at the State Department this afternoon that no inquiry or protest had come from the mediators regarding the sailing of the Antilla, but the outcome of the incident in connection with the peace movement is being watched with interest in some quarters here. If it should be found to emphasize in a striking way the difference of view between the United States and the mediators as to the treatment of the rebels there would be no surprise in some circles.

CARRANZA DELAYS REPLY.

But a Semi-Official Warning Is Issued to the Mediators.

EL PASO, June 4.—Gen. Carranza announced today through agents here that he would not make answer to the communication of the A B C mediators nor issue his proclamation dealing with the arrangement of a Provisional Government in Northern Mexico until he had reached Saltillo.

At the same time it was announced that the Constitutionalist Commander in Chief had departed from Durango on his way to Saltillo by way of Torreon.

The delay in the issuance of the proclamation is believed to have been occasioned by some phase of the Niagara Falls conferences and by the reported desire of Carranza formally to establish himself as Provisional President at Saltillo, the capital of the State of which he was Governor under the Madero Government.

Semi-Official Carranza Statement.

The opinions of those surrounding Carranza regarding the three-cornered conference at Niagara Falls were reflected once more in a semi-official statement from Durango.

The message follows:

"'Hamlet with Hamlet left out' is the way many of the Constitutionalist leaders here expressed themselves today regarding the conference at Niagara Falls. That a plan can be found to settle internal affairs in Mexico without the participation of the Constitutionalist Government is regarded by them as impossible. They point out that the only party directly interested in Mexico which has been represented in the formation of the Niagara Falls plans has been that of Huerta. This party, defeated by the Constitutionalists at every point, is in the throes of dissolution and is in no condition to fulfill any pledges that might be made.

"The Constitutionalists have declared repeatedly that the sole solution of the internal difficulties of the country was the elimination of Huerta and his party from politics.

"The Constitutionalists emphasize the fact that they will recognize only a Government established under the plan of Guadalupe at the triumph of the revolution. By this time the Commander in Chief of the Constitutionalist party will be provisional President of Mexico, while elections are being verified and constitutional order is restored.

"In a word, the Constitutionalists think it would be well for the negotiators to acquaint themselves with the facts before committing themselves to a programme which there is no possibility of their carrying out."

Declaration from Pesqueira.

In addition to the Durango statement, one was issued here through Roberto Pesquiera, Carranza's confidential diplomatic agent on the border. The latter was given out from Señor Pesquiera's office today, after it had been revised and edited by a number of lawyers employed by the Constitutionalists, and was given out with the express understanding that it was to appear in print in detail, and that nothing could be cut from it. The Pesquiera statement reads:

"Mexico is entitled to clean up its own back yard, and does not seek nor desire any interference from any quarter. Neither does Mexico intend that there shall be any interference with the sovereign rights of the Republic, and will resent any such infringement. The internal affairs of Mexico are subjects for the careful consideration of Mexicans, who are impartial and know the people and the country and bring patriotic motives to bear in dealing with such problems—certainly not by persons who by their past records show that they hold their selfish interests above the interests of Mexico, nor by foreigners, who cannot possibly understand fully the needs of our people, who are different from their people."

LOOK TO WASHINGTON NOW.

Mediators Await President Wilson's Acceptance of Peace Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 4.—Another day of waiting has served neither to emphasize nor lessen the anxiety that prevails among those concerned in the Mexican peace agreement over the present aspect of their work. The situation is one of patience, and the mediators and those with whom they are conferring are exercising that virtue in the face of a feeling that the next few days may bring developments that will point the way to the success or failure of their undertaking.

Although in the face of things the next move appears to be expected from Gen. Carranza in the form of a response to the note mailed by the mediators to his agents in Washington on Tuesday night, the feeling among most of those connected with the negotiations is that President Wilson has it in his power to start the wheels of the peace movement again. Gen. Huerta has accepted in principle the plan of pacification upon which the American and Mexican delegates agreed, and there is a hopeful feeling here that the Washington Government will lay the foundation for further progress by following the example of the old warrior who stands at the head of Mexican affairs. Should President Wilson also accept in principle the terms of the outlined programme submitted by his delegates, the mediation negotiations could be resumed without waiting for Gen. Carranza's response.

DENOUNCES VERA CRUZ FINES.

German Paper Says They Are a "Sheer Act of Revenge or Malice."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, June 4.—The German Foreign Office expects soon to receive the Hamburg-American Line's detailed report of the Ypiranga and Bavaria incident. Such instructions as it may be deemed necessary to send Ambassador von Bernstorff, if any, will not be dispatched to him before tomorrow or Saturday.

The German press continues to assert the illegality of the American action in fining the German ships. The Liberal Vossiche Zeitung, whose attitude toward the United States in Mexican affairs has always been more or less unfriendly, says that the German Captains "unquestionably acted within their rights" and that it is therefore inconceivable that the fines should be paid. It also says that the American official statement regarding the fines, which seeks to give them an aspect of legality, is a "sheer act of revenge or malice," nothing short of childish. The American position, it continues, is utterly untenable, because Gen. Funston is trying to invoke the Mexican harbor regulations "against Mexico itself." Such an attitude, it declares, is both petty and deplorable.

SCANT HOPE OF ARMISTICE.

Carranza's Agents Certain He Will Not Yield That Point.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Rafael Zubaran and his associates in the Constitutionalist junta in Washington are waiting for Gen. Carranza's reply to the latest note of the mediators, which was forwarded to him at Durango yesterday. No answer is expected from Gen. Carranza before Monday or Tuesday.

"The matters touched upon in the note of the mediators," said Señor Zubaran tonight, "will be given very careful consideration by Gen. Carranza, who is just now transferring his capital from Durango to Saltillo. Gen. Carranza will give preference to the consideration of the note, but he may be in Saltillo when he sends his answer."

When Señor Zubaran was asked what he thought of the situation, he said:

"I am inclined to think that the general situation is encouraging."

When asked wheher he thought Gen. Carranza would consent to an armistice and mediation of Mexican internal affairs, Señor Zubaran smiled, shrugged his shoulders, and, speaking through Señor Urquidi, as interpreter, responded that he could not enter into details; that Gen. Carranza was fully able to speak for himself and for the Constitutionalist cause.

Señor Zubaran was in telegraphic conversation with Gen. Carranza for several hours last night. After sending a cipher translation of the mediators' note to Gen. Carranza by telegraph, Señor Zubaran communicated to the head of the Constitutionalists a complete statement of the situation as seen through the eyes of the Constitutionalist junta in Washington. Every element and fact in the situation which it was deemed essential that Gen. Carranza should have before him while considering the note was telegraphed to him. This included a statement of the attitude of the American Government, as disclosed last night by John Lind in his talk with the Washington members of the junta and comment on the situation issued by the Huerta delegates at Niagara Falls.

The Constitutionalists here say Gen. Carranza is fixed in his determination not to consent to an armistice and in his opposition to the attempt to settle the internal affairs of Mexico by international arrangement.

SAYS AMERICANS WERE SHOT.

Oil Man Reports That Thirty Were Killed Near Tuxpam.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Penn., June 4.—While making his escape from Mexico, George Dennison, an oil man, who arrived here today, said he saw thirty Americans shot down in cold blood by Mexican soldiers. He added that Americans were continually being murdered in the interior sections of the southern republic and that American property was being destroyed.

Nearly three weeks ago Dennison was working at Paramita, 52 miles from Tuxpam, when conditions became so critical that it was deemed advisable for all Americans to flee the country at once. They immediately hastened in from the lease on which they had been working and boarded a train for Tuxpam. The women and children had been sent to that city hours before and got through safely.

Dennison says that the assassination of the thirty Americans occurred at a point far off their direct route, and the three refugees were hiding in a clump of trees when they saw the tragedy. The Americans were making an effort to reach Tuxpam by boat, when they were captured by the Mexicans. He says the Mexicans lost little time, but quickly marched the Americans to a convenient place and shot them down.

OCCUPYING VERA CRUZ STATE.

Carranza Forces Working South—Take Only Current Taxes.

DURANGO, Mexico, June 3, (Via El Paso, Texas, June 4.)—The towns of Tantimo and Tantoyuca, in the State of Vera Cruz, have been captured by a force under Gen. Candido Aguilar, newly named Governor of that State, according to a message received today by Gen. Carranza. Gen. Aguilar has occupied a large portion of the State, has established civil and military authorities in office, and offered full guarantees to commerce and industries.

In answer to presentations made by the United States State Department, Gen. Carranza today ordered that collectors in the States held by Constitutionalists make no effort to again collect the back taxes paid by foreign companies to the Huerta Government. Collectors will now receive only current taxes.

HUERTAS STILL IN MEXICO.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, June 4.—President Huerta confirmed today the statement of THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, cabled yesterday, that no member of his family had left the country or thought of doing so.

The newspaper men had a weary wait in the anterooms of the Foreign Office this evening. Just when they expected to be received by Señor Esteva Ruiz, Francisco de la Lama, the Finance Minister, called and was for some time in conference with Señor Esteva Ruiz. At 8 P. M. the latter had not found time to receive the press representatives.

DAY ASSAILS WILSON ON MEXICAN POLICY

Chancellor Likens Situation to a Family Quarrel, Where Peacemaker Suffers.

BUSINESS POLICY INSANE

Editors of the State Hear The Times Described as a Model Newspaper.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, June 4.—The New York State Press Association met here in annual convention today. Delegates were present representing all parts of the State. There was a dinner tonight at the Onondaga Hotel, at which speeches were made by Charles H. Betts, editor of The Lyons Republican, the President of the association; Chancellor James Roscoe Day of Syracuse University, and Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University.

W. E. Gardner, publisher of The Syracuse Post Standard, in welcoming the delegates at the opening session of the convention, said:

"THE NEW YORK TIMES is a model for American journalists. In its presentation of the news it is the best and most complete American newspaper. It is the pride and the guide of every American editor. It is always reaching out to extend its usefulness. It thrills its readers daily not with sensationalism, but with its wonderful achievements, along rational, legitimate lines. What it does, it does daily. It is not fond of splurges."

"Sane Politics" was the subject of the speech of Chancellor Day. In discussing the characteristics of recent National Executives, the Chancellor referred to one "as a President of so tremendous energy and expanding force that he would have blown himself into a thousand pieces if he hadn't blown off steam at every valve, including the whistle, while he clanged the bell for everybody to get off his track."

Continuing, Chancellor Day said:

"Now we have an academician, a college President who manages the country as he did unruly college students, with little speeches and some private lambastings. He runs things with holy awe of the Democratic platform when he can use those planks, and when he wants the tolls he steps off the platform and walks on his own planks.

Attacks Mexican Policy.

"We have been made a little nervous by his attempt to select the best assassin for the Presidency of our Mexican neighbor. Some of us didn't think it mattered a peanut shell which cutthroat was President. Let them at each other with provisional recognition of the survivor, and they would kill each other off until Mexico got down to decent and honorable men.

"Some of us couldn't see what we needed to get into that family row for anyway. It is a pretty dangerous thing to mix up in a neighbor's domestic row. A friend of mine was passing a house occupied by a Dutchman and his Irish wife. Holland and Ireland had many a scrap. One of these periodic discussions was on as my friend was passing. There was the sound of smashing furniture and kitchen utensils were going out of the window. A scream rent the Sabbath air.

"My friend, a powerful man, rushed in and flung the Dutchman into a corner of the room and addressed some pious words to him. He turned to console the assaulted and bruised wife when there came down upon the small of his back, wielded by her muscular arms, the heavy wooden bottom of a kitchen chair that sent him upon his hands and knees, followed by a blow on the head that nearly put him out of commission. My friend crawled away. Just then another shriek came from the woman. My friend looked over his shoulder and being a stutterer said feelingly: 'Ge—ge—give her hell!'

"It is my opinion that it is about as well to let Mexico have hell in her own way, if that is what Mexico wants, and we have enough to do to mind our commerce without 'waiting and watching' while she gets it. My friend went home and minded his business. He never went back there again to serve humanity.

"I know that somebody spat at our flag. But a cat may spit at a lion at a safe distance. The seventeen boys brought back to New York and sent over the country to their burials is a sad price to pay for the spitting of a cat. It is too late in the world's history for us to get too easily provoked internationally. A big fellow never should bluster. It gives the little fellow great advantage. Sane politics will henceforth and forever avoid all wars except those of invasion of its native seas or shores."

"Insane Politics" in Business.

Chancellor Day then took up a discussion of business matters and conditions, saying: "Our insanity began when we smashed into the great business of the country and it became possible for a President to become a dictator in the sole purchase and control of great corporate forms of business."

"The insanity of our insane politics in business may be seen today in the wreck of one of the most stable, reliable and profitable railways in the world, and the stagnation of business for years from the lakes to the gulf and from ocean to ocean.

"Does it seem credible that this mighty country has put its great corporate businesses, built up by giants of industry whose movements were safeguarded by the security of their investments and the conditions of prosperity among the people by which alone they could succeed, over into the hands of commissions composed of men who would never be thought of as Directors of such corporations, men utterly without practical experience in such management.

"I believe that it is insane to try to manage business by politics. A very few, simple, plain statutes with their roots in the common law and with methods in common sense are all we need. Simply enough to make property property, and that every man may know what they own, and that every man may have the right and privilege to make the most of himself and for himself is all we require.

"The commission is a nefarious thing. It has got to justify itself by doing things. It is a stage setting. It must keep in the limelight. It must mind the claquers in the gallery."

Schurman on Executive Reform.

President Schurman in his speech discussed the American system of government and said:

"In this State of New York we should have no State officials elected by the people except the Governor and the Lieutenant Governor. All the rest should be appointed by the Governor. This is the meaning of the short ballot. And you see the reason for it. Obviously it makes government more efficient; for every official becomes at once responsible to the Governor, and the Governor can supervise the work of his subordinates much more effectively than we, the 2,000,000 voters of the State, can do it. But that is not all. The short ballot makes government more democratic. For when the people elect the Governor and give him power to appoint all his subordinates, they can hold him responsible for the entire administration of the affairs of the State.

"The weakest point in our State systems of government is the Legislature."

SUFFRAGE STIRS EDITORS.

They Give Miss Todd the Floor After Warm Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, June 4.—The State Press Association Convention was in an uproar today when President Betts announced that he intended to call on Miss Helen Todd of California to speak for ten minutes in behalf of woman suffrage.

Edgar L. Adams, ex-President of the association and editor of The Marathon Independent, called the attention of the chair to a resolution adopted at the convention in Garden City two years ago which provided that politics should not be discussed in the convention. He also said that the resolution had been introduced by L. William Jones, editor of The Sullivan County Review of Roscoe, who had escorted Miss Todd and her friends to their seats in the convention hall. He said that the resolution, moreover, provided that no nonmember of the association could speak to the association without unanimous consent.

"Then I ask for unanimous consent," said President Betts.

"I object," said Mr. Adams.

Mr. Adams said that two years ago a woman advocating the vote for her sex asked for fifteen minutes' time and took two hours in which to make her argument. The prohibitory resolution was the result, he said.

Chester C. Platt, editor of The Batavia Times and Secretary to William Sulzer when he was Governor, asked for fair play for Miss Todd. He said no resolution adopted two years ago could bind the members now if they wished to hear Miss Todd.

"We want enlightenment," he said. "Why should we close an ear to this discussion. We should be broad-minded and courteous."

It was finally decided by the members with but one dissenting vote to remain and hear Miss Todd at the close of the morning session. Miss Todd's speech was applauded liberally.

GUADALAJARA SURROUNDED.

Rebels Also Report the Capture of Colima on West Coast.

ON BOARD U. S. S. CALIFORNIA, Mazatlan, June 3, (via wireless to San Diego, June 4.)—Guadalajara, the objective point of the recent operations of the Constitutionalist Army of the Northwest, under command of Gen. Obregon, has been effectually surrounded. Three columns of Obregon's army, according to official information reaching Admiral Howard, have succeeded in shutting off the city from the national capital on the east and Manzanillo and the Pacific Coast on the west.

It is understood here that Gen. Obregon's advance with combined forces of approximately 10,000 men upon Guadalajara will be timed so as to meet Gen. Villa's troops headed southward in a combined attack on Mexico City.

Colima, capital of the State of that name, and one of the most important cities in Southwestern Mexico, has fallen into the hands of the Constitutionalists under Gen. Alamillo, former Governor of Colima, according to official information furnished Admiral Howard late today by a Constitutionalist officer.

Gen. Alamillo has been operating near the City of Colima, it has been known, for some time, preparing for an assault.

Fernando Ibarro, an attorney of the Southern Pacific Company, has been imprisoned at Tepic on the order of Gen. Obregon, according to information reaching here today. The reasons were not stated.

The van of Gen. Morelos Zaragoza's forces which evacuated Tampico has arrived at Huauchinango, State of Puebla, en route to this capital. The van consists of Gen. Higinio Aguilar's cavalry.

Gen. José Refugio Velasco, who after the evacuation of Torreon was transferred to San Luis Potosi as Governor and military commandant, has been ordered to report to this capital and is expected to arrive here tomorrow night. There is a disposition to connect Gen. Velasco's trip to the capital in some way or other with the pending peace negotiations. Gen. Velasco is succeeded by Gen. Joaquin Maass.

LIPTON'S NEW YACHT FASTER THAN THE OLD

FINE FIRST TEST YESTERDAY

Nicholson Quite Outdid Himself in Designing a Racing Body—Lipton Pleased with First Trial.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PORTSMOUTH, June 4.—Shamrock IV. had its first sail-stretching spin with the Shamrock III. on the Solent today and won favorable opinion of many of the yachtsmen who witnessed her movements. Thousands of people watched the yachts leave. Sir Thomas Lipton, who was aboard the challenger with Mr. Nicholson, her designer, and Capt. Burton, who is sailing her, were warmly cheered as the two Shamrocks were towed out to Portsmouth Harbor from Gosport, in fine sunny weather with a flukey wind blowing mainly from the northwest. Under mainsail, foresail, and jackyards topsail the challenger showed good speed in two runs across Osborne Bay and back to Ryde. Under American measurements she must allow the trial boat about four minutes. The challenger appeared to hold her own throughout. Designer Nicholson and Capt. Burton took turns at the tiller. Both expressed satisfaction as to the speed and handiness of the challenger and Mr. Lipton concurred in their opinion.

The challenger's skipper regarded the spin more as a sail test than as a speed trial, and probably the present sail plan will be altered before the next spin. Expert yachtsmen who followed the challenger's movements with critical eyes, approved the easy manner in which she was manoeuvred, and the quickness wherewith she tacked, and expressed the opinion that she is shaped like a cup lifter and will prove a very fast boat, once she is shaken down into racing trim.

The Daily Mail's special correspondent aboard Shamrock IV. explains that he cannot give her dimensions for this reason: "If accurate—and those published are not—the full particulars of the dimensions would be of great value to our American rivals. If these were known before the competing yachts were officially measured for the race, another advantage would be gained by the United States, and goodness knows they have plenty already. Let it suffice that the new boat is 110 feet in overall length, with beam 22 feet 9 inches. The waterline length is 75 feet, and it is satisfactory to know that so skillful has been the building of the hull and spars that the yacht is sailing under that length. Even more wonderful is that the mast is hundredweights lighter than the most sanguine had hoped for. So far, therefore, the designer has beaten his estimates. I, like others, was much impressed with the masterly interpretation of the rule which was strange to Shamrock IV.'s designer. Herreshoff practically devised the rule of the New York Yacht Club, but unless he drew it from a well which was deeper than most can fathom, Nicholson has him beaten—that is, if Shamrock IV. can carry her canvas. The English designer and his chief American rival were given widely different readings of the American rule of measurement, and that fact makes the coming races more interesting than they ever have been in former years. Curiously enough, Herreshoff has produced a vessel which might cross the Atlantic with greater ease than the Shamrock IV.—a small, sharp model, with moderate sail, and Nicholson with his long, full overhangs and heavy keel. The huge canvas area has turned out a racing yacht which might well have been devised by an American designer in his more advantageous position."

VANITIE LOSES BY RESCUES.

Two Sailors Fall from Cup Yacht Deck in Trial Race.

The third race for the America's Cup defense yachts, Resolute and Vanitie, was brought to a thrilling end yesterday less than twenty-five minutes after they had set forth in the teeth of a howling thirty-five-knot southeaster. Two of Vanitie's sailors, heedless of Capt. Bill Dennis's shout of warning, were washed overboard when an extra heavy gust came bowling across the Sound, smiting the Cochran sloop's sails and standing her almost on her beam-ends.

Vanitie was leading at the time, but the loss of her men took all the fight out of her for the rest of the day. Before they had been hauled, weak and exhausted, from the sea, Resolute had rounded the first turn and was running for home. The flag officers' candidate finished the second leg, and was declared the winner by the Regatta Committee, although she had sailed only half the prescribed course.

Seeing what had befallen the Cochran boat, the committee's tug, Julia Moran, raced for the second turn flying the code signal Flag M, which means "Race will finish at this mark." The committee, consisting of H. de B. Parsons, Chairman; J. M. Macdonough, and Frederick O. Spedden, clocked Resolute as she passed the mark at 1:55:30 and gave this as her official time. Her elapsed time was 53:41 for the nine miles. The starting times were: Vanitie, 1:00:21; Resolute, 1:01:57.

Two Sailors Go Overboard.

The wind was blowing hard all the time, but there were puffs in it, and Capt. Dennis sighted one of them heading straight for him. He shouted to the men to drop the sheets, but they only hauled the harder, and the next instant the gale was upon them, sending all hands sprawling, and into the trough of the sea went Oscar Olsen and Alec Johnson, two of the men at the sheets.

Capt. Dennis at once brought his boat up into the wind, while several of the crew cut frantically at the lashings of the little skiff on deck. Luckily, this boat, which is carried in compliance with the law, was on the lee side, and the crew had it launched in no time.

As it struck the water one of the crew, Hans Efrensen, sprang in and bent to the oars. At the same time Phil Dennis, a brother of Vanitie's skipper, and John Swansen, the mate, threw rings to the men. Both had drifted far astern by this time, and the weight of the water in their boots and the drag of their heavy oilskins made it difficult to keep afloat in the rough sea. One of the life rings was carried far out of reach, but the other drifted near enough for Olsen to grasp it.

Several vessels that had been left far astern in the race put on full steam when they saw what had happened. The Regatta Committee's tug was one of the first to start to the rescue, but the press tug John J. Timmins was the nearest of the fleet and got there first. Capt. Robert H. Deakin of the Timmins ordered his crew to stand ready with the line, for the man in the rowboat was having all he could do to rescue one of his mates.

This man, Johson, after managing to keep his head above water for a quarter of an hour, was rapidly losing strength. He was finally hauled over the skiff's stern and sank exhausted on the seat.

Rescuing Sailor Olsen.

Olsen, the other sailor, was rescued by the crew of the Timmins. Capt. Deakin brought the tug close alongside, while his men tossed a line which the sailor caught. They hauled him to the tug's side in short order, but it took four men to lift him from the water, for his strength was gone and his sea boots were filled to the tops. The boots had been tied with rope just below the knee, and they could not be kicked off while the men were in the water.

Both sailors were hauled over the tug's stern, and their boat after them. Johnsen was in pretty bad shape and had to be carried to the engine room to get warm. He revived by the time Vanitie's tender, City of Stamford, drew alongside and took all three sailors off.

Alexander Smith Cochran, Vanitie's owner, was on board the sloop when the men went overboard, and he saw the rescue. Later, when Vanitie, in tow of her tender, reached City Island he hastened aboard the City of Stanford to see that the two sailors were well cared for. Mr. Cochran had a word of praise for the work of the Timmins and its crew.

The accident spoiled what started out to be a thrashing race. The storm had been venting its force on the Sound all morning, and with no sign of a letup at noon, the prospect of a third trial looked very slim. Nevertheless, the Regatta Committee tug loomed up in the rain off Great Captain's Island toward 12 o'clock, and the Resolute came out from her anchorage at Glen Cove under tow of her tender, Cape Cod. The Vanitie, showing not the least inclination to try conclusions in what promised to harden into half a gale, stuck to her moorings until she saw that her rival meant business. Then she towed across.

Sailing of the Race.

The committee signaled a windward and leeward course of four and a half miles to Matinicock Point and return, to be sailed twice, making a short race of eighteen miles. The preliminary whistle blew at 12:45 and the start was signaled at 1 o'clock.

Vanitie, with a seven-foot reef in her mainsail, which reduced her canvas 600 square feet, carried her jib and had her staysail set in stops, but she wore no topsail. Resolute carried her mainsail and single headsail. They jockeyed at short range, and the Herreshoff boat seemed to be standing up a bit better, although there was not much to choose between them.

Both bore down to the line with the wind, Vanitie just a short distance in the lead. In order to start they would have to go about, and Resolute jibed to port as she neared the stake. Charles Francis Adams, 2d, her skipper, was hoping to beat Dennis again over the mark, but this time he was completely outgeneraled.

With just enough seconds to spare, Dennis jibed and then sent his boat spinning around the buoy with Resolute to leeward. He held Vanitie back for the whistle and shot her over the line twenty-one seconds later.

Adams, unwilling to take the poorer berth, declined to follow, and bore off until his two-minute time limit was almost up. Then he came about and crossed 1 minute and 36 seconds behind Vanitie and just 3 seconds before the two-minute period expired.

It was a beat dead to windward all the way going out. Adams tacked more frequently than Dennis, but try as he would he could not gain an inch on the Cochran boat. If anything, Vanitie appeared to have lengthened out her lead in the first fifteen minutes of sailing. Whether she did or not will never be known.

The two boats will resume hostilities tomorrow, when they sail in a special race under the auspices of the Larchmont Yacht Club.

FORGET THE PAST, WILSON BIDS SOUTH

Tells Civil War Veterans at Arlington Unveiling to Look to the Future.

DOWNPOUR HALTS SPEECH

President and Daughters Drenched on Homeward Trip—Dash for Autos and Trolleys.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—A heavy thunderstorm broke over Arlington National Cemetery late today while President Wilson was addressing a great crowd gathered for the unveiling of the monument erected there to the Confederate dead. Torrents of wind-driven rain drenched the Blue and Gray veterans and women and children before they could seek shelter, and then there was a wild dash for automobiles and trolley cars. The President was enthusiastically received.

"I assure you that I am profoundly aware of the solemn significance of the thing that has now taken place," he said. "The Daughters of the Confederacy have presented a memorial of their dead to the Government of the United States. I hope that you have noted the history of the conception of this idea. It was proposed by a President of the United States who had himself been a distinguished officer in the Union Army. It was authorized by an act of Congress of the United States. The cornerstone of the monument was laid by a President of the United States, elevated to his position by the votes of the party which had chiefly prided itself upon sustaining the war for the Union. And now it has fallen to my lot to accept, in the name of the great Government which I am privileged for the time to represent, this emblem of a reunited people.

"I am not so much happy as proud to participate in this capacity on such an occasion; proud that I should represent such a people. Am I mistaken, ladies and gentlemen, in supposing that nothing of this sort could have occurred in anything but a democracy? The people of a democracy are not related to their rulers as subjects are related to a Government. They are themselves the sovereign authority, and as they are neighbors of each other, quickened by the same passions and moved by the same motives, they can understand each other. They are shot through with some of the deepest and profoundest instincts of human sympathy. They choose their Governments. They consult their rulers. They live their own life and they will not have that life disturbed and discolored by fraternal misunderstandings.

"This chapter in the history of the United States is now closed, and I can bid you turn with me your faces to the future, quickened by the memories of the past, but with nothing to do with the contests of the past, knowing, as we have shed our blood upon opposite sides, we now face and admire one another. The generosity of our judgment was made up soon after this great struggle was over, when men came and sat together again in the Congress and united in all the efforts of peace and of government, and our solemn duty is to see that each one of us is in his own consciousness and in his own conduct a replica of this great reunited people. It is our duty and our privilege to be like the country we represent, and speaking no word of malice, no word of criticism even, standing shoulder to shoulder to lift the burdens of mankind in the future and show the paths of freedom to all the world."

The President cut short his speech as the rising wind and darkening skies announced the storm's coming and hurried to his car with his two daughters, Mrs. McAdoo and Mrs. Sayre. They were inside before the rain came, but the machine's top afforded poor protection against the fury of the elements, and the party was thoroughly drenched before the seven-mile drive from the Virginia hills back to Washington was over. Roads were strewn with branches and along the route many automobiles were wrecked. The President's machine made the homeward trip safely.

EMPRESS WIRELESS HAD ONLY 8 MINUTES

In That Time the Operator Was Able to Summon Two Boats.

PREVENTED GREATER LOSS

Rescued, Ferguson Broke Into Wireless Room of Lady Evelyn and Sent Details of Disaster.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, June 4.—Ronald Ferguson, wireless operator of the Empress of Ireland, through whose efforts the Lady Evelyn and the Eureka were brought to the rescue of the passengers of the sinking ship, broke today the strict silence which he has maintained since the disaster. Ferguson was carried down with the ship, and swam about until almost exhausted before being rescued. In his statement to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent he said:

"Between the time of the collision and the time that the dynamos went out of commission we had only eight minutes, and in that time we were able to summon two boats. My cabin was on the top deck, and immediately after the shock I saw lights passing. I ran to the wireless room and called to stations: 'Stand by for distress signals; have struck something.'

"Then the chief officer told me to call 'S O S,' so I sent out the message: 'S O S. Have struck something; sinking fast; send help.'

"The station at Father Point replied immediately, asking where we were. I replied we were twenty miles past Rimouski, and I was trying to confirm this in answer to a request from Father Point when the power was cut off. The water had got into the stokehold, cut off the steam, and put the dynamos out of commission.

"Before, however, the apparatus was useless I got from Father Point the following message:

"'O. K. Am sending out Eureka and Lady Evelyn to your assistance.'"

On being rescued and taken to the Storstad, Ferguson immediately made his way to the Lady Evelyn, which had wireless apparatus on board but no operator. The room was locked, but he broke a window, climbed through, geared up the apparatus with Father Point, and gave a brief story of the wreck, asking for clothes, supplies, and a train to be sent to Rimouski wharf.

He said in closing: "I do not think it has been realized what a part wireless played in the affair. Only eight minutes was I able to work, but without that the only boats available for the passengers would have been those on the starboard side of the Empress, and it is not likely that more than forty or fifty would have been saved.

It is now announced authoritatively that the bullion in the strong room of the Empress, which was situated amidships on the upper deck, is worth nearly $2,000,000, and is all in silver bars. Offers were made by private parties yesterday to the divers on board the British cruiser Essex of large sums if they would descend and explore the Empress. Of course, the offer was refused.

The inquest begun at Rimouski last Saturday will be resumed next Saturday, but it is not expected that many witnesses will be heard, the most important being reserved for the special inquiry which will begin after the arrival of Lord Mersey.

HONORS FOR EMPRESS DEAD.

Special to The New York Times.

QUEBEC, June 4.—The grey old streets of this ancient city were lined this morning by thousands who waited for the passing of the funeral of the twelve victims of the Empress of Ireland disaster who this morning were laid at rest. The people of Quebec stood with bared heads as the great cortège wound slowly through the city after services at St. Patrick's Church and the Anglican Cathedral.

First came the clergy who had charge of the services. They were followed by detachments of the city police in dress uniforms, with Chief Trudell, and the Canadian Pacific Railway police who have been on duty at the morgue, under Sergt. Bain. Then followed the military band, with drums crepe-covered, playing funeral airs. Bluejackets carrying huge wreaths and crosses led the long line of hearses with their guards of honor, soldiers from the garrison on one side and bluejackets on the other.

There followed one of the saddest figures of the entire procession, Capt. Kendall, his face set and stern, but haggard and pale with grief. With him was Capt. Walsh, Marine Superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, personally representing Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. Then followed Dr. Grant, the ship's doctor, whose work saved many lives, other officers and survivors of the crew, men who had known those who were lost. The Canadian Pacific Railway was represented by William Stitt, general passenger agent; Capt. Staunton, J. M. Gibbon, William Baltaynine, A. J. Blasdell, William Webber, G. J. P. Moore, A. O. Seymour, R. McCormick, A. R. Kennedy, J. O. Apps, C. H. Olsen, J. McKenna, T. Gibbons and many others from the marine department.

His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, was represented by his aid, Capt. Bulkeley, who marched with the officers from the garrison and from the cruiser Essex, all of whom came ashore. The Dominion Government was present in the persons of the harbor commissioners and the officers and men of the Marine and Fisheries Department. With them was Capt. Murray, the harbor master and former captain of the lost vessel.

The funeral took place this afternoon of Sir Henry Seton-Karr, one of the victims of the Empress of Ireland disaster. It is said that Sir Henry left instruction with Lady Seton-Karr that should he die on any of his frequent trips about the world his body should be interred where he died and should not be conveyed to England. In consequence of this the interment took place today at the Mount Herman Cemetery, after a service in the Anglican Cathedral. Dean Williams officiated.

The funeral was private, only A. E. Howard, of London; August Goebel, Jr., of Detroit; Conrad M. Brown, of Haileybury, friends of the deceased, and J. O. Apps, of Montreal, representing Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, being present.

CARDEN THANKS HUERTA.

OSBORN'S ADVISERS ANTI-TAMMANY MEN

State Chairman Ignores C. F. Murphy in Naming Executive Committee.

HIS ENEMIES ON THE LIST

County Clerk Schneider and Corporation Counsel Polk Among the Appointees.

William Church Osborn, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, has appointed a large Executive Committee, whose function will be, Mr. Osborn said yesterday, to help him umpire the Democratic direct primaries this Fall.

When the names of Executive Committee members became public last night it was found that Chairman Osborn had given scant recognition to Tammany Hall and the group of Democratic leaders up-State who in recent years have succeeded in passing themselves off as the "organization." The committee list bristles with the names of men with whom militant opposition and denunciation of Tammany Hall has been a favorite indoor sport for years.

Conspicuous on the list of committee members is the name of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, who started an insurgent movement against Tammany in 1911, when, as a member of the Senate, he led the successful revolt against Tammany Leader Murphy's attempt to have William F. Sheehan elected United States Senator. Among other names on the list that will give Tammany and the Democratic bosses pain are those of Montgomery Hare, County Clerk William F. Schneider, and Alexander Konta of this city, all of whom are actively identified at the present moment with organizations which have entered the field to overthrow Tammany Leader Murphy. From Brooklyn Mr. Osborn has appointed a notorious bunch of boss baiters, among whom is Alonzo G. McLaughlin, who led a fight on the Tammany annex in Kings last Fall. From the Bronx was named former Borough President Cyrus C. Miller, who was elected in 1909 on the anti-Tammany ticket.

Of men who were active in behalf of President Wilson both in his pre-convention campaign and after his nomination, there will be a goodly number on the new Executive Committee. John S. De Saulles and J. R. Truesdale were at the head of the College Men's Wilson League during the national campaign. Augustus Thomas, the playwright, is another Wilson man who will sit on the Executive Committee. Frank L. Polk, whom Mayor Mitchell appointed Corporation Counsel, is another member.

Here is the full list of Executive Committee members:

Mayor Louis P. Fuhrman of Buffalo, ex-Senator George P. Burd, W. B. Hoyt, Louis Desbecker and Thomas Lockwood of Erie, Thomas E. Spratt of Jefferson, Louis M. Antisdale of Monroe, Arthur Downey of Oswego, Henry Bacon of Orange, E. H. Tichener of Broome, Paul Nichols of Delaware, Thomas W. Meachem of Onondaga, Clarence E. Mallory of Tioga, James Fenimore Cooper of Albany, ex-Gov. John A. Dix of Washington, Franklin D. Roosevelt of Dutchess, Seymour Van Santvoord of Rensselaer; Augustus Thomas, William A. Rand, and F. H. Allen of Westchester; Charles Horrman of Richmond; John S. De Saulles, Jacob Katz, Martin W. Littleton, Frank Patterson, Frederic R. Coudert, William F. Schneider, Montgomery Hare, Frank L. Polk, Julius Stevens Ullman, Lieut. Gov. Robert F. Wagner, Alexander Konta, and J. R. Truesdale of New York; Charles E. Treman of Tompkins, William Temple Emmet of Columbia, G. M. Carnochan of Rockland; Charles A. Boody, Julian P. Fairchild, Congressman Herman A. Metz, Edward M. Bassett, Edward Lazansky, William N. Dykman, Congressman John J. Fitzgerald, Nathan S. Jonas, and Alonzo G. McLaughlin of Kings; Cyrus C. Miller of Bronx.

The names of most of the members have appeared on the roster of anti-Tammany organizations. The few out-and-out organization men include Lieut. Gov. Wagner, Frank Patterson, Congressman Metz, Public Service Commissioner Emmet, Congressman Fitzgerald, ex-Secretary of State Lazansky, and ex-Gov. Dix.

Chairman Osborn yesterday sent out his call for the prospective Democratic conference at the Hotel Knickerbocker. This is scheduled to be a two-day affair, beginning on June 18 and ending on June 19. It was intimated yesterday that it might last longer if a clash occurs, as there is every likelihood, when the independent and unterrified Executive Committee begins to pit its views against those of the Democratic State Committee, which is dominated by the old "organization."

"No candidate will be chosen and no slate made," said Chairman Osborn last night. "The meeting was called to settle the problems of party action under the new law—how the platform is to be formulated, how we are to secure proper candidates for the Constitutional Convention, for United States Senate, and for Congress, and how local tickets shall be made in districts with adverse Republican majorities.

"I do not believe that a State convention or a single machine-made ticket will solve the problem. We want a free choice, not a dictated ticket. I have chosen men for the Executive Committee whose records justify the hope that they will hold and express their own views on all questions at issue quite as freely as will the State Committeemen and County Chairmen who also will come in on the conference. I believe that the plans for the platform, the tickets, and the party organization will develop so far at the conference as to insure to the Executive Committee, which has had little to say or do in the past, an important share in the effort to solve the problem imposed by the direct primaries law. I accepted the Chairmanship primarily to aid in securing a fair trial and start for this law."

The Executive Committee, the State Committee, and the County Chairmen have all been invited to the conference. Unlike the Republican conference at the Waldorf, outsiders in the party rank and file will not be admitted. Mr. Osborn said last night that in all probability some of the "elder statesmen" in the Democratic Party, as, for instance, Alton B. Parker, D Cady Herrick, Norman E. Mack, and Chairman William F. McCombs of the Democratic National Committee would be invited.

Mr. Osborn does not regard it as likely that the Democrats will follow the example of the Republicans and hold an unofficial State Convention this Fall. Personally Mr. Osborn believes that all questions of nominations for administrative State offices ought to be settled at the primaries without any interference by the party management. On this point some diversity of opinion exists, however, among Democrats whom Mr. Osborn has talked with recently.

editor of The Brewster Standard, who was Postmaster until a short time ago. He got the prifitable job of printing posters and catalogues of the sale.

When the hearings on admitting the will to probate began in the Town Hall of Cold Spring on Oct. 18, with Surrogate Southard presiding, it became evident shortly that there were two principal contending factions. One side, broadly speaking, consisted of the executors appointed by the will, together with the residuary legatee, the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, and the village and several local institutional legatees.

They were opposed principally by Nathan P. Bushnell, one of the special guardians of the grandnieces, and William H. Hamilton of 150 Broadway, Manhattan, who represented the interests of heirs of maternal cousins of Mrs. Butterfield. As has been said, Attorney Bushnell's clients were specifically barred by Mrs. Butterfield from benefit under the will. Mr. Hamilton's clients, the cousins, have since been declared to have no standing by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, and their case is now under consideration by the Court of Appeals. It is this appeal which is now holding up the estate. Daniel Butterfield, 2d, is the third contestant, alleging undue influence.

After legal wrangling over the admission of the cousins, the many opposing attorneys settled down to the first main contention, the appointment of temporary administrators.

Counsel for Albert Francis Hagar, who had filed the will as Mrs. Butterfield's lawyer, wanted the executors appointed temporary administrators. The executors are Mr. Hagar, David W. Harkness, Dr. Calvin May, and Col. Edward M. L. Ehlers. Lawyers Bushnell and Hamilton joined forces in opposing this, and said outside administrators must be appointed because Mr. Hagar was a beneficiary under the will to the extent of $100,000. They attacked Mr. Hagar at this hearing, alleging that he had unduly influenced Mrs. Butterfield in making the will.

At the second hearing, on Nov. 15, those who argued for the appointment of the executors as temporary administrators received strong support in their contention. One after another these interests spoke for their appointment: The International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., (which receives under the will about $1,000,000, probably more than all the other legatees together); the villages of Cold Spring and Nelsonville, the Association for the Relief of Respectable Aged Indigent Females of New York; and the vestrymen and trustees of the Church of St. Mary's in the Highlands, at Cold Spring.

They all argued that Mr. Hagar had managed Mrs. Butterfield's investments for years and was thoroughly familiar with the vast business of the estate. Mr. Hagar also testified that there were eight wills of Mrs. Butterfield. He said that he and another executor has been named in the wills from the first one, and that all the present executors were named in the last two wills. At this hearing Mr. Hagar was asked questions that recognized him as most familiar with the estate.

Yet the arguments of Lawyers Hamilton and Bushnell prevailed with Surrogate Southard, and he appointed Yale and Berrigan as temporary administrators. After this Lawyer Hamilton took the case of the cousins to the Appellate Division and argued that, in the absence of a decision, the proceedings should be stayed. The attorneys for the executors maintained that the hearings should go on, and the estate be closed, since the cousins could always be represented, and if the Appellate Division gave them a status they would not have lost anything.

The counsel of delay prevailed, however, and the Surrogate ruled that the stay was continued, even after the Appellate Division had ruled against the cousins. The closing of the estate is officially in that position now, further action being halted until the Court of Appeals acts.

There have been several acts tending to close the estate, however. The administrators have sold the contents of Mrs. Butterfield's town house and the leasehold at 616 Fifth Avenue, as well as the contents of "Cragside," which were disposed of yesterday. The temporary administrators have also asked for an order to allow them to renew mortgages and invest in securities. These things involve the handling of commissions.

The lawyers for the contesting cousins and grandnieces opposed in the hearings any attempts to proceed with the proving of the will, although the attorneys for the executors and their allies argued that these matters could proceed without affecting the rights of any one concerned. As yet not even the subscribing witnesses to the will have been allowed to testify.

Surrogate Southard was seen in his office at Cold Spring yesterday by a TIMES reporter, who informed him that complaints had been made that political considerations had ruled more than was thought to be justified. Previously the Surrogate had placed at the reporter's disposal his transcript of the proceedings of the hearings, and professed himself willing to assist in any way.

"There is nothing to it," he said in regard to the statement that politics was concerned in the administration of the estate. "It is true that I have had political relations with some of those men, but I do not know anything about that in connection with the estate. From the viewpoint of some people, I suppose, it is unfortunate that Mr. Yale should have been named as the administrator. Are they sore because they did not get the appointments?

"The administrators had a perfect legal right to do all that has been done. The law allows them to take steps to protect the value of the estate. They got very good prices in all the sales. They tell me there is no one better qualified in the country than the man who conducted the art sales, and the sale of the leasehold fetched a very advantageous sum. All these matters have been done in accordance with orders filed with the County Clerk, and they are ordinary steps.

"The legal steps which have been taken so far toward settling the estate among the heirs are now held up until we get the court's decision. There is no use barring out contestants, in the first place, because they will appeal anyway. As soon as the decision of the court comes, that will decide who has the right to appeal, and we will then go ahead."

At the "Cragside" sale yesterday a few less than 350 items of household goods were sold. They consisted for the most part of furniture, crockery and glassware, and decorative articles. There was a good attendance and lively bidding, in spite of the fact that the rain interfered with the arrangements for the sale.

A pair of andirons went for $40, which was considered a remarkably low price for such good specimens.

It was originally intended that the articles should be displayed on the porch, the bidders being excluded by an improvised fence, but the rain made it necessary to admit the purchasers to the porch and the hall of the house.

There was considerable interest in the sale both in Cold Spring and in neighboring towns. After the sale the trains took away purchasers as far as Peekskill and Poughkeepsie, and the indications were that good weather today would bring out a large crowd for the more valuable articles remaining, among them pictures and bronzes.

BULL MOOSE INSIST THAT COLONEL RUN

Roosevelt Petitions Are Sent to Every Progressive County Chairman.

"DRAFTED," SAYS PERKINS

State Advisory Committee Unanimous Against Any Kind of Fusion This Fall.

After a secret conference of the Advisory Committee of the Progressive State Committee yesterday afternoon it was announced that blank petitions designating Col. Theodore Roosevelt for a place on the Progressive primary ballot as the Progressive candidate for Governor had been sent to every Bull Moose County Chairman in the State. It was announced also that the work of signing up Roosevelt petitions was already in progress in all counties in the western section of the State and that in Erie County the work had already been completed and four times the necessary number of signatures obtained.

The members of the Advisory Committee attending the conference to a man were enthusiastically in favor of the Colonel leading the Progressive fight in this State in the Fall. They were vigorously outspoken against the proposition, put forth in inspired Oyster Bay dispatches just prior to the Colonel's departure for Spain, to give Progressive indorsement to an anti-Barnes Republican candidate for Governor, and against any coalition or working agreement with the Republican organization. The impossibility of running District Attorney Charles S. Whitman as candidate for Governor on the Progressive and Republican tickets both was given emphasis in a statement which was made public after the conference had come to a close.

The statement said:

"One of the objects of the meeting was the detailed consideration of reports received from the County Chairmen throughout the State. The particular topic of conversation was Col. Roosevelt's statement on the eve of sailing for Europe that all right-minded people ought to get together to clean house.

"From many quarters it appears that there is a strong and insistent demand that Col. Roosevelt shall himself be a candidate for Governor, owing to his remarkable experience and great administrative ability, and that he shall head a movement which shall expressly appeal to the independent voters of all parties for the overthrow of the corrupt bipartisan control of the State Government. It was felt that the time had come to end the futile alternation between Republican and Democratic misrule, between Murphy's Tammany and Barnes's Tammany, that the voters see this, and that the call is for a man who is as large as the issue, and who can put government in this State upon the basis of honest intention.

"Col. Roosevelt has expressed himself as averse to becoming a candidate. He has reiterated his refusal to run for Governor. But the demand for him to lead in a clean-up is growing in volume, and it was thought that this demand would exercise a strong appeal to his high sense of duty.

"Any working arrangement or coalition with the Republican machine or the Democratic machine in this State was vigorously repudiated. The reports from all over the State were that the people were demanding a clean-cut issue.

"Chairman Robinson's statement of Tuesday pointing out the defects of Mr. Whitman as a candidate for Governor on any ticket and the impossibility of his candidacy on the Progressive ticket, was approved."

Only five members of the Advisory Committee failed to attend the meeting, which was held behind closed doors, at Progressive State headquarters in Washington Square and lasted three hours and a half. Prior to the conference there had been a smaller gathering at the office of George W. Perkins in the headquarters of the Progressive National Committee in the West Forty-second Street Building.

Those attending the conference yesterday afternoon were George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Progressive National Committee; Theodore Douglas Robinson, Chairman of the Progressive State Committee, and O. B. Phillips of Rockland, Vice Chairman of the committee; Chauncey J. Hamlin of Erie, ex-Senator Frederick M. Davenport of Oneida, Horace S. Wilkinson of Onondaga, Regis H. Post, ex-Judge Virgil K. Kellogg of Jefferson, Hamilton Fish, Jr., of Putnam, Henry L. Stoddard and Bainbridge Colby of New York, Charles S. Aronstam of Kings, Walter A. Johnson of Westchester, Hugh Abbott of St. Lawrence, Beveridge C. Dunlop of Rockland, Earle S. Warren of Ontario, Arthur N. Gibb of Tompkins, and Michael H. Schapp, Progressive leader in the Assembly.

From the statement made public at the close of the conference the inference was widely drawn that Col. Roosevelt had intimated to some of his political associates that despite his repeated assertions that he would not become a candidate for Governor this Fall, his mind was not absolutely made up in the matter.

Up to the present time nearly all the influential Bull Moose leaders in other States have been dead set against the Colonel becoming a candidate. This is on the ground that he could do more good by taking the stump for Progressive candidates in other localities for the United States Senate, the House of Representatives, and for the local tickets in States where the Progressives have a chance of winning. It was the pressure brought to bear by these leaders through George W. Perkins, who is in constant touch with them all, that is said to have decided the Colonel to keep out of the fight as a candidate in this State.

Recently, however, there has been a change of sentiment among Bull Moose chieftains in other parts of the country. It was said yesterday that the new trend is most pronouncedly in favor of making New York State the centre of the Progressive fight this year. This would necessitate the Colonel's candidacy, and it was thought yesterday that, as the Colonel was guided, before, by the suggestions of leaders in other States who are viewing the situation from the national aspect, so he might be influenced on his return by the apparent change in sentiment among these leaders when to it is added the overwhelming expression of sentiment by the Bull Moose rank and file in this State—an outlet for which it is planned to afford through the petitions.

Even Mr. Perkins, who has been strongly in favor of "saving the Colonel for 1916," showed signs of weakening after yesterday's conference.

"Perkins is on the fence," ran in jubilant whispers among the assembled Bull Moose leaders as they emerged from the room of State Chairman Robinson, where the conference was held.

"It looks as though the Colonel would be drafted for the war," said Mr. Perkins with a somewhat disconsolate air, as he came out.

DENIES MELLEN SHIELDED MORGAN

yard said he did not attach much importance to the matter, but insisted that it would be a dangerous thing to do.

"I was satisfied," said Mr. Ledyard, "that the record of an error would not undo Billard's profits, and it did not seem so important to me."

"Now, that is all I know of the Billard matter," declared the witness.

The conversation that took place when Mr. Ledyard took the stand was significant of the views of the Interstate Commerce Commission as to the matter of Immunity.

"Mr. Commissioner, shall I be sworn now?" asked Mr. Ledyard as he stepped up to the witness chair.

"No," said Commissioner McChord gruffly.

"I am here, sir," said Mr. Ledyard, "in response to the permission accorded me by the commission to make a statement of my knowledge concerning the matters which have been under inquiry in this investigation. I am willing, sir, to be sworn, or I am willing, as the commission shall direct, to make a statement without being sworn."

Commissioner McChord: "Well, we had some correspondence with you on that subject, and it is in the record."

Mr. Ledyard: "About appearing, but not about being sworn, sir. I only want to say this, that it makes no difference to me whether I am sworn or not. I can assure you that my testimony will be the same whether I take an oath to it or not."

Commissioner McChord: "We are quite sure of that."

"My honor is as dear to me as anything," Mr. Ledyard went on. "There have been certain matters brought out in the testimony of Mr. Mellen which I find myself obliged to contradict and to tell you about. They occurred prior to my becoming a Director of the New Haven Railroad, and before I had any relations of any kind with that road; but as Mr. Mellen brought my name into it, and has stated erroneously the nature of a certain transaction that I had with him on behalf of one of my clients, I shall first clear that matter up.

"That relates to the negotiations which took place in the Spring of 1907 in relation to the sale by certain owners of Boston & Maine stock, of that stock to the New Haven interests.

American Express Company Deal.

"I was at that time and for many years have been a Director of the Boston & Maine Railroad. I was not and never had been a Director of nor had I ever occupied any relations of any kind with the New Haven Railroad. I was a representative and had been for many years on the Boston & Maine Road of the largest holding of the Boston & Maine stock, which was owned by clients of mine, the American Express Company.

"In 1907 Mr. Lane of Lee, Higginson & Co. came into my office in New York and asked me if the American Express Company would desire to sell its Boston & Maine stock. That is the first intimation of any one wanting to buy it at that time, and I asked him who wanted to buy it, and he said Mr. Mellen wanted it for the New Haven Road. I told him that I would ask the American Express people about it. I found that the Board of Directors of the American Express Company did desire to sell its stock, because under the laws of Massachusetts, as they existed then, the stock was becoming rapidly an unprofitable and undesirable one for them. In the course of those negotiations I came in contact with Mr. Mellen.

"The Boston & Maine express business was then, and for a great many years before I had anything to do with the Boston & Maine, performed by the American Express Company. When I went into the Boston & Maine board, in the early nineties, to represent express company holdings in the stock, I told the Board of Directors I was there to represent the American Express Company as a stockholder. 'I am here,' I said, 'to represent the express company as a stockholder. I am not here to promote their interests or to have anything to do with their interests in having any business relation with this road.' I steadfastly adhered to that policy as long as I was in the Boston & Maine Railroad.

"By the way, I might add that there was a contract between the express company and the Boston & Maine Railroad, made in 1894, for, I think, ten years, and when that came up before the Executive Committee of the Boston & Maine and the Board of Directors of the Boston & Maine, I had nothing to do with it. I never discussed it with the officials of the express company, nor with those of the railroad company. I took no action about it. I retired from the Executive Committee when it came up for discussion. I retired from the board and left the room, when it came up to be discussed there. Anybody that was in the Boston & Maine Railroad, on the Board of Directors, during the time I was there, will, I am confident, if he is an honest man, state that it was perfectly well known in that board that I never had anything to do, and never did have anything to do, with any contractual relations between those companies.

"The contract of 1894, I think, was for ten years, and in 1904 another contract was made between the American Express Company and the Boston & Maine Railroad. I had nothing more to do with that one than I had to do with the previous one; and that contract of 1904 was the one which was in force between the American Express Company and the Boston & Maine Railroad at the time I met Mr. Mellen in these negotiations for the purchase from the American Express Company of its Boston & Maine stock by the New Haven Railroad.

Negotiations with the New Haven.

"In the course of those negotiations the terms became fixed. Mr. Mellen either directly or through Mr. Lane—I think Mr. Lane was the one who first named the amount—had offered to us one share of New Haven stock for a share of Boston & Maine stock which we might sell. We insisted that the same opportunity for sale be given to all Boston & Maine stockholders, and Mr. Mellen was agreeable to that.

"Now, I was anxious to promote the interests of the express company, or extend its business by getting what they had never had, getting for them the business of the New Haven Railroad, not the Boston & Maine. The New Haven Road would be new business for us. That was then occupied by the Adams Express Company. Mr. Fargo, the President of the American Express Company, asked me if I could not get Mr. Mellen to agree that on the expiration of the existing contract between the New Haven Railroad and the Adams Express Company the American Express Company should take the place of the Adams Express Company. The single question between Mr. Mellen and myself was: 'Will you now agree with the American Express Company that at the expiration of the Adams Express Company contract the American Express Company shall have the New Haven Road on whatever fair contractual terms may be arranged?'

"That is to say, we were not attempting to barter nor determine what per cent. the American Express Company should pay the Adams Express Company if it should get in before the expiration of the Adams contract; but what I want to impress upon the Commissioner is that the thing we were after was the New Haven Railroad, and not the Boston & Maine Railroad. We had the Boston & Maine contract already.

"I am very particular in putting this in clearly, because Mr. Mellen has testified that what I was after was the contract for the Boston & Maine Railroad, the American Express Company to get its Boston & Maine contract extended; that he thought the terms the Boston & Maine was receiving from the American Express Company were inadequate and that I wanted to get the Boston & Maine contract extended for the American Express Company before the New Haven Railroad came into power, for fear that Mr. Mellen might object to the terms of that contract.

"There is not a word of truth in any part of that testimony. If Mr. Mellen intended to testify to that effect he has testified to what is not true. The only thing I was after was the business of the New Haven Railroad.

I took no part in procuring any extension. I explained the subject to Mr. Fargo. I took no part in procuring any extension of the contract to be made. I left it to be taken up by the express officials with the railroad officials. It was taken up. It was extended, or the existing contract annulled, and a longer one made. It was extended to lap over the extension of the Adams contract with the New Haven Railroad. I took no part in it. I did not act in the Executive Committee on it. I did not act in the Board of Directors on it. I have not seen the records of the Boston & Maine Railroad, but you will find there that I desired to be excused from voting because I was counsel for the American Express Company.

Contract's Cost to the B. & M.

"It has been stated here that contract which the American Express Company had with the Boston & Maine Railroad—Gov. Folk said that again and again to one of the witnesses here, asking him if it did not cost the Boston & Maine Railroad $700,000 a year over and above what a proper contract or an adequate one would have produced. That was taken from the report of the New Hampshire Railroad Commission. The New Hampshire Railroad Commission had some investigation of the Boston & Maine Railroad and the New Haven Railroad. I did not know of the existence of any such inquiry, and it made a very drastic report about that extension of the American Express Company contract with the Boston & Maine Railroad in 1907. I did say that it cost the road $700,000 a year.

"The subject, however, as I afterward ascertained, had never been raised at the hearing before that commission, and there is in this record today—I think in the hearing before Mr. Commissioner Prouty in the early part of this investigation—a letter from Mr. Tuttle that I would refer you to on that subject, in which he takes the entire responsibility for the terms of that contract. They reached the $700,000 a year by comparing 35 per cent. of its gross receipts paid by the American Express Company to the Boston & Maine Railroad with what the commission said was a normal rate paid by the express companies to railroad companies—55 per cent. of their gross receipts. That is not the normal rate paid by express companies and never has been.

"The New Haven Railroad Company said that a contract on a 55 per cent. basis would have been a normal one. At that time the American Express Company was paying the New York Central Lines only 45 per cent., and making very little out of that, and I might say that it was just after that incident that the New York Central Lines forced the American Express Company up to a 50 per cent. basis from a 45 per cent. basis. They were told that there was no profit in that for the express business. 'Well,' they said, 'keep an account and see what happens.' But they had to go up to the 50 per cent. basis just the same.

"The American Express Company kept an account of their business on the New York Central Lines under regulations agreed upon with the railroad authorities, and under their supervision, and afterward under the auditor of the controller's department of the railroad company, and they kept it up under that new contract at 50 per cent. until such time as the gross receipts of the American Express Company on the New York Central Lines had amounted to a total of just $42,000,000. I have forgotten what the length of time was, two or three years, or whatever it was, up until the time that their gross receipts were $42,000,000 those accounts were kept.

Net Profit Only About $200,000.

"Well, of the 50 per cent. out of the $42,000,000, $21,000,000 went to the New York Central Railroad. That left £21,000,000, and out of that the actual operating profit to the American Express Company was about $200,000. So that that 50 per cent. contract, just after this 1907 transaction on lines like the New York Central lines, which are infinitely more profitable than Boston & Maine country lines, resulted in a gross earning of the express company of $42,000,000 and a net profit, operating profit, to the express company of about $200,000. And all of that profit, I want to say, was west of Buffalo. There was a deficit east of Buffalo.

"I should say now that if the American Express Company, at any time in the past—I do not mean now that the parcel post has come in, but in normal times in the past—had undertaken to pay the Boston & Maine Railroad anything like 45 per cent., let alone 55 per cent., as the New Hampshire Commission suggested, of its gross receipts, it would, in my judgment, have come out with an actual operating loss.

"I also want to say one thing about the express business here of the Adams Express Company, as a matter of sequence. Some time after the purchase of the Boston & Maine stock by the New Haven Railroad or the navigation company, I became a Director of the New Haven Railroad, and after I had been some time a Director of the New Haven Railroad, Mr. Mellen asked me to come to see him one day, and I went.

"He said: 'Mr. Ledyard, will the American Express take the Adams business on the New Haven Railroad?'

"I said: 'What do you mean?'

"He said: 'I want to turn the Adams off the New Haven Railroad, and I would like to know whether the American Express will take that contract up?'

"I said: 'It will not.'

"He said, 'Why.' I said: 'It will not, because I am a Director of the New Haven Railroad. The Adams Express Company is their competitor. It has a contract with you. You are not pleased with the working of that contract. Do you think that I will let you, while I am a Director of your company, turn our competitor off, and have it said that my influence had resulted in your breach of contract with them and the putting of my contract on?' I said, 'Never. If you have any difficulties with the Adams Express Company, as long as this present contract of yours runs with it, you will settle those difficulties, Mr. Mellen. You can never put the American Express Company on this road as long as I am a Director here and as long as the Adams has an unexpired contract here.'

"I then took up with some of the stockholders of the Boston & Maine Railroad the offer of the New Haven to purchase our individual shares. The person with whom I was most in conference and consultation respecting the desire of the New Haven to purchase our holdings in the Boston & Maine stock was Mr. Richard Olney, formerly Secretary of State and Attorney General, who had been for many years a close friend of mine. He had a good many interests in the Boston & Maine stock as trustee and otherwise, and we had discussed the taking of the control of the New Haven under the proposition which was made to me by Mr. Mellen.

"Although we were not at all responsible for what the New Haven was doing, we were in the attitude of individual stockholders, and we thought it a wise thing for the New Haven to acquire the Boston & Maine. We thought one road was a natural extension of and complement to the other. The properties were not competitive, or, if competitive at all, in so small a degree as to be negligible and incidental, and we thought it would be a good thing from a freight point of view for New England, for its industries, its commerce, for the people, for the prosperity of New England, that these systems should be operated in unison.

"We also discussed the capacity of the New Haven, through one of its subsidiaries, to acquire this stock, and Mr. Olney was of the opinion that there was nothing in the laws of Massachusetts to prevent the New Haven from acquiring it, and that it had a right to act in that matter under its Connecticut charter.

"I come to speak later of the trolley decision made by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts.

Mr. Ledyard's Many Interests.

"I might say just a word by way of preface before I get on to the next stage, a word of explanation as to myself. I am a lawyer, a member of the bar of New York. I live in the City of New York. I have been for a great many years a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States. I have until lately, when I have been withdrawing from active work in affairs, enjoyed a very large practice of an important character. I have been President of the Bar Association of the City of New York. I have had a good deal of experience in railroad and other corporate matters.

"I have been since 1908, and until lately, Director of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and some of its subsidiary companies. I have been a Director of the New York Central, the Michigan Central, the Lake Shore, and a number of other companies known ordinarily as New York Central lines. I have been for many years a Director of the Northern Pacific, and a member of its Executive Committee. I have been for a good many years a Director of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago, and a member of its Executive Committee.

"I have been a Director of the United States Trust Company of New York, one of our largest and most important trust companies. I was for many years a Director and general counsel of the American Express Company, from which I retired two or three years ago—two years ago, I think.

"I have been a Director and on the Executive Committee of the Atlantic Mutual Company, our largest marine insurance company of New York. I have been a member of a number of others—at all events, I think I have had a fair amount of experience in the management of corporations and in the way of a knowledge of business as done by them and by their Boards of Directors.

"I was elected a member of the Board of Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company in February, 1908. At that time I was ill, and unable to take any active part in affairs. Immediately upon my election I resigned because of the passage or the introduction (I have forgotten which) of an act in the Massachusetts Legislature, which prevented a person being a Director in both the Boston & Maine and the New Haven companies.

"In that Spring of my election I went to Europe ill, and I did not return until September. I think I attended one formal meeting of the Board of Directors before I went to Europe, but I know of nothing done at that meeting which is in question here. So it was in the Autumn of 1908 that I first took any executive participation in New Haven affairs.

"I think it right that it should be understood as to what the situation in the New Haven Road was at that time, in the Autumn of 1908, for I am very sure, Mr. Commissioner, that a very erroneous impression is abroad concerning the so-called policy of expansion on the part of the New Haven Road, the extent to which it has gone, and the time during which it has been continued.

The New Haven's Expansion Policy

"At that time—in the Autumn of 1908, when I took hold here—the New Haven had already acquired the New England Railroad. It had already acquired the Central New England. It had already acquired the Connecticut trolleys, the Rhode Island trolleys and the Massachusetts trolleys, it had already acquired the New York, Westchester & Boston, and the Portchester—stocks and other securities.

"The expenditure on those lines mentioned, in securities and the construction on those properties, of $11,000,000 and something, which has been so much talked about here, had already been made, and an additional expenditure of nearly $2,000,000 upon these same properties had been made.

"They had already acquired their Harlem River and Portchester and were actively engaged in the work of improving that and enlarging its services. They had already acquired the New York, Ontario and Western, and they had acquired practically all the steamship companies that they ever have acquired. Many of these properties had been acquired years back. That was true of the railroad properties; it was true of some of the trolleys; it was true in eminent degree of the Sound lines of steamships.

"As the New Haven from time to time started from a road running from New York along the westerly part of the present line, and acquired one after another the lines of railway running along Long Island Sound to Boston, and then to Cape Cod, as those roads came in by lease or otherwise to the New Haven system it was found that they, each of them, or most of them, had boat lines to New York through the Sound, and those boat lines came in in connection with the onward extension of the New Haven from New York to the East."

Mr. Ledyard then went on to defend the manner in which the New Haven board transacted business. He said that there was always discussion and often dissent and opposition. If a matter was [illegible] opposed it was withdrawn. [illegible] meetings were largely in the nature of conferences [illegible] opposition [illegible] if a [illegible]. The [illegible] of course [illegible] mention [illegible] opposition.

He said that his presence on the board was as a lawyer representing clients who had 51,000 shares of New Haven stock, the largest single holding, and they still held it, or did a week ago, when he made inquiries.

Since he left the New Haven, he said, he had not owned a shart of its stock. He described the method the road had of raising funds by borrowing on notes due in a year, and said it embarrassed the management sorely.

Taking up the Westchester deal, he told how he had come to have a knowledge of that more by representing the road in an adjustment of the Gottshall suit for $2,100,000. He said that the plaintiff was one that the New Haven would not want in its organization if he won his suit and took his judgment in stock in the Westchester, and so he advised a compromise, which was effected by a payment of about $1,100,000.

"Going into the Worcester, Nashua and Rochester deal, Mr. Ledyard said that he did not think the purchase of the road by the Boston & Maine instead of leasing it was bad policy. The Boston & Maine, he said, had been loaded down with leased property at one time, having but thirty miles of capitalized road and over 500 of leased road.

Mellen Admits One Mistake.

Mr. Crim, attorney for Mr. Mellen, made a statement for his client, saying that Mr. Mellen thought he had made some errors in his testimony in regard to Mr. Ledyard's part in the extension of the American Express contract with the Boston & Maine before the New Ha- [illegible] these roads.

Mr. Skinner said he had lost $40,000 a year because of the decline of the New Haven in prosperity, he and his family being among the largest stockholders.

A Suggestion:

Not every hotel advertisement in The New York Times is that of a Summer palace in a fashionable resort. MRS. HEWLETT FINED.

Novelist's Wife Charged with Driving Auto Into May Day Paraders.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 4.—Mrs. Maurice Hewlett, the well-known airwoman and wife of the novelist, was fined at the Marylebone Police Court today for driving an automobile in a manner dangerous to the public. The police alleged that she drove the car into the May Day procession, scattering the paraders in all directions.

After her name and address had been taken it was alleged that she told the police to move the crowd out of the way or she would drive over them. The crowd, incensed, threatened to overturn her car. Mrs. Hewlett said in court that the crowd mobbed her car, mistaking her for a suffragette.

SPANISH RULERS OUR ENVOY'S GUESTS

Ambassador Willard Gives a Luncheon to Them, to Kermit Roosevelt, and Others.

WEDDING PLANS COMPLETED

Room for the Roosevelt Civil Ceremony Fitted Up in the Residence of the Magistrate.

MADRID, June 4.—Col. Joseph E. Willard, the United States Ambassador here, and Mrs. Willard had King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain as their guests at luncheon at the American Embassy today. Kermit Roosevelt and the British and German Ambassadors were also guests.

A brilliant reception followed, which was attended by the members of the Diplomatic Corps and many prominent persons in the social world of the Spanish capital. A Russian ballet was given for the entertainment of the guests.

Because Ambassador Willard desires to observe all the requirements of the Spanish laws in respect to foreign marriages, the Magistrate of the Buenavista District will perform the civil marriage ceremony for Miss Belle Willard and Kermit Roosevelt on June 10. The American Embassy is situated in the Buenavista district, the most aristocratic section of the city.

When the Minister of State learned that the Ambassador desired to observe the Spanish law in this respect he suggested that the Justice should go to the American Embassy. But, as the Embassy is beyond the legal control of the Magistrate, being technically United States territory, a room has been fitted up in the Magistrate's own residence, where the ceremony will take place.

The formal witnesses will doubtless include Eduardo Dato, the Spanish Premier; the Marquis of Lama, the Minister of State; Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador in Paris, and Col. Roosevelt.

The religious services will take place at noon the next day in the chapel of the British Embassy. The chapel is in a pavilion in the Embassy grounds. The Rev. Dr. Samuel N. Watson, pastor of the American Protestant Episcopal Church in Paris, will perform the service, assisted by the Rev. Herbert Brown, chaplain of the British Embassy in Madrid.

The wedding party will proceed from the Ambassador's house to the church in automobiles and gala carriages, among which will probably be one of the Court equipages with a representative of King Alfonso.

The bride's dress will be of ivory satin and tulle, with a court train. She will wear orange blossoms arranged with old lace, and a long veil of tulle and lace. The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Willard, will wear white satin with a tunic of pale blue tulle. The bridesmaids, the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, Miss Katherine Page, Mlle. Gilone le Veneurs de Tillieres, and Miss Virginia Christian, will wear white tulle with tunics. All will wear lace with touches of yellow, and yellow ribbons tied under the chin. They will carry bouquets of yellow orchids.

The wedding breakfast will be served in the American Embassy, and a reception, to which some thousands of persons have been invited, including all the Diplomatic Corps and many officials and members of the highest Spanish nobility, will follow.

ENGLISH AIRMEN DROWNED.

PORTSMOUTH, England, June 4.—Commander Rice and Lieut. Thomas S. Creswell were drowned today when a seaplane in which they were making a flight over Southampton Water plunged into the sea. Creswell was acting as pilot and Rice was a passenger. The seaplane was engaged with several other air craft in manoeuvres.

A torpedo boat rushed to the spot and recovered Creswell's body, which was strapped to the seat, but the body of Rice was not found.

The seaplane was one of the largest in the naval service, and was of the latest model. It had a wing span of 63 feet, carried a 200-horsepower engine, and was equipped with wireless apparatus.

OUR MISSIONARIES MAY BE IN PERIL

Officials Alarmed by the Extension of "White Wolf's" Operations in China.

NOW DEVASTATING KAN-SU

Sets Fire to a Monastery at Cho-Ni in Which Americans Are Believed to Have Been Staying.

PEKING, June 4.—"White Wolf," the brigand who during the past few months has devastated the Provinces of Hu-Pé, Ho-Nan, and Shen-Si, is now looting and burning towns and villages in the Province of Kan-Su.

After eluding the great army of troops sent to capture him by the Chinese Government, he yesterday set fire to the town of Ning-Chow, and his followers today attacked Tao-Chow, in the extreme south of the Province. After pillaging it they burned it to the ground.

The brigands then proceeded to Cho-Ni, where they set fire to the famous monastery of the Tibetan Lamas.

Subsequently a column of regular troops overtook and defeated the bandits, who fled to the ravines of Lily Mountain, 100 miles to the south of Lan-Chow, the capital of the Province, where they are reported to be virtually surrounded by the troops.

Fears were expressed yesterday by the Christian and Missionary Alliance, which has about 100 missionaries stationed in various parts of China, for the safety of several men and women who were known to be in the towns pillaged and burned by the brigand "White Wolf."

At the monastery of the Tibetan Lamas when "White Wolf's" followers set fire to it was a missionary named Kauffman, who came from Missouri. Miss Haupberg of Boone, Iowa; Miss Kennon of Ohio, and J. P. Rommen of Indiana were also believed to have been at the monastery mission.

Other Americans known to have been in missions said to have been destroyed by "White Wolf" are the Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Christie, the Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Ruhl of Philadelphia, the Rev. Mr. Diehl and his wife of Bowling Green, Ohio, and the Rev. Mr. Snyder and his wife of Indiana.

Two British missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. McGillvray, are also in the troubled zone.

TRIAL OF PERUGIA BEGUN.

Italian Says He Stole "Mona Lisa" as an Act of Patriotism.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, June 4.—The trial of Perugia, who stole "La Gioconda" from the Louvre, began in Florence today. The prisoner's face was wreathed in smiles as he underwent the presiding Judge's examination.

He said that when he was employed in the Louvre he studied the history of the grand masterpieces, and, learning that all the celebrated Italian pictures there had been stolen from Italy, he determined to restore at least one of them to its rightful owner, the Italian people.

"Walking in one morning," he said, "I leisurely unhooked 'Mona Lisa,' released her from the massive frame, and then quietly left the building with her under my arm by the selfsame door I entered."

Perugia denied having tried to sell the stolen masterpiece in London and said it was the art dealer Gerri who had made the suggestion that $100,000 could be squeezed out of the Italian Government and the proceeds shared by himself, Gerri, and Commendatore Poggi, director of the State Art Galleries in Florence.

The Commendatore, in giving his evidence, said that at no time had he suggested the sale or hinted at personal remuneration for the transactions conducted by Gerri.

Dr. Amaldi at today's hearing said he had made prolonged and careful observation of Perugia and had become convinced that he was only partly responsible for his actions.

DR. BUTLER FAVORS SHORT STATE BALLOT

Tells Brooklyn Republicans He Would Limit It to Governor and His Lieutenant.

LET GOVERNOR DO THE REST

Urges Care in Selecting Delegates to Constitutional Convention—Stimson Agrees with Him.

Plans for a reform of legislative procedure and the adoption of a short ballot, with only the Governor and Lieutenant Governor elected directly by the people and the administrative officers of the State appointed by the Governor, were outlined last night by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University and by former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson at a meeting of the Young Republican Club in the Imperial, at Fulton Street and Red Hook Lane, Brooklyn. The need of recasting the present State budget system was also emphasized, and a thoroughgoing campaign to awaken the citizenship of the State to the importance of the proposed Constitutional Convention between now and the time of its assembling was announced.

Dr. Butler, introduced by Elmer G. Sammis, President of the club, as "a scholar in politics," said he was not above being called a politician and that he considered himself one.

"Vastly more important than the choice of men to elect into office," he said, "is the matter of carrying out properly the ideals of civic liberty in the coming Constitutional Convention. Men may come and men may go, but a great principle, once forgotten or trodden under foot, is amazingly difficult to replace.

"At the special election just held as to whether there should be a Constitutional Convention, the entire vote from Montauk Point to Buffalo was 35,000 less than the vote cast for Mayor Mitchel in this city alone, or a vote of less than one-sixth the voters of the State. It is necessary between now and the time of the convention to awaken the people of the State from this apathy."

Must Cleanse, Not Destroy.

In framing the amendments to the State fundamental law, Dr. Butler said, care must be taken to avoid bringing into the convention small matters of detail that properly belong to the Legislature and statute law, instead of to the broad principles of constitutional law. To bring such matters into the Constitution would destroy the respect of the people for the Constitution as the instrument of fundamental law.

"As time goes on," he said, "the actual instruments of Government creak a little in their workings and are not so quick as once they were to respond to the popular will. The man with temper and no patience wants to take a hatchet and destroy, and to build up some new and untried system. It can't be done. It is not necessary to set fire to your house in order to clean it.

"One difficulty we labor under at present is the very large number of directly elective officers in the State, ranging from Governor to Coroner. It has been found impossible, under such an arrangement—especially where the various officers happen to be elected by different parties—to get along harmoniously and with efficiency.

"I believe one of the greatest reforms we could bring about in our next Constitutional Convention would be to provide for what is known as the short ballot, having only the Governor and Lieutenant Governor elected, and appointed officers designated by these as heads of the various departments of government, serving under the Governor as associates and colleagues and subject to him in carrying out his declared policies. I feel that this would go far toward making the Government responsive to the people who select it.

Suggests Legislative Reforms.

"In my judgment," he continued, "we should give serious attention, too, to the reform of legislative procedure, which is now a primary reason of the discontent of the average man. After two hundred years we have found that the complete separation of executive and legislative branches in our government works to the disadvantage of both and to the inefficiency of the administration of the State's business. We find the Governor, an official chosen by the entire State, unable to limit or influence or reach a legislative power chosen at the same time with him, especially if he happens to be elected by a different party.

"There would be an enormous gain if we made the heads of the various departments of the executive branch of the Government men entitled to sit with the legislative branch and to assist it with their advice or with any answers they could make to questions directed in open session against the policies of their departments. That would bring the matter at once into the limelight and lead to enlightened and constructive criticism, and a more efficient working between the executive and legislative branches of the Government. We must do something like this, or otherwise our Legislatures will soon break down. Unless we do, there will be more and more appointive commissions and less and less constructive criticism on the part of our Legislature.

"We should provide also for the most modern type of financial administration in the State Government, including the State budget. At present there is no adjustment between expenditures and revenue, and no attempt to bring about one. We must revise and reform our financial administration."

In closing, Dr. Butler urged the adoption of the home rule principle for great cities, although, he added, the line of demarcation between the sovereignty of the municipalities and that of the State was often hard to fix.

The Cause of Inefficiency.

Mr. Stimson, indorsing the views expressed by Dr. Butler, said that the Constitutional Convention was peculiarly the "job" of the Republican Party by historical inheritance.

"Our party always believed in the efficiency of government," he said. "The wide separation between the executive and legislative branches that is now working for such inefficiency was the direct result of Thomas Jefferson's fear of giving the executive too much power. It is necessary for us to bring about in this State a government that shall be responsive to the will of the people, and to obviate those elements that have made it less responsive.

"Under the present system, we find a Governor elected to carry out certain declared principles utterly without influence to carry them out, and the platform principles often pocketed by some committee of the Legislature."

The proposed budget reform, he said, far from keeping the Legislature from being watchful of the finances of the State, would make it more watchful. He quoted one authority to this effect:

"If Legislatures themselves are prevented from putting their own hands in the till, then they will keep a stricter watch on those who do."

QUESTION COUSINS' BIRTH.

Halsey Will Fight Hinges on Legitimacy of Son's Children.

Testimony was taken yesterday in Newark before ex-Gov. Fort, as Special Master in Chancery, to determine the legitimacy of the children of John R. Halsey of Hoboken, N. J. The suit involves the distribution of $100,000 left by the late Isaac Halsey, who died in Madison, N. J., in December, 1893.

The proceedings were instituted by John H. Bonsall of Morristown, trustee of the Halsey estate. This was left to the testator's sons, Edmund Halsey and John R. Halsey, or their children. Both sons of Isaac Halsey are dead, and the children of Edmund Halsey are contesting the rights of the children of John R. Halsey on the ground of illegitimacy.

It was brought out in the testimony taken before Mr. Fort that John R. Halsey, who was a graduate of West Point, ran away and married Sarah Elizabeth Ferris, who was a servant in the Halsey home.

After his marriage John R. lived in Hoboken under the name of Henry Clayton and worked as a longshoreman nearly all his life. The children were all baptized under the name of Clayton. After Halsey's death, in 1902, his family assumed the family name without resorting to legal proceedings.

H. L. ANSTEY A BANKRUPT.

Bond Broker's Liabilities Are $171,588 and Assets $268.

Henry Lee Anstey, a bond broker of 101 Broadway, who lives in Oyster Bay, yesterday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy before Charles A. Tipling, referee in bankruptcy, in Long Island City. Mr. Anstey places his liabilities at $171,588, of which $145,053 is unsecured. His assets are placed at $268. The only secured creditor is the firm of A. O. Brown & Co. of 61 Broadway, which is now in bankruptcy, with C. E. Littlefield as receiver. The amount due this firm is $27,534, which is secured by an assignment from Mrs. Anstey of sixty acres of land at Glen Head, L. I., valued at $48,000.

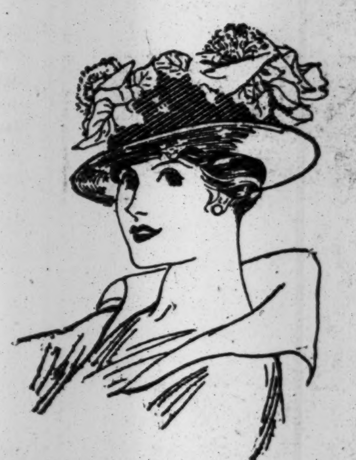
Another Millinery Triumph for GIMBELS!



Several weeks ago Black Velvet Hats made their début in Paris. Of course, everyone knew that they were the forerunners of Autumn styles. And many New York milliners said what a glorious surprise for America in July! But as we consider that every new fashion of Paris should be immediately introduced in America we did not wait one minute to reproduce these hats. So in this instance, as in many others, we presented the new mode of Paris to New York—and that is why all the fashionable women are now talking about these

HARD COAL NO SMOKE COMFORT

MARCONI DEVICE FOR WIRELESS FOG GUN

New Invention, It Is Thought, May Revolutionize Signaling on Land and Sea.

OBVIATES NEED OF CABLE

Guns Tested by Clyde Lighthouse Trust May Be Fired from Shore and Are Unattended for Months.

A wireless electric system for the control of signals at sea, which it is hoped will prevent accidents in fogs such as the wreck of the Empress of Ireland, was described in a communication received yesterday at the office of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America from the Technical Committee of the Marconi Company in England, which has just completed its experiments and obtained patents on the invention. The device will control also safety signals in mines, on railway trains, for blasting purposes, alarm signals between vessels, and call signals for wireless telephones. The report says:

> Now that the dots and dashes of the Morse code can be transmitted with regularity over thousands of miles, it would seem only reasonable to suppose that with the help of suitable relays, valves could be turned on and off, helms moved to port or starboard, machinery checked and started, alarms run—in fact, a whole number of useful operations could be controlled by the electric waves used in wireless telegraphy. Hitherto of the many inventions along these lines not one has come to any good result.
> Now, however, the Marconi Company has an apparatus for distant control which has been tested under the most adverse conditions possible: for from the very start it has been combined with an automatic fog gun erected on an isolated beacon in mid-sea, and has not only been left unattended for weeks on end, but has all this time been exposed to all weathers and to the interference from strong signals from ships passing close by.

There are at present two such fog guns fitted with the Marconi control—both belonging to the Clyde Lighthouse Trust. These guns, when once started, will continue to fire at intervals of about twenty seconds until the supply of acetylene gas is exhausted, which would take two or three weeks. The function of the wireless control is to enable the coast guard station to turn "on" and "off" the gun as desired, by this means prolonging the time for which the gun may be left without attention for from three to four months, according to the period of foggy weather experienced.

It is impossible, according to the report, to rely on sending a boat to regulate the gas supply, since in many weathers the beacon is unapproachable. The only alternative to wireless would be a cable, but not only would this mean a large expense in laying and maintaining the cable, but also a cable would be liable to break at a critical moment.

The apparatus which the Marconi engineers say they have perfected is applied to a Stevenson-Moyes acetylene gun. It contains a gas-admission valve introduced between the gas generator and the gun itself. This needle valve is controlled by two electro-magnets, so arranged that when the first magnet is energized the valve opens wide and allows the gas to pass freely. When the second magnet is energized the valve shuts firmly against a pressure of 20 pounds a square inch—a pressure considerably in excess of the maximum used in the acetylene gun.

Next to the valve is a water tight metal box containing the wireless receiving gear. Connection to the receiving aerial is made through an insulator; the received signals pass through the receiving apparatus to earth. A special form of detector is used which actuates a special relay which is so constructed that, although very sensitive, it has a large movement and is therefore capable of keeping in adjustment under all kinds of temperature conditions. This end is further assured by the provision of counterbalancing springs.

Two synchronizers are an essential part of the apparatus, and make it immune from the two great troubles of wireless—atmospherics and interference from powerful signals from passing ships. It enables the same apparatus to perform two distinct functions—to turn "on" and "off" the gun. One of these synchronizers is connected to one of the two electro-magnets of the gas valve, so that when one synchronizer is actuated by the relay, it energizes one magnet and opens the valve, which remains fully open until the second synchronizer, actuated by the same relay, energizes the second magnet and closes the valve.

The second synchronizer is also in an air-tight case containing a clockwork mechanism which runs for four months with one winding. This clockwork performs a useful function every ten minutes; it strikes a sharp blow with a hammer, which gives the relay contacts a shake, gets rid of any stickiness, either in the pivots or at the contacts themselves, which might develop after several months, and at the same time causes a momentary current to flow through the detector.

A battery of dry cells provides the driving power for the whole receiving apparatus. A small four-fold aerial, supported from a short mast about 14 feet high, completes the receiving apparatus.

The transmitting apparatus, installed on shore and in charge of the coast guards, is very simple. For short distances, such as four-mile communication, it consists of a small transformer, a transmitting jigger and condenser, and the transmitting synchronizers corresponding to those of the receiving set. For greater distances the same apparatus will serve if a greater aerial height is available; failing this, a dynamo is used to provide the additional power.

"Such is the Marconi control apparatus as applied to fog signals at sea," the committee says. "On all sides one can see opportunities for the employment of this apparatus in other fields with very great utility; fields, moreover, which present only a fraction of the difficulties already surmounted in connection with these exposed and unattended fog guns."

Dwarf Burglar to the Island.

George Coppinger, 64 years old, who was convicted of unlawful entry before Judge Wadhams in General Sessions, told the court yesterday when he came up for sentence that in the twenty-three years he had spent in prison he had never been in the penitentiary. He begged that he be sent to the penitentiary for a change. Judge Wadhams decided that the circumstances in the case were extenuating and sentenced him to the penitentiary. Coppinger cut his way into 629 Sixth Avenue several weeks ago and pleaded guilty to unlawful entry, which is a misdemeanor. He is a dwarf.

Aquitania, Cunard Line's Biggest Ship, and Her Captain.

The new Cunard Liner "Aquitania" passing Holyhead, England, on her trial trip at a speed of 25 knots.

AQUITANIA TO DOCK AT 9 THIS MORNING

Capt. Turner Reports 602 Knots Made in the Day Ended at Noon Yesterday.

FASTEST OF THE BIG SHIPS

Has Averaged More Than 23 Knots Throughout the Trip—A Sketch of Her Commander.

According to a wireless report received las tnight from Capt. Turner, the new Cunarder Aquitania continues to make excellent time. She again achieved 602 knots for the twenty-four hours ended at noon yesterday, an average of 24.24 knots.

This should bring her to the Ambrose Channel Lightship by 4 o'clock this morning, and five hours later to her pier at the foot of West Thirteenth Street.

Her runs up to noon yesterday from Liverpool were:

	Knots.
Saturday to Sunday	475
Sunday to Monday	576
Monday to Tuesday	602
Tuesday to Wednesday	*527
Wednesday to Thursday	602

*Slowed down for fog and ice.

Average speed throughout the trip, 23.65 knots.

The Aquitania has proved to be the fastest of the big ships in the New York-European trade.

Capt. William T. Turner of the Aquitania became well known to regular patrons of the Cunard Line as commander of the record-breakers Lusitania and Mauretania.

He was born in Liverpool of Irish parents in 1856 when his father was in command of a famous East Indiaman sailing out of that port. He started his seafaring career in 1869, shipping as a deckboy on the sailing ship White Star bound around the Cape of Good Hope to the Guanape Islands, where his father's ship Queen of the Nations was waiting for a cargo. He transferred to his father's ship there and made the voyage around Cape Horn to Callao, Peru, and then to Liverpool, making a tour of eighteen months at sea.

Once when Capt. Turner was second mate of the clipper ship Thunderbolt, bound across the Indian Ocean to Calcutta in the monsoon season, he was washed off the jibboom end while fishing for dolphin. A life buoy was thrown to him by the mate, who was on the poop deck at the time, and he grabbed it and kept afloat for an hour and twenty minutes until a boat reached him. The ship was surrounded by sharks, but the noise made by the vigorous young officer and his splashing kept them away until he was hauled into the jolly boat.

The Captain of the Thunderbolt, who was an old-school mariner, looked over the side as the boat came up to the jacob's ladder and exclaimed, "Is that you, Mr. Turner?"

"It is, Sir," replied the rescued second mate.

"Well, you can come on board and go to your bunk for three days. Empty your watch before you turn in," added the methodical skipper, "or the salt water may rust the works."

After he got to command sailing ships Capt. Turner circumnavigated the globe several times, going out to New Zealand via Cape of Good Hope and returning via Cape Horn. After two voyages as a junior officer on the Inman Line steamer City of Chester, and later the Leyland steamer Egyptian, he joined the Cunard service in 1878 as third officer of the Cherbourg, in the Liverpool and Mediterranean service. After two or three voyages Capt. Turner felt the call of the clipper ship and left the Cunard Line to take command of the clipper bark James Kenway of Liverpool, and later the Star of the East, where he remained until he rejoined the Cunard Company in his former position on the Cherbourg in 1883.

In April, 1903, he received his first command in the Cunard Line as captain of the Aleppo in the Mediterranean service, and later had the Carpathia, Ivernia, Umbria, Caronia, Carmania, Lusitania and Mauretania.

The rank of honorary commander in the Royal Naval Reserve was conferred upon Capt. Turner by King George when he opened the Gladstone Dock, Liverpool, last August.

Among his brother captains in the Atlantic trade William T. Turner is looked upon as a first class navigator, a thorough seaman and the master of his ship.

He may be classed as one of the last of the old school of mariners who were taught the sea in sailing ships. Although he commands one of the finest ships in the world Capt. Turner is one of the most democratic commanders afloat today.

The size of the Equitable is only half the story

Today, months ahead of its completion, the Equitable Building that-is-to-be is known the round world over for the supremacy of its size. But pretty soon, when it is completed, tenanted, and in the full, free swing of operation, the Equitable is going to be known also for the supremacy of its service.

New York needs the Equitable Building—but it needs far more the kind of service which the Equitable Building is going to give to its tenants.

Leases now being made from May 1, 1915. The building, however, is due to be completed 2 or 3 months ahead of that date.

"NATIONAL HERO SERIES" NO. 3

KOSCIUSKO
"THE GREATEST OF THE POLES"

NEVER in the history of mankind has there lived a more ardent lover of Personal and National Liberty. He fought with intrepid valor under our own Washington for American Liberty. He devoted his life to regain the ancient freedom of his beloved Poland. Kosciusko hated any legislative attempt which invaded the Natural Rights of Man. If he were alive to-day, every son of Poland knows that he would revolt at any LAW which declared: "Thou shalt NOT eat this—thou shalt NOT drink that." Kosciusko knew that the light wines of his native land and the barley brews of Germany were good for mankind when used in moderation. He drank them himself to the end of his honored days, and who will DARE say that they in any way injured this mighty personality. For 57 years Anheuser-Busch have honestly brewed honest beers. Their great brand—BUDWEISER—is sold throughout the world and has helped the cause of true Temperance. Seven thousand, five hundred men are daily required to keep pace with the natural demand of Americans for BUDWEISER. Its sales exceed any other beer by millions of bottles.

Studebaker

ECONOMICAL LIGHT WEIGHT SIX

$1575

There's only one scientific way to build a light "Six" and that's the Studebaker way —the manufactured way.

Studebaker, literally, gets lightness with doubled or trebled strength—by heat treating the steels.

The other way—the dangerous and weakening way—is to assemble parts—not heat treated, and get lightness by reducing size.

Or, sometimes, a so-called light "Six" is simply a "Six" slightly smaller than a large "Six" and practically as heavy.

The Studebaker SIX, moreover, is perfectly aligned, perfectly lubricated, perfectly balanced. This friction and vibration are reduced and long life promoted.

The owner of the Studebaker light SIX, therefore, gets greater value than can be given with smaller production, in which any lowering of price necessarily means a lowering of quality.

Send for the Studebaker Proof Book, describing Studebaker manufacturing methods.

SHERIFFS ALL READY FOR I. W. W. INVADERS

Will Have 200 "Veterans" at Tarrytown to Meet Them When They Arrive.

REV. CATES TO TALK HERE

Accepts Berkman's Invitation to Debate at Ferrer School—Threats by Wire to Pierson.

The I. W. W. leaders continued yesterday their enlistment of men for the big demonstration which Alexander Berkman asserts is to be made at Fountain Square, in Tarrytown, to vindicate the right of free speech, in so far as it relates to their being permitted to assail John D. Rockefeller at open-air meetings.

Berkman and his lieutenants went to Brooklyn last night to get the I. W. W. there to join in a concerted movement against Tarrytown. He had already recruited members here and in Paterson.

The I. W. W's. gained two new defenders yesterday, one in Tarrytown and one who expressed his feelings by telegraph from New York to President Pierson of Tarrytown Village. The Tarrytown convert wrote to a local paper over the name of Leonard De Carlo, saying that he knew the I. W. W. well, and that the village nad merely a choice "between bloodshed and free speech."

The telegram to President Pierson was of such a violent character that Mr. Pierson, after consulting with the District Attorney of Westchester County, decided not to make it public. Friends of his said it threatened personal violence to Judge Moorehouse, who sentenced three I. W. W. men last Monday to serve from thirty to ninety days in jail, and destruction to the flower gardens and greenhouses of Tarrytown's President. It was signed "The Live and Let Live League." Detectives are looking for its author.

Of the thirteen I. W. W. members in the White Plains jail one lost his courage yesterday and asked to be allowed to plead guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct made against him for participating in a riot at Fountain Square last Sunday. He had given his name as Jack Britton, but when a sister appeared in Judge Moorehouse's court to plead for him he said his right name was John Butler, and that he lived in the Bronx.

Henry Fursht of 2,379 Marion Avenue, the Bronx, was on hand to give a bail bond for Butler. District Attorney Weeks, who had heard the pleas of the prisoner's sister and Mr. Fursht, had Butler sent before Judge Moorehouse at Tarrytown, but it seemed that the Judge did not share the view of the District Attorney's office that clemency ought to be extended. He sentenced Butler to six months in the King's County penitentiary.

The Rev. J. E. Cates, who was compelled by his parishioners and the clergymen of Tarrytown churches other than his own, to cancel his agreement to meet Alexander Berkman and his followers at his church next Saturday, sent a letter to Berkman notifying him that his suggestion "had stirred up a hornet's nest" and therefore would have to be withdrawn. He received from Berkman an acknowledgment, coupled with an invitation to come to New York and debate the Rockefeller issue under the auspices of the Francisco Ferrer Association. The Rev. Mr. Cates announced that he would accept this invitation.

Reports made to Sheriff Doyle by detectives yesterday were to the effect that he would have to handle the invading I. W. W. hosts next Saturday. The Sheriff said he would be in Tarrytown on that day with deputies enough to handle 200 of the agitators.

HIGH BIDS AT FOULC SALE.

Paris Art Library and M. Doucet Among the Buyers Yesterday.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 4.—The sale of the Edmond Foulc collection of valuable books and engravings on architecture and decoration was continued today. The Paris Art Library was a large purchaser, as was an agent for Jacques Doucet, who is said to have refused the collection when it was offered to him as a whole not long ago by the Librairie Desombes. The prices again surpassed expectations, the total realized amounting to $38,467.

The largest price at today's sale was brought by the "Collection of the Lesser Masters of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries," a selection from the works of 110 artists of France, Germany, Italy, and the Low Countries, most of whom attained relatively little fame and whose best work, sometimes reaching a very high standard, is little known and very hard to obtain. The price was $7,200. Other sales were:

"The Book of Hanns Christoff Laechlin of Leutkirch," published at Nuremberg in 1595 by Baltazar Caimox. A series of 30 plates depicting vases, goblets, ewers, &c., $3,600.

"A New Book of Art," by Hans Brosamer of Fulda, printed in 1540; a book on gold work, with 38 plates, believed to be the most complete specimen in existence, $2,400.

"Designs for Jewelry," by Mathias Zuendt. Published in 1553. A collection of 66 plates, with binding in the style of Clovis Eve, $1,640.

Works of Michel le Blon, known as Blondus. Published at Amsterdam. Over 100 plates, with a portrait of Blondus by Matham, after Van Dyck, $1,620.

"A New and Wonderful Work on Craterography," by an unknown master. Nuremberg, 1551. A book with 30 plates illustrating all kinds of drinking vessels, which ranks among the finest collections of that century; sometimes ascribed to Mathias Zuendt, but without good authority, $1,140.

"Models for the Goldsmith," by Hans Hirtz of Wurzburg. Printed by Matheus Greutern. A total of 29 plates, the most complete collection of the works of a little known master, $1,100.

"Collection of Moorish and Damascene Patterns," by Pierre Floetner. Printed at Zurich by Rudolph Wyssenbach in 1549. A complete collection of 40 plates, $1,080.

"The Book of Paul Flindt of Nürnberg," printed in 1594 by Friedrich Durerij. Thirty plates, $1,020.

"A Book of Hours According to the Style of Rome, with the Destruction of Jerusalem, and Pictures of the Life of Man," printed at Paris by Gillet Hardouyn about 1530, $950.

"The Book of Those Figures Vulgarly Called Maurusian," by Baltazar Sylvius. 1554. A collection of varied designs, including Moorish patterns, watch cases, sword hilts, &c., $804.

"The Kisses," preceded by "The Month of May," by Claude Joseph Dorat. Published at The Hague and Paris in 1770. Illustrated by Eisen, $672.

The sale will be continued tomorrow and Saturday.

MARRIAGE PROMISE SPLITS HOE JURY

Never Reached the Question of Damages and Are Discharged.

A SECOND TRIAL PROBABLE

Vote Was 9 to 3 That Wealthy Defendant Said He Would Marry Miss Sullivan.

The jury in the suit of Miss Mae A. Sullivan against Arthur I. Hoe for $150,000 for breach of promise failed to reach an agreement and were discharged by Justice Gavegan of the Supreme Court at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. That the jurors made every effort to agree was shown by the fact that they were confined in a small room in the County Court House from 12:45 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon until nearly 3 o'clock yesterday morning, barring an hour when they were at dinner.

How the jurors stood from the time the first ballot was taken until they gave up in despair was variously told by the lawyers. At the office of William H. Hamilton, counsel for Mr. Hoe, it was said that the first vote was six to six on the question whether Mr. Hoe really did make Miss Sullivan an offer of marriage. At the office of Mirabeau L. Towns, counsel for Miss Sullivan, it was said that at one time the vote was nine to three that Mr. Hoe did make such an offer.

The truth probably is that the vote shifted from six to six to nine to three, where it stood when the jurors went home, after nearly fourteen hours of discussion and argument. Just how the vote was divided could not be learned, because the jurymen agreed to give out no precise information ,and the pact was kept. The story that the majority of the jurors were in favor of awarding to Miss Sullivan damages of from $50,000 to $60,000 was early exploded, because all of the jurors who talked at all said that the direction of Justice Gavegan was obeyed in the matter of first deciding whether an offer of marriage was made before the question of damages was taken up.

As this first question was never decided, there was, of course, no vote taken at all as to how large the damages should be. One of the jurors said that the first vote showed that eight of the jurors thought there had been a promise of marriage, while the other four were sure there never was any such promise.

"The four didn't believe," said this juror, " that, however foolish Hoe might have acted, he was ever foolish enough to promise to marry the plaintiff when he had a wife and a three-months-old baby at home. Any talk about damages was only scattering and not of any consequence, because that matter was never presented to us by the foreman. Of course, there were some remarks about the $50,000 Mr. Hoe had already spent through his association with the plaintiff."

Mr. Hoe said he was disappointed at the outcome, because he felt certain up to the very end that he would be vindicated by the jury. He said:

" The sex appeal to the jury made by counsel for Miss Sullivan must have had a strong effect. At the next trial we will try to eliminate that entirely so that only the merits of the case may be dealt with."

Counsel for Mr. Hoe said that the next move would have to be made by counsel on the other side. Whether there would be another and speedy trial was not known. At the office of Mr. Towns, Philip J. Termini, Miss Sullivan's guardian, said:

" I have not had a chance to talk with Mr. Towns about what shall be done next, although it is certain the matter will be carried to the end. We shall probably discuss the case in a day or two and prepare for another trial. The matter may be settled within a day or two."

The trial of Miss Sullivan's second suit for $75,000, which she says is due her because of a promise Mr. Hoe made to pay her $1,000 a week for life, is on the calendar for Monday. But it will probably go over because the issues to be presented in this suit depended largely upon the outcome of the trial in the breach of promise suit. There was some talk that a settlement would be arrived at by the lawyers, but there was no foundation for it, judging by the statements of both sides. It is probable that there will be another trial of the breach of promise suit and that this second trial will be hurried forward.

Gets $5,500 for Husband's Death.

Mrs. Anna Schott, as executrix, obtained a verdict of $5,500 yesterday against the United States Printing Company of Brooklyn in the Queens County Supreme Court for the death of her husband, John Schott, on Aug. 8, 1913. Schott was operating a circular saw when a splinter was embedded in his abdomen. He died five days later.

AGAINST HOME TAILORS.

Miss Wald Tells Industrial Commission It Should Be Forbidden by Law

The Federal Commission on Industrial Relations at its hearing yesterday in the City Hall took up home work in the tailoring trades. The commission considered general conditions in the trade, but the problem of the women who toil in the tenement houses in finishing garments for a very small wage received the most attention.

Miss Lillian D. Wald of the Child Labor Committee of New York and witnesses from the ranks of the working men condemned this system unsparingly, but Charles A. Rosenwasser, a manufacturer of Newark, who asked leave to testify, asserted that he could not get women to work in his factory.

Miss Wald asserted that in the matter of home work no compromise was possible. It should be forbidden by law, she said. It was a mistake, she testified, to suppose that only cheap work was given to the tenement workers. She knew, she asserted, that much high-grade work was done in the homes and that to supervise it was impossible.

" Then there is always a serious danger from infection from children suffering from scarlet fever, chicken pox, aand measles, as well as parents in various stages of tuberculosis," Miss Wald said. " It will sometimes happen that a manufactured garment will be thrown over a person suffering from an infectious disease and then offered for sale."

In this connection, Mr. Rosenwasser, when he was on the stand, remarked:

" I have seen women at work on an overcoat with the scarlet fever sign on the door. But there is one thing between the scarlet fever and the customer—the hot iron."

William Goldman, President of the New York Clothing Men's Association, said that he would be in favor of a law prohibiting all home labor, and in reply to a question from Mrs. J. Borden Harriman he explained that the only objection to such a measure would be the hardship which it might work for a time in certain cases.

Mr. Rosenwasser pointed out that when the tailors told of women who could make only $2 a week, it must be remembered that these women were working only when they could find time away from their home duties, and that this $2 should be regarded only as an additional income which they were able to make. In reply to Mrs. Harriman, Mr. Rosenwasser said that the low prices for finishing might be improved if some of the other classes of labor were not paid too much.

" Pocketmakers," he said, " get very high wages. I have paid some of them, unusually skilled men, as much as $30 a week, and many get $18. Take $5 off these rates and distribute it among the other workers, and you would be able to relieve conditions a good deal."

STOPS SIEGEL BOND SUITS.

Court Discountenances Efforts to Seize Surety Given to State.

To prevent further attempt to obtain payment on the bond of $100,000 furnished to the State of New York by the United States Fidelity and Guranty Company of Baltimore as security for Henry Siegel & Co., Judge Hough signed yesterday in the Federal District Court an order staying any such proceeding. The bond was paid to the Chamberlain of the City of New York by the bonding company on April 4.

The hearing in the bankruptcy proceedngs of the Siegel-Vogel Corporations, which was set for yesterday before Commissioner Gilchrist, was postponed by consent of counsel to June 18.

Will Discuss Traffic Regulations.

The traffic regulations of upper Broadway and the near-by streets will be discussed next Monday afternoon at a luncheon of the Broadway Association at the Hotel Cumberland. This has been arranged by the automobile interests, which are centred near Columbus Circle, and among those invited to discuss the matter are President McAneny, Borough President Marks, Fire Commissioner Adamson, Street Commissioner Featherston, and Police Commissioner Woods. The automobile men feel that at present they are hampered by too many regulations and ordinances, and that the situation needs clarification.

McAlpin Not to Extend.

The report that the owners of the McAlpin were negotiating for the purchase of two lots adjoining the hotel on Thirty-fourth Street and that the deal would probably be closed within a few days was denied by the management of the McAlpin yesterday. It was said by them that however much it might be desirable to increase the frontage of the hotel on Thirty-fourth Street, no negotiations were in progress for the acquirement of the land mentioned.

CHAMPIONS SEARS IN DIVORCE TRIAL

Miss Langdon, Co-respondent, Says He's Greatest Man in the World.

NEW THOUGHT TREATMENT

Mr. Sears Placed His Hand on Her Head and Maintained Silence for Ten Minutes.

Miss Pauline Langeon, named as co-respondent in the divorce suit brought by Dr. Julia Seton Sears, founder of the New Thought Church, against Frank W. Sears, resumed the witness stand in Justice Giegerich's part of the Supreme Court yesterday and told the court and an attentive audience just what the mental healing treatments were that she had received from Mr. Sears on that return trip across the Atlantic in the Fall of 1913. Miss Langdon said that the treatments consisted of Mr. Sears's laying his hand upon her head and maintaining a prolonged silence. This silence, she said, would remain unbroken for nearly ten minutes. When it was terminated she would feel better and would pay Mr. Sears $2.

Edward T. Hiscox, counsel for Mrs. Sears, called forth a rhetorical outburst from Miss Langdon by asking her if she did not think she had done Mrs. Sears an injury by her conduct with the defendant.

" This is not a divorce trial," cried Miss Langdon, her voice rising rapidly. " It is a fight for power. Mrs. Sears is not jealous of me. She is jealous of Mr. Sears's success, but she would crucify me if she could.

" And you, Mr. Hiscox," she continued, despite all efforts to check her, " have a personal antipathy against us, being a member of her church. Mrs. Sears is jealous of the position she has lost in the church. She wants it back again, and she wants to persecute me. I am the victim. In theory Mrs. Sears is a great woman, but in practice she is not. She has outraged every principle she pretends to represent, and the whole world knows it. She has persecuted me with a relentless malice."

The court rapped for order, but Miss Langdon would not stop until she had delivered this eulogy:

" Mr. Sears is the greatest man in the world, and has preached the greatest truth in the world."

Miss Langdon then subsided and left the stand, and Mr. Sears, recalled, denied that he had met Miss Langdon alone in a room at Aeolian Hall. He denied, also, that he had eaten a midnight meal with Miss Langdon, or with anybody else, and said that his arm had never been around Miss Langdon in Central Park. He said he had not met Miss Langon at the time he separated from Mrs. Sears.

The trial of the divorce suit came to an end at noon yesterday. Justice Giegerich reserved decision on a motion to have the complaint dismissed, and allowed the attorneys ten days in which to submit briefs on the points of law involved. Just before the trial ended the Justice suggested that Morris Bramowitz, the chauffeur who testified that he had taken Mr. Sears and Miss Langdon to various hotels, might possibly be apprehended on a charge of perjury.

Bramowitz identified Mr. Sears and Miss Langdon positively as a couple he had driven to various hotels, but after Mr. Sears had denounced him in court as a perjurer Bramowitz decided that his identification might be at fault.

B. Fliashnick, counsel for Mr. Sears, said he had been told that Bramowitz had volunteered to give testimony in several other suits. Bramowitz could not be found at his supposed residence at 591 Clinton Avenue, the Bronx, and it was discovered also that he did not hold the automobile license which he had told the court he held.

CAN'T SPLIT THIS TAX BILL.

Neither Can Interest Be Collected for Fifteen Years.

The smallest tax bill that the city collects is charged against a piece of Staten Island realty. At the junction of Depew Avenue and Brighton Street, Tottenville, there is a plot of ground 4 feet 4 inches by 3 feet and ¼ inch. The yearly assessment on it is $1, and the tax amounts to only 1 cent a year.

Receiver of Taxes Frederick H. E. Ebstein was notified yesterday by his Richmond Borough Deputy that the tax on the plot had not been paid. It is Lot No. 1,229 of the Fifth Ward, Vol. 1, and Block No. 29 on the real estate map.

The law provides that 7 per cent. interest shall be imposed on tax bills not paid by May 31, and that owners may pay yearly taxes in two installments. In this case it is impossible for the owner to pay his taxes in two parts, for the smallest coin made by Uncle Sam is the 1-cent piece. Even the 7 per cent. interest cannot be charged, as it would be almost fifteen years before the interest would be equal to the principal.

Meantime the city is losing money, and Receiver Ebstein is wondering what he can do about it.

Visualizing the News.

On returning from the wilds of Brazil, Col. Roosevelt, looking about him at Sagamore Hill, feelingly remarked that no spot he had seen in all his travels was so attractive to him as his home. Beautiful photographs of that home, exterior and interior, taken last week will be reproduced exclusively in the Picture Section of next Sunday's Times.

Miss Belle Willard, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Spain, will be married next week to Kermit Roosevelt in Madrid. A new and striking portrait of Miss Willard by the celebrated Paul Chabas, who painted "September Morn," will be reproduced in the Picture Section of The Sunday Times.

New Yorkers are manifesting keenest interest in the international polo match at Meadow Brook next week between the American champions and the stalwart, hopeful cup-lifters sent over by Great Britain.

Photographs of exceptional composition, showing the American defenders in vigorous practice for the great event, will be among the numerous other features of Sunday's Pictorial Section.

FEDERAL FIGHT FOR PITCHER BLANDING

Kansas City Club to Seek Injunction Against Cleveland "Jumper."

CHICAGO, June 4.—The Kansas City Federal League Club today served notice on Pitcher Blanding, of the Cleveland Americans, to appear before Judge Foell, in the Superior Court here, next Monday, when it intends to move that a temporary injunction be granted restraining him from playing with Cleveland or any club other than the Kansas City Federals.

Blanding, the Kansas City Club will try to show, signed a contract with it and received $2,500 advance money, but before the season opened "jumped" his contract, though it had no "ten-day clause," and returned to the Cleveland Club.

The hearing is to come before the same Judge who yesterday decided against the Kansas City Club in the Johnson case, the Cincinnati Nationals in that suit occupying the same place that the Kansas City Club does here, according to Federal League counsel. The Federals claim credit for notifying Blanding, saying that the same courtesy was not shown Johnson.

It was Blanding's return to the Cleveland Club that caused President Gilmore to permit the Kansas City Club to "go after any players under contract." The reserve rule, which held Blanding to Cleveland, will be a factor in the new suit which did not come up in the Johnson case.

MARSANS MUST SEE HERZOG.

Herrmann Declines to Settle Contract Demands of Cuban Player.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 4.—After a talk with Armando Marsans, the Cincinnati outfielder, who was suspended indefinitely yesterday by Manager Herzog for demanding a new contract, President August Herrmann, of the Cincinnati Club, declared today he would not take any action in the matter. He said he told Marsans that the affair is up to Herzog, and that if he wanted to do anything he should get in communication with the manager, who is on his way East today with the Cincinnati team. Marsans said he would think it over, according to Herrmann.

Previous to his conference with Herrmann, Marsans said he would remain here ten days and report each morning to the baseball office, and if no order is received from Herzog at the end of that time he would go to his home in Cuba.

CHICAGO, June 4.—With the statement that the "Federal League is thoroughly satisfied that contracts containing the ten-day clause are iniquitous and that we are ready at all times to negotiate with any player whose contract contains it," President Gilmore today answered a query from Cincinnati as to whether the Federal League would take part in the differences between the Cincinnati National League Club and Player Marsans. Marsans, according to the query, gave the Cincinnati Club "ten days' notice" that he was going to leave it. Gilmore added to his answer that he was not fully aware of all particulars in the Marsans case.

In spite of the Superior Court's adverse decision in the Johnson case, the Federal League, it is assured, will use the pitcher in games outside Chicago.

National League Bulletin.

John K. Tener, President of the National League, announced yesterday that the following contracts and releases have been approved:

Baseball News in Brief.

The Yankees left for Chicago yesterday, where they will open a series tomorrow with the White Sox. They will not come back to the Polo Grounds until July 7. Ed Sweeney, the catcher, who has been ill with grip, is at his home in Chicago, and will be able to play in the coming series.

The Giants returned from a disastrous trip to Philadelphia yesterday. The double-header was postponed on account of rain, and Secretary Heydler announced that these games would be played in Philadelphia on Sept. 12 and 14. McGraw's team opens with St. Louis at the Polo Grounds today, and they will be visited by all of the Western clubs during the present stay.

This will be "Girls' High School Day" at Ebbets Field to-day, and a delegation of young women, with Dr. W. L. Felter, the Principal, will witness the game with the Chicago Cubs. Tomorrow Shannon's band will give a band concert at Ebbets Field.

President Thomas of the Cubs is here with the team. Many Chicago fans still believe that Charles W. Murphy has some interest in the club, because of the fact that Mr. Thomas was closely allied with him during his reign. Mr. Thomas, however, has stated so often that the club is solely the property of Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati that he is tired of repeating the statement.

Today will be "Ladies' Day" at Washington Park, where the Brookfeds will play Buffalo. Every Friday, hereafter, will be known as "Ladies' Day."

ONE HIT OFF SCOTT.

Joe Jackson Spoils No-Hit Game for White Sox Pitcher.

CHICAGO, June 4.—Scott allowed only two Cleveland players to reach first base today. One got a hit and the other drew a pass. Both were thrown out stealing. Jackson was the man who spoiled Scott's chance of a no-hit game. He opened the second inning with a single to left. Chicago's runs were scored in the first inning. Weaver singled and Blackburn sacrificed. Weaver moved up on a passed ball and Collins walked. Collins was caught off first base by Blanding and when Johnston hit Blanding with the ball trying to catch Weaver off third, the latter scored. Collins took second and scored on Chase's single. Amateur Bouts Postponed.

Notwithstanding the fact that fifty entries had been received from eight metropolitan clubs for the amateur boxing tournament scheduled to be decided last night and tomorrow night at the New Polo Athletic Association in Harlem, the management of the clubhouse had to cancel the show. Representatives from the Glencoe A. C., Trinity Club, Boys' Club, Pastime A. C., and several other local organizations were to have boxed in the different classes, chief interest centring around the heavyweight class, in which William Spengler, Union Settlement A. C., the metropolitan title holder; W. White, a clubmate, and G. Birdsall of the Ossining A. C. were scheduled to appear. Even with this enticing schedule of bouts the event failed to create enough interest among followers of local amateur boxing to warrant holding the show, and at 8 o'clock last night, when the first bout was scheduled to go on, the attendance was so small that the management of the club announced they had decided to postpone the bouts until June 20.

VAN VLECK BEST IN JERSEY GOLF

Baltusrol Player Qualifies Five Strokes Better Than His Nearest Competitors.

Charles E. Van Vleck, Jr., of Baltusrol spread-eagled his field with an exceptional score of 75 in the qualifying round of the annual championship tournament of the New Jersey State Golf Association over the links of the Morris County Golf Club yesterday. This score, made in a downpour of rain, was 5 strokes better than the trio of next nearest contenders. They were Oswald Kirkby, the Metropolitan titleholder; W. E. Shackelford, of Atlantic City, and Max Behr, of the home club.

Eighty-four drove off in the qualifying round and when the last card had been returned it was found that three players, Maurice Risley, of Atlantic City; E. M. Barnes, of Englewood, and William Watsn, of Baltusrol, with scores of 85, had tied for last place in the championship division. The play-off was a thriller. At the first hole Watson had to take a penalty stroke when he accidently touched his ball as he took his stance for the approach. Even then he managed to lay the next shot sufficiently close to hole the putt and get a halve in 4 with the other two. At the second hole Watson drove into a bunker and that ended his chances. Risley and Barnes halved in 3 and they also divided the third in 3, each man bringing off a putt of about fifteen feet. Barnes then drove two balls out of bounds and gave up the hole.

Because of the big field and the consequent delays it was found possible to run off only the first match round in the first two sixteens. With regard to the other divisions conditions were changed so as to provide for 18-hole rounds.

The most protracted contest of the day was that between Van Vleck and Behr. When they came to the home green they were all square and it was necessary to continue for five more holes before Van Vleck won. Oswald Kirky met Marston and defeated the Baltusrol man by a 2 and 1 margin.

In the club competition coincident with the qualifying round the Morris County team with an aggregate total of 227 won the banner. Baltusrol with 333 came second. The scores:

Wants Soccer in Olympic Games.

Dr. G. Randolph Manning, President of the United States Football Association, to which position he was re-elected last Saturday, sailed yesterday on the steamship Berlin of the North German Lloyd Line for Paris, where he will attend the meeting of the International Olympic Committee, at which he will represent the American Olympic Committee as association football delegate. The meeting at the French capital takes place on June 13. Dr. Manning stated before sailing that he had strong hopes of America sending a team to compete in the international soccer competition to be held as a part of the Olympic programme at Berlin in 1916.

"MET" WOMEN WIN.

Boston Team Again Defeated for Griscom Golf Cup.

The team of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association came out a winner over that of the Women's Golf Association of Boston yesterday, when the second of the tri-city matches for the Griscom Cup was played over the links of the Greenwich Country Club. The Metropolitan combination won eleven matches as against ten for Boston. Five matches were defaulted by the women of the Boston team on account of rain.

Miss Margaret Curtis, a former national champion, who had a severe cold, defaulted to Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of Brooklawn. For similar reasons Mrs. E. C. Wheeler, Jr., and Miss C. L. Duncan declined to start. In the foursomes Boston allowed two matches to go by default.

On the Metropolitan side two forfeitures took place; Miss Lillian B. Hyde, the Metropolitan champion, and Miss Marion Hollins, former title holder, being forced to abandon a contemplated trip in a motor boat across the Sound from their homes because of the rough water. They had to come by automobile, and were unable to reach the club until after noon.

In actual matches, Metropolitan and Boston broke even in the singles, each winning five. The same was true of the foursomes later in the day. Particular attention was paid to the matches between Mrs. H. A. Jackson and Miss H. S. Curtis, the Boston leaders, and Miss Hyde and Mrs. Lawrence Swift from New York, the first winning by 2 up and 1 to play. The match was even until the sixteenth hole. The summary:

TOO WET FOR POLO PLAY.

American and English Teams Will Get Into Action Today.

Practice by the English polo team at Meadow Brook was canceled yesterday owing to rain. The practice match was to be on the international field and playing on the wet turf would have damaged it beyond immediate repair. The American team's practice also was canceled for the day. Weather permitting, both teams will play this afternoon. Players and ponies only took light exercise yesterday.

Joshua Crane of Boston, who has been the American umpire in two former international matches, has been selected to assist again. The English umpire and the referee, who is selected by both teams, will be named later. The name of the Duke of Penaranda is being suggested for this place.

Owing to inability to leave the capital at this juncture, President Wilson and Vice President Marshall have declined the invitations sent them by the President of the association in the international event. Acceptances have been received, however, from Secretary of War Garrison, Gov. Tener of Pennsylvania, Gov. Glynn and Senator O'Gorman of New York, and Mayor Mitchel. Other notables will also be in attendance.

Cole to Lead Amherst on Track.

Special to The New York Times.

AMHERST, Mass., June 4.—Harry Wing Cole, 1915, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., was elected Captain of the Amherst track team for next season. Cole's strength lies in the sprints and quarter-mile. He has records of 10 seconds for the 100-yard dash and 22 seconds for the 220 yards, and has been on the track team for three years. Coleman Philip Herrschaft, 1915, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was elected manager of the gym team. Herrschaft is a member of the team and his strength lies in the parallel bars.

Miss Fenno and Miss Sears Win.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—Miss Marian Fenno and Miss Eleanora Sears of Boston defeated the Misses Myers, Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—4, in the semi-final round of the championship doubles in the Pennsylvania and Eastern States Tennis Tournament today at Merion. Rain fell during the afternoon and the other matches in the championship event were postponed until tomorrow.

Pell and Wright in Final.

RICHMOND, Va., June 4.—T. R. Pell of New York and Irving Wright of Boston will play the final round in the men's singles here Saturday, the winner to meet Dr. Nat Thornton of Atlanta, present holder of the Old Dominion tennis tourney trophy. Miss Clare Cassell of New York and Miss Mary Wagner of New York, national indoor tennis champion, will contest for the privilege of meeting Mrs. Connie Sullivan of Richmond, holder of the title in women's singles. The surprise of today was the ease with which Irving Wright defeated Wylie Grant of New York, indoor champion, taking two straight sets, 6—2, 6—3. Pell had an even easier match with W. F. Harrity, Jr., of Philadelphia, defeating his man, 6—2, 6—1.

CHARLESTONIAN WON LARCHMONT STAKES

Speedy Three-Year-Old Then Leased to Run in $25,000 Canadian Derby.

As there are no such things as "double headers" in the racing game, the races were run off at Belmont Park yesterday in spite of the downpour in which the sport was begun. Strangely enough, too, a couple of thousand people, including a hundred or so venturesome women, were there to see the horses perform. The track was very sloppy, but firm underneath, as the very fair time made shows.

It was unfortunate that so good an event as the Larchmont, guaranteed to be worth $4,000 to the winner, was carded under such conditions. That Charlestonian, winner of the historic Withers, should have won it, carrying twelve pounds more than when he beat Old Rosebud, so impressed Henry Morris that he at once leased the racing qualities of the Woolsthorpe gelding for the Dorval Derby of $25,000, the great Canadian racing event of the Summer. In that race he will meet Pennant, the unbeaten Whitney colt, winner of the Futurity last year and of the Little Neck Handicap on Tuesday last, and then have a chance to prove just how good he is. After yesterday's race there came a belief that Charlestonian has been underrated, that he is a high-class three-year-old, and might have beaten Old Rosebud on his merits in the Withers had the latter stood up.

Thornhill and Gainer were about equal favorites for the stake, as good as 6 to 1 always to be had against Charlestonian. Early Rose and Figinny—the latter carrying 17 pounds more than he did in the Metropolitan, in which he ran second to Buskin—made the pace. Thornhill and Charlestonian were up behind the leaders, but well away from the flying mud showered at them until the turn into the stretch was made. Then, as Early Rose quit, Gainer, moving up from the outside, and Charlestonian passed Thornhill after a brief skirmish and overhauled Figinny. Gainer squeezed through next to the rail, and Charlestonian, escaping a pocket by the narrowest of margins, passed Thornhill, and both challenged Figinny. For a couple of hundred yards Gainer, Charlestonian, and Figinny ran stride for stride and so closely together that neither appeared to have the slightest advantage.

All three jockeys were using whips and spurs, and it was not until the last sixteenth pole ws passed that Figinny "cracked" and Gainer showed in front for an instant. But Burlingame would not be denied. He shook Charlestonian up once more for the final effort. The big bay responded in true race-horse fashion, showing his gameness by coming away from the whip with a rush that sent him flying past the judges with daylight showing between him and Gainer. The latter finished gamely also, and snatched second honors from Figinny by about the same distance he was himself beaten. Figinny, tiring badly in the last hundred yards, lasted long enough to beat Thornhill with clear space between them.

Among the youngsters Kilkenny Boy and Albrena were winners of their respective events, the former a veritable mud lark as he spread-eagled the field of nine that ran, and with olds of 10 to 1 against him. He is from the stable of James Butler, which is showing up a fair lot of two-year-olds.

Alhena was an even favorite with Hectograph for the third race, but made the Holland filly look pretty badly. Alhena won by three lengths from Harlequin, who beat Roly only a half length after the latter had tested the going in all parts of the track, swerving from one side to the other and back again before his jockey could get him to run true.

Grover Hughes made a runaway race of the six furlongs selling race, running in front from start to finish, and clear of his field all the way.

Skibbereen, thanks to the clever handling of Allen, a Canadian jockey, won the steeplechase in a rousing finish after F. Ambrose Clark's pair had led up to and over the last hurdle.

Capt. C. K. Rockwell, U. S. A., who had a bad fall at Piping Rock on Wednesday, came to the track to see the race and to convince his friends he was not so badly hurt as was feared by the physicians. It was found no ribs were broken. The summaries:

YALE FRESHMEN SWAMPED.

Oarsmen Forced to Swim to Float—Too Rough for Rowing.

GALES FERRY, Conn., June 4.—The Yale crews did not go out on the Thames this evening on account of the rough water. Instead, the oarsmen were sent on a two-mile jaunt through the woods.

A squad of photographers and moving-picture operators invaded the quarters today. The black goat, abducted from the Harvard freshmen yesterday, was the centre of attraction. It developed tonight that Yale has not yet paid Harvard for the stolen mascot, as the Cambridge men have set too high a price upon his head. There is some talk of a suit being brought by the Harvard men to recover damages.

The two 'Varsity eights went to Haughton's Cove, across the river from the quarters, and paddled a few short stretches this morning. On the return the 'Varsity boat was swamped by the waves, which were running high, and the oarsmen were forced to jump overboard. They were only a short distance from the float, and swam ashore, towing the shell. The freshman eight went up stream a short distance, looking for a sheltered spot, but had to return after a short paddle. There were no changes in any of the boats, Capt. Denegre again rowing at No. 3 in the second 'Varsity.

ROUGH WATER ON THAMES.

Harvard Crews Go Out for Spins Despite Stormy Weather.

RED TOP, Conn., June 4.—Despite a rough sea and a stiff wind that filled the Thames with white caps, Coach Wray sent all the Harvard crews out for a row to the navy yard and back tonight. The shells were equipped with washboards so the oarsmen escaped with only a slight wetting. On the way back the first and second 'Varsity boats had a sharp brush for a mile, the first crew winning. No time was announced.

Owing to the storm today was a dreary one, the oarsmen remaining at quarters practically all day.

All of the boats were taken over to the west side in the morning where the water was less rough. The second 'Varsity or Henley crew, and the freshman eight, had a half mile brush which the Henley boat won by half a length. The first eight went up the river for a half mile spin, while the freshman four had a short paddle. The latter came back to the float with their shell almost full of water which had been shipped in making the trip across the Thames from the west side.

Cornell Crews to Start Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA N. Y., June 4.—Three Cornell crews will leave for Poughkeepsie on Saturday evening, it was announced here today. Although a number of the men had examinations scheduled for different times next week, the professors in whose courses they were studying consented to give them their examinations before the other students, and as a result the entire squad will have concluded their university work by Saturday evening. Coach Courtney was very anxious to leave at that time so that practice on the Hudson could begin on Monday. The Cornell squad hopes to reach Highland Monday morning. The Oaks, which has been occupied by Cornell for years, is now being prepared for them, Mrs. Charles E. Courtney going ahead to see that the boys are made comfortable.

Columbia Crews Row in Rain.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 4.—Rain did not keep the Columbia crews off the river this morning. Coach Rice sent all three of his eights out for a long paddle, but no hard work was done. Hooven is still out of the freshman shell, and Lopenz is pulling the No. 2 oar. The non-arrival of the Columbia launch handicapped the coach in his work. Late this afternoon Coach Rice again had all three crews on the water, the seniors taking a pull of eight miles and the juniors and freshmen having a five-mile practice row.

LONDON HORSE SHOW.

Judge Moore and A. G. Vanderbilt Among American Entrants.

LONDON, June 4.—A record list of entries, among them many from America, was announced at the opening today at Olympia of the eighth annual horse show, which lasts from June 8 until June 16, and promises to be one of the most successful of the series.

American exhibitors include William H. Moore of New York, who has made one of the most numerous entries. Others whose stables are well represented are Alfred G. Vanderbilt, New York; Baron Alexander Stackelburg of Santa Barbara, Cal.; Mr. and Mrs. Graham of Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Miss Ruth Boyd of New York, and J. Sumner Draper of Milton, Mass.

Most of the American exhibitors have taken boxes for the show and will entertain guests from across the Atlantic.

The big event of the show is the competition for the King Edward VII. $2,500 gold vase, for which teams from the cavalry of most European armies have entered. The vase, which has to be won three times to become the absolute property of any country, has been carried off twice by Russia, the present holder, and France, and once by Belgium. The British cavalry has been training hard, and will make a serious bid for victory this year.

Inspired by the architecture of the Tower of London and Windsor Castle, the Directors of the show have transformed Olympia into a huge castle yard. With the aid of scenic artists the roof has been made to resemble the towers and turrets of a mediaeval castle, while below creeper grown walls of apparently solid stone make a very realistic scene. The horses will enter the arena through two massive oaken gates.

The royal box, which will be occupied by King George and Queen Mary on June 8 and by other members of the royal family on other dates, is in the form of a boldly designed old English timbered pavilion, with leaded windows, while the reception rooms are furnished in old style in keeping with the box.

The arena is encircled with a wall of gray stone having a wide summit, on which stands a continuous line of trailing and foliage plants, beneath which are hidden thousands of electric lights to illuminate the elaborate flower beds, with their edging of grass border and tan inclosure. Lilac trees, shrubs, and all manner of foliage plants help to make the big hall resemble a conservatory.

Capper Harvard's Track Captain.

WIRE-HAIR FOX TERRIER THE BEST

Little English Animal Takes First Honors at Mineola Dog Show.

Matford Vic, a two-year-old wire-hair fox terrier bitch, which several months ago was brought over from England, was adjudged the best dog in the show yesterday at the annual outdoor exhibition of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America at the Mineola Fair Grounds. George W. Quintard's little beauty, recognized as the best conformed dog in England before being brought to this country, scored a notable victory, for in carrying off the President's trophy, valued at $50 and presented by Miss Anna Sands for the best of either sex in the show, she defeated several leading champions of this country and England.

Arnold W. Lawson's bulldog Champion Dreamwold Centaur, also an English importation, who has been awarded the chief honors in many shows hereabout, won the Mrs. H. M. Harriman trophy.

Centaur and Matford survived for the final test out of a field of eighteen title-holding dogs, and it was some time before the British judges, Midgeley Marsden and John Holgate, decided on Matford as the reserve winner.

The Quintard entrant, while many times a champion abroad, holds no title here because of an American Kennel Club ruling.

The rain kept the attendance for the final day of the exhibition down to a small number and drove the judges under an old circus tent, which had been raised on the lawns of the Fair Grounds. The poor light inside the tent made it extremely difficult for the judges to make their selections, and during the judging of the "best in the show" the curtains had to be raised. But even then it taxed the eyesight of the judges to closely examine the contestants.

After Judges Holgate and Marsden had weeded out the field in the championship class, Matford Vic, Centaur, Vickery Soubrette, and the Red Brook Kennels' Champion Poodle Orchard Snowstorm remained in the ring. Soubrette and Snowstorm were then eliminated, leaving the terrier and the bulldog, as vastly different in appearance as could possibly be, to fight it out for the blue.

Centaur proved best in the champion dog class, defeating for first prize the Poodle Snowstorm, which he also beat later in the biggest class of the show. Vickery Kennels' Vickery Soubrette was judged the best in the champion record bitch class, with Mrs. Tyler Morse's Old English sheepdog, Champion Slumber, second.

Oak Nana, the celebrated British bulldog from the Rockliffe Kennels, which in her first few appearances here created quite a sensation, lowered its colors to Mrs. Morse's sheepdog Vanity in the special class for non-sporting dogs and bitches.

Many of the regular classes, which were left over from the preceding day, had to be judged before the special contests were held. In these events the prized were well distributed, with the names of such prominent exhibitors as Mrs. Tyler Morse, A. Albright, Jr., Roy Nordheimer, Mrs. W. R. Dun, Jr., J. C. Liggett, Thomas F. Ryan, and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark appearing on the winners' list. T. F. Ryan's Oak Ridge Alarich Von Alpenluft headed the winners in the German sheepdog class, while Mrs. Ambrose Clark's Duke Roman V. proved the best dog among the attractive beagles.

Mr. Quintard, in addition to landing the best in the show honors, scored a number of victories in minor classes. His fox terrier kennel undoubtedly is one of the best on this side.

In the puppy and novice dog and bitch class, Vickery Kennel's wire-haired fox terrier, Vickery Overflow, was best. The Great Island Kennel's pair of pointers attracted the eyes of the judges above all others in the event for sporting braces. Arnold Lawson's Dreamwold team was first in the non-sporting brace class. The Juggler, from the Red Brook Kennels, was superior in the stud dog special class, while Mrs. Morse's champion Nightmare won the blue in the brood bitch class.

ATHLETIC CONGRESS MEETS.

Rules Committee Adopts New Regulations Offered by James E. Sullivan

LYONS, France, June 4.—The Rules, Regulations, and Records Committee of the International Amateur Athletic Federation discussed today and adopted, with modifications, a set of rules submitted by James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the American Olympic Committee, who presided over the meeting. Most of the rules were adopted unanimously, but in one or two cases, notably Rule 6, relating to timekeepers, the French and English delegates offered some opposition.

Rule 6 states that "each of the three timekeepers shall time every event. In case two watches agree and the third disagrees, the time marked by the two shall be the official time, and if all the watches disagree the time marked by the watch giving the middle time shall be the official time."

Both France and England argued against counting the best instead of the middle time.

As modified the rule relating to the judges at the finish now reads: "There shall be three or more judges, who shall decide the order in which the competitors finish."

The previous rule designated one judge to take the winner, another the second man, and another the third.

Rule 7 now gives the judges of walking, or their assistants, the power to warn or disqualify immediately at their discretion. Previously the judges cautioned any competitor, the third caution disqualifying him.

The committee has not yet completely finished with the rules, which are again to be discussed tomorrow.

The first session of the congress proper has been fixed for Saturday. On that day the delegates will be entertained by the municipality of Lyons.

A. A. U. to Aid Police in Games.

Police Commissioner Woods has asked the Registration Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union for information as to the proper method of holding an athletic event open only to members of New York City Departments. It is the desire of the Police Department to hold a relay race in which only city employes may compete. The A. A. U. will suggest to Commissioner Woods that the best way to consummate his purpose would be to form an athletic league, similar to the Municipal League, and has further offered the A. A. U.'s cooperation by appointing John Connolly of the Second Battalion; Jonn J. Deignan, St. Bartholomew A. C., and George Matthews, Long Island A. C., to act as a committee to aid the proposed movement.

At the two days carnival of athletic events to be held June 26 and 27, there will be a special exhibition by the Traffic Squad, in both mounted and unmounted manoeuvres and a series of stunts by the police dogs to show the sagacity of these well trained animals.

Commissioner Woods yesterday sent out a circular letter to every clergyman in the city asking their co-operation in making the athletic meet a success.

ARBITRATION AND TOLLS REPEAL.

There can be no considerable harm in a joint resolution referring the differences over canal tolls to arbitration. If the Repeal bill passes as it came from the House, the resolution would fall to the ground, since the differences would vanish. If an amendment were adopted declaring that the repeal is not to be construed as an abandonment of the claim of the United States to a right to exempt its coastwise vessels, differences could arise only when the Congress should again change its course and enact exemption. By that time the attitude of the Senate might be modified as to arbitration. If, however, the Repeal bill should fail in the Senate, then undoubtedly the best thing that could be done would be to refer the controversy to arbitration. It would be the only possible policy consistent with national honor and plain fidelity to obligations.

If the resolution reported by the Foreign Relations Committee is pressed, it may serve to delay action on the Repeal bill, but it would be unreasonable to infer that that is the purpose of the majority of the committee, most of whom are in favor of repeal, and of unconditional repeal. There is at least this advantage in the action of the committee, that it tends to commit the Senate to an honorable disposition of the controversy should no simpler, more direct, and satisfactory method be feasible. It is well, however, to remember that, even if the occasion should arise for arbitration under this resolution—which requires only a majority vote—the agreement specifically to arbitrate would require a two-thirds vote, and that would be hard to get.

DRAFTING THE COLONEL.

Of course Chauncey J. Hamlin, Bainbridge Colby, H. S. Wilkinson, and other Bull Moose leaders in New York want Col. Roosevelt to run for Governor. Their activities yesterday in that behalf were the natural outcome of a desire not to see the Progressive Party reduced to competing with the Socialists for the booby prize in the coming election. Equally of course the Colonel does not want to run. The psychological effect on the voter of repeated defeats is a thing to be counted with in appraising a public man's standing.

Col. Roosevelt, who is as wise as a whole zoological garden of serpents, is perfectly well aware that a defeat for Governor, following on his defeat for President, would mean not merely a loss of prestige but an actual loss of votes in the campaign of 1916. He is perfectly sincere when he puts aside the dangerous crown. Aside from this, he is not merely the leader of his party in the State, but in the nation. This is the most important election year between 1912 and 1916, the year of the mid-Administration elections, the year in which, by the precedents of the past, the voters are to register their first verdict on the Wilson Administration and serve notice on its opponents whether they have or have not a good chance to turn it out. All over the country the Bull Moose is in need of its leader. The elections so far held may not indicate all that the Republicans hope they do, but they intimate unmistakably that the Progressive Party needs stiffening up. Whether or not these elections indicate that the Progressives are returning to the Republican Party, they certainly show that there is considerable apathy and hesitation among a large part of the Bull Moose rank and file, and nothing has occurred to dissipate it. The Colonel could dissipate it, the Bull Moose leaders from Pennsylvania to California imagine, and every megaphone, from Flinn's to Johnson's, is reverberating a call to him for help.

His presence in other States is needed, not only for the mere effect it will have in arousing the voters, but for the very practical effect in perfecting an organization. It is in this matter that the Progressives are weakest. The most crushing defeats that have been administered to them have been where they could not or did not organize, as in Michigan. And they have made little progress in organizing since those defeats. They need the Colonel as much for this as they do for spellbinding purposes. You cannot organize anything without advertisement, and the Colonel's presence is the advertisement needed.

If the Colonel confines himself to New York he will be abandoning the party in the nation in this its dire need. If he consents to run, but still goes West and campaigns for those who want him, who must have him, he will be incurring almost certain defeat in his own State, a defeat which will react most dangerously not only on his personal fortunes but on the future of his party. To take the nomination and then leave his canvass to drift while he goes to the rescue of his necessitous friends would be hardly less perilous than to leave them to their fate and fight only for his own election in New York.

Thus the Colonel's reasons for not wishing to run are politically sound. The urgent need for his running which is felt by the Colbys and Hamlins is now in collision with his wishes. They are talking of forcing him to run, of making such a demand that he will have to yield. Their talk of a "monster petition" will not frighten him; he knows how to deal with trumpery devices of that kind. But if they break away from him and force his nomination against his will he will have to yield. He cannot write a declination in which he can give his real reasons for declining, and to give any other would seem like running away and would dishearten his followers. Evidently it behooves him, if he can, to stop this movement at the beginning. If it gets too far along he will be nominated, and the future of his party in the nation, already dark, will be yet more cloudy with disaster.

UP-STATE DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

"It would be a monstrous injustice to "the up-State District Attorneys, and "to the up-State counties which se"lected their District Attorneys," Gov. Glynn replied Dec. 21 last, denying the request that Mr. Whitman have Statewide powers as a Deputy Attorney General to prosecute the highway graft cases. Twenty-seven up-State District Attorneys have failed to grant the request of the Honest Ballot Association that suspected ballots cast in the election to decide the holding of a Constitutional Convention in 1915 be not destroyed tomorrow, June 6.

The Supreme Court is not so afraid as Gov. Glynn of injuring the feelings of these District Attorneys. Justice Philbin of the First Judicial District has ordered a Statewide preservation of the ballots, which will be duly scrutinized. Inasmuch as twenty-four election officials have been indicted and arrested in Mr. Murphy's district alone, there is good reason to believe that frauds have been perpetrated in districts up-State. By the way, did the people of those twenty-seven up-State counties really select their District Attorneys?

A NEW PHILIPPINES PLAN.

It appears that the scheme for giving to the Philippines qualified independence for a fixed period and complete independence at the close of that period is to be abandoned. Mr. Jones, the Chairman of the Committee on Insular Affairs, has framed a bill, which is said to have the assent of President Wilson, which replaces the wild scheme of two years ago by one which is much nearer sanity in some regards. Its chief feature is that it gives up entirely the fixing of a date for independence, and makes the grant of that depend on the success of the islanders in running the Government to the extent that it will be turned over to them.

There is to be, according to the new plan, a territorial Legislature of two houses to be elected by limited Filipino suffrage. An American Governor General will retain the veto power, but the Commission, which now constitutes the upper house, will be abolished. Power to make treaties or to enact tariff taxes will be withheld from the Legislature. Details of the bill are lacking, and it is not known what disposition is made of the police power, a matter of the greatest importance. Much also will depend on the terms fixed for the exercise of the suffrage. Obviously the uncivilized tribes cannot be admitted to vote, and the conditions that would shut them out must, in all likelihood, be those of property and education. In other words, in the present condition of the islands, the Government would largely be turned over to a relatively small class, hitherto composed of, or led by, the native politicians. At best the new plan would be a remote approach to that self-government of which its authors are professedly enamored.

There is little chance that anything will be done with the bill at this session, even in the House of Representatives, where Mr. Jones intends to press it. Much will depend on the attitude of the President toward the measure. That it has his general approval is probable, but he has too much on his hands of a different and more pressing nature to be inclined to make this one of his own plans. The country is to be congratulated that at any rate the hazardous scheme of definite independence is given up.

HUMBUG.

Sears, the New Thought exponent whose marital troubles are figuring in the newspapers, illustrated a common habit among the "advanced" when, in reply to a reminder from his cross-examiner that he had a wife, he said, "In the eyes of God I never was a married man." What is there about the various schools of scatterbrain thinking that makes common this jaunty and familiar spokesmanship for the Almighty? They have evolved a patter of their own in which this form of speech holds a prominent place. It is a translation of ordinary and disagreeable facts of every-day life into terms of sanctimonious blasphemy. The meaning is as simple when reduced to plain English as the pompous disguise of it is offensive. If one of these persons means to state the plain fact, "Our marriage was a failure from the first," he translates it into, "In the eyes of God I never was a married man." If another wishes to state the equally simple fact, "I loved a woman whom I could "not marry, therefore I disregarded "the laws of the State," he says, "We were married in the sight of God." The foggier the school, the more readily it seems to generate this form of cant.

The Pecksniff of former days disgusted honest people by dragging in the name of God to deck his own virtues; the modern Pecksniff of the upstart philosophies drags in the same name to sanctify his vices, or at least his irregularities, and there is a defiant blatancy about his way of doing it that is infinitely more offensive than was the smug hypocrisy of his predecessor. Sanctimoniousness is even less pleasing when it is heterodox than when it is orthodox.

GEORG BRANDES ON LIBERTY.

"Is that all the liberty you have?" Georg Brandes retorted when asked to admire the Goddess of Liberty in the harbor. Like President Butler, Mr. Brandes thinks the American people are being regulated and restricted; that the condition is the worse in that they are regulating and restricting themselves. In social and industrial life they are enslaved. There is the slavery of the telephone; compared with its torture of insistent calls the "mediaeval rack and thumbscrews were playthings." No one can be alone to have time to think. Men work in droves, and on passenger trains men and women sleep in droves.

But the great critic is not quite cynical. He exclaims at the "public safety accorded your women," who may go anywhere without insult because "you have clean minds here in America." America, like old Venice and Florence, is not only the home of merchants, but is possessed of a sense of beauty and rich in art, the flower of a civilization which is rich in money. It is significant that he picks out Chicago with its stockyards, that recall to him the horrors of the French Revolution, for the praise of American painting displayed in that city's art galleries. They are better attended, in proportion to population, than New York's galleries.

THE TRIALS OF THE DEFENDERS.

A good race is a better test of a boat than a bad beating. When boats are seconds apart on elapsed time over a cup trial course there is promise of yachting fun ahead. When the new Herreshoff production beats by a quarter of a minute the Gardner pretender to primacy, which had won by a quarter of an hour, there is a guarantee that the second best boat is a wonder, and that the heir apparent as the defender of the cup will race true to form. That the defender may be chosen in the manner in which the second race was won, and that the cup may be retained in the same manner, will be the true sportsman's wish. The building of better boats is the object of the races rather than the retention of the cup. Many would rather see it go across the pond, again to be recaptured by the creation of another marine masterpiece, rather than that it should be retained by technicalities in the construction of a deed, or by a victory which did not prove incontestable superiority.

Yesterday the British "nautical crime" took its first spin, under conditions not well adapted to show its qualities. All these marine wonders are fast alone, and "play horse" with anything else afloat which goes by wind power. They must be tested by their kind before any judgment can be formed regarding their speed. Judged by her pictures, Shamrock IV. is a brute of a boat. Looking at her stem she might be a coal barge, except for the towering stick which spreads her canvas and hints at the gait of a true goddess of the sea. Bows on she looks bluff because she is built to sail on her side, and the side lines are made as long as possible. These ridiculous racers lie down to their work, whereas true sailormen—and landlubbers aboard as well—like their craft to stand up under sail. It is hardly necessary to say why good carriers of either cargo or passengers move best on an even keel, as near as may be. There is nothing humorous about a cargo shifted in a storm, or about a deck which cannot be walked with comfort and safety in ordinary conditions of wind and sea. But these thoroughbreds are not built to carry anything except the tons in their fin keels, and their decks are useful only for the preposterous crews necessary to handle their impossible spars and canvas.

Anybody could tell that the old boats were handsome. They were things of life and beauty, rising to the seas they rode as a gull rides the gale. These modern triumphs move with a leaden foot, smashing through the waves under impulse of an acre of cloth which even their skippers are not crazy enough to spread under a good gale for a natural boat to get a move on, and never start a yarn. But they "beat the rule," and they beat each other, and their lines have their beauty to an educated eye, however insulting to the intelligence of simple sailors. They value a boat for service, and like dry decks beneath their feet, and a credit in bank when the voyage is over. But this is a killjoy philosophy. It is known to all that one boat is faster than another, but which is the faster is known to none. Countless thousands want to know the answer, and the racing day when the yachts will not get the front page for theirs will not come until after the cup is lifted, or nailed down for the last time, perhaps.

ALEXANDER E. ORR.

With the death of Alexander E. Orr New York loses one of its most efficient and helpful citizens. The peculiarity of the ability he demonstrated so amply was the broad scope that it took and the variety of service in which it was manifested—in business life, his acumen and energy; in public affairs, the same qualities combined with rectitude and a curious gift of winning rational confidence; in philanthropy, catholic sentiment and unusual soundness of judgment. With these assets he had a certain rare imagination as to the future development of the great community in which his activities and his numerous and extended interests lay.

To him more than to any other one man were due the conception and planning of subway communication, which has already become the greatest municipal achievement of the time, and which is destined to still greater utility, affecting millions yet unborn, but which at the time that he first engaged in the study of it was so doubtful a matter that he was deemed a "dreamer" for the faith that he had in it. A dreamer he was not, but a seer, with remarkable power to carry into effect what he saw. Withal a modest, simple, kindly, and loyal man, who made sweeter the lives of those whose privilege it was to be associated with him.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Telephone Ethics Considered. Several interesting and important questions, none of them easily answered, are created by the people who, though they have telephones, refuse to have their "numbers" in the company's directory and disclose them only to a selected and carefully restricted group of friends and associates. There are a good many such people, and their evident purpose—which they attain—is to get for themselves all the advantages of the telephone service and to elude all the annoyances which others endure as a part of the price for the enormous conveniences and economies of time and money which this invention has made possible.

From one point of view, therefore, the subscriber who keeps his name out of the book is guilty of selfish, a-social conduct. If he were imitated by a majority of the subscribers it is obvious that the value of the telephone would be decreased in exact proportion to the size of the majority, and if they all did it the service would become, if not quite worthless, not far from it.

Of course there are moments when each of us revolts against what has just been called our "slavery" to the telephone, when we resent the ease of access to our attention which it gives to people who have no claim on our time and would not be allowed to pass the doors of our homes or offices. But most of us, most of the time, more or less philosophically accept these little troubles and continue to let ourselves be "called up" by anybody as only a fair return for exercising the same privilege.

The situation is complicated by the existence of pay stations accessible to all, including those who have no telephone of their own. They, too, can call up anybody, without being themselves called up, but for this they pay in both money and inconvenience, so they have a sort of excuse. As a rule, especially in small communities, people who can afford to have a telephone and don't are viewed askance and subjected to a mild ostracism. They really do seem to be so inconsiderate of their neighbors as to deserve punishment.

Bayonne Made a Mistake. A policeman over in Bayonne, according to report, has proclaimed a policy or intention that is calculated to make at least some who have hitherto been inclined to think women could and would be useful in this position hastily revise their opinion. For the report is that Bayonne's feminine wearer of the police shield deems it of necessity or important to stop what she calls "spooning" in the public parks of that city! "There must," she says, or is said to say, "be none of it here under penalty of the law."

What law, and if Bayonne has one that prohibits in its parks what "spooning" probably means, why?

Unquestionably, from the standpoint of lovers, there are more suitable places for the confession of their tender emotions than those subject to public observation, but to not a few of them better places are not accessible, and any place is better than none.

It is a curious fact that men look with a more sympathetic eye on the lovemaking of others than do women. No policeman would dream of starting such a campaign as the one which this misguided prude in uniform proposes—none would fail to recognize that not prohibition, but regulation, of the practice which so offends her is needed.

The indiscretion shown by her may be idiosyncratic, not typically feminine. In that case she proves nothing against policewomen in general, but her folly is ominous, nevertheless.

Cuba Under Its New Administration. In spite of savage threats from a large group of once powerful politicians, the Cuban Supreme Court has sentenced to long terms of imprisonment the murderers of Gen. Riva. Apparently a more severe penalty than this was deserved, for the killing of the late Chief of Police in Havana was deliberate and cold-blooded, and the men who did it trusted to their influence and eminence to escape all punishment. It says much, however, for the present administration of the island that this expectation has been disappointed and that little private wars between rival factions can no longer be carried on with impunity, even by men with high military titles.

Presumably the "Asbertistas" are as much surprised as angered by the court's defiance of their menaces, but as they have quietly submitted to the law, it is evident that they have come at least partially to realize that Cuba under its present President has moved away from and ahead of them.

The lesson is excellent, and it strongly tends to discredit the prophecies of those very wise persons who used to be so sure that the Cubans were incompetent to conduct an orderly and honest Government.

Prevention of Fires His Demand. To view the burning of a building as something other than the misfortune of its owner has long been the custom in many parts of Europe, but the suggestion that fires involve responsibility to the extent of the cost they inflict on the community comes with a shock to most Americans. That is because in this matter we are a reckless and careless people, so accustomed to our enormous annual fire losses that we have taken their inevitability for granted.

Chief Hammitt of the New York City Fire Prevention Bureau presented a wholly different theory this week at the convention of municipal officials in Auburn. He took the position that at least half of our fires are of the distinctly preventable sort, and he proposed the passage of laws under which the owner whose building took fire because he had neglected reasonable precautions not only should be held liable for the expense incurred in putting the fire out, but should also pay for any injuries suffered while extinguishing it. He said, indeed, that legal warrant for exacting such penalties probably now existed, and that a suit to test that question had already been brought.

Should it prove possible under either old or new law to enforce such responsibility as this a sudden and considerable decrease in the number of our fires could confidently be expected to follow, and we would promptly begin to spend in preventing fires a small but sufficient part of the enormous sums now devoted to fighting them.

In no other direction, perhaps, is there such a chance for wise economies, and it is strange that we lack the sense to utilize the opportunity.

FITNESS FOR SUFFRAGE.

What Tribunal Determines If Men Are Properly Qualified?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Silas Tuttle writes on June 1 in a vein so often used by male opponents to woman suffrage that it may be worth while to answer him specifically. He says:

> Very little of what has been said or written goes to show the fitness of women for suffrage. Why should not these leaders give us some practical illustration of their qualification, as, for instance, remarks upon the tariff, upon the Mexican situation, upon the political situation in the city, State, or nation, that we may judge of their ability to cope with the questions that men are today handling.

First, as to practical illustrations of our qualifications for voting, what are the qualifications for voting in New York? One must be a native or naturalized citizen, and a resident for a certain prescribed length of time. That is all.

Can women meet these existing qualifications?

Is there any registration clerk in the whole State of New York who would be empowered to withhold registration from a native or naturalized young man of 21 who was an applicant, unless said applicant could prove that he held satisfactory views (satisfactory to whom?) upon "the tariff, upon the Mexican situation, upon the political situation in the city, State, or nation"?

Mr. Tuttle seems to have been seriously misinformed as to what the real qualifications for voting are.

And when he finally says: "That we may judge their [women's] ability to cope with the questions that men are today handling," one is impelled to ask, who is "we"? For this "we"—in order to be in a position to judge officially must of necessity be a body duly authorized by the laws of the State. The Constitution is the supreme law of the State, and a most thorough search of that document does not reveal a single clause dealing with the ability of prospective voters to cope with public questions.

We would remind Mr. Tuttle and others that all that suffragists are asking is that the sex disqualification be removed, and moreover that we intend to "stick to our last" and not be beguiled into proving that we are overqualified for the vote, in order to please our most exacting critics. We could be kept busy overqualifying clean up to the millennium, for even then there would be some carping soul who would be sure that we were not yet quite ready for the vote, and the carping would be pretty sure to be about in proportion to the indifference which had witnessed, without a qualm, the hordes of young men who had for years been casting their first votes, all unprepared, except that they were 21 and native or naturalized. It all seems different when the shoe is on the other foot.

Executive Secretary National Suffrage Association.

Congressman Moore's Courage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It must be gratifying to thousands of present and former Pennsylvanians, as it certainly is to me, that while, in the matter of the Clayton bill labor exemptions, the entire House of Representatives, with, apparently, but an individual exception, bowed in pusillanimous submission to the dictate of Samuel Gompers and his associates, there was at least one man, Representative J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania, who had the courage to express his abhorrence to class legislators and his defiance of that largest and most cruel of trusts, the Labor Trust.

All honor to Mr. Moore, and may his constituents show their appreciation of his principles and his courage by long retaining him in Congress, or by affording him the opportunity to serve them and his country in some more exalted office!

German May Wine.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Very few Germans who have quaffed tumblers of May wine will agree with the statement in your editorial article of this morning that "May wine is not good for the man of advancing years." On the contrary, men of advancing years consider this refreshing beverage at once healthful and stimulating, without exciting effects. When the herb "Waldmeister" is ready to be plucked it is used to flavor the May wine, made of either Mosel or Rhine wines, and all good Germans, whether young or old, celebrate the glory of Spring by partaking of it.

SUBMARINE FOG SIGNALS.

No Patent Prevents Striking a Bell Under Water.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The question has naturally been raised as to whether a patented apparatus for use in submarine signaling is the only one available.

There is no patent upon slinging a bell overboard and ringing it under water. The moment a ship stops in fog this should be done. Then all navigators on vessels having receivers can quickly locate this warning sound. Navigators on vessels not equipped with receivers can locate such bell sounds at considerable distances, depending, of course, on the strength of the bell sound, by listening below the water line. In other words, a bell weighing fifty pounds struck hard can be heard further than one of less weight if of the same shape. Under such circumstances all the navigator need do is to go below the water line and listen with ear to the skin of the ship—or if that cannot be reached, use a pine stick.

Clearly no patent covers this. It will serve well in an emergency. The main thing, however, is for the steamer that has stopped to make some sound in water in order to indicate her position to any one who can hear her. Above all, sounds in the air should not be trusted. All scientists, all navigators, all lighthouse authorities agree that because sound in the air frequently deceives us, it is an untrustworthy guide. Water is dependable under all conditions. Tide and waves have no effect upon the sound it carries except in narrow estuaries where the tide is very rapid—but such are not navigable waters.

J. B. MILLET.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The submarine bell has proved an efficient means for locating lightships, danger spots, and other fixed objects, being used successfully for stationary purposes only, except on submarine boats. A moving vessel, however, though capable of receiving sound signals, cannot make use of a bell when under way, as, among other undesirable features, it is found that a bell when slung overboard interferes with navigation, or when used in a water-filled tank under the water line, inside of the ship, becomes ineffective. This is the reason that bells are not used on ships to any extent, whereas more than a thousand vessels are fitted out with receiving sets. Therefore there still remained the problem of enabling ships under way to send out submarine sound signals with a range of at least five miles.

In 1912 tests were made by authorization of the Navy Department under my supervision in Newport, R. I., (reported in THE NEW YORK TIMES,) Provincetown, Mass., and Cape Henry, Va., with a new signaling device, using longitudinal vibrations of a steel ribbon fastened to the inside of the hull of the ship, which not only proved successful for signaling when the vessel was under way but by which messages were sent and received by the Morse code within a radius of over six miles. Further successful tests were commenced on board the United States steamship Arkansas, but were interrupted by the ship being suddenly ordered to Mexico.

Mr. Millet has truly said that only submarine sound signals will do for navigation in fog, and since it necessarily follows that vessels must be under way, and as the bell affords no suitable means for such signaling, the above-mentioned apparatus, though still in process of development, has proved to be the first known device which will accomplish the desired end.

A Fog-Signaling Code.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it not high time, in view of the terrible marine disasters which follow upon each other in such alarming succession, that some sensible and substantial correction in the "Rules of the Road" be undertaken? It is a well-known fact even to a schoolboy that true direction of a sound is hard to determine in a fog. It is also a fact that when fog suddenly envelops a steaming vessel her engines cannot come to a full stop without the blowing of her safety valves, owing to the intense fire in the furnaces, which cannot be slackened before a sufficient amount of green coal has been spread over the grates. This roaring escape of steam makes it difficult to hear the signals of another vessel. For the sake of safety, for the sake of properly locating an approaching or receding vessel in fog, I would compel not only a navigator or an officer, but the quartermaster, to understand the Continental Morse Code, and be able to use the siren in the same manner as the telegraph operator uses his sounder.

O. HENRY: IN MEMORIAM.

(Died June 5, 1910.)

In the twilight of the city, as I dreamed, as I dreamed,
Tangled shadows fell fantastic on the ever-pulsing street,
Little lights began to glimmer through the filmy veil of night
And I knew that work had ended by the homeward-turning feet.
Then a tide of men and women rolled before me from the west.
Breaking over into houses, into hall and alley swirled;
Back from shop and store and workroom to the refuge of the home;
Through the sluices of the city beat the power of the world.

And I wished I had his vision—he who saw and understood,
As he watched the men and women on the stage of everyday,
All the wrangling and the toiling and the bungling of the cast,
While it potters through the eons in the great Creation Play.
How I longed to sense the meaning of the God behind it all,
Of the spirit as it brightens through the coarsest human flesh,
Of the music, sweetly hidden in the roaring city din,
Of the single purpose showing in the tangle of the mesh.

Far below me boomed the thunder and the tidal wave beat high.
On its crest I saw the mummers of the passing comedy;
Shopgirls, idlers, peddlers, salesmen, errand-boys with lagging feet,
Kind and sad and hostile faces in the swelling human sea.
And in each I felt a story worthy of the master's skill,
Sensed the presence of the passions that control the human breast,
Knew an epic lived within them, dumbly waiting to be told,
But a mind that knew the meaning slept in its eternal rest.

What a world he left behind him, what a web of wonder tales,
Fact and fiction subtly woven on the spinning wheel of Truth!
How he caught the key of living in the noises of the town,
Major music, minor dirges, rhapsodies of Age and Youth!
In the twilight of the city, as I dreamed, as I dreamed,
Watching that eternal drama in the ever-pulsing street,
All about me seemed to murmur of the master passed away,
And his requiem was sounded in the city's fever beat.

FACTORY CLASS AS MODEL.

Educators Applaud Work of Immigrant Girls Instructed in School of Sicher Plant.

An audience of more than 200 persons, chiefly educators and social workers, gathered last night at the white goods factory of D. E. Sicher & Co. at 49 West Twenty-first Street, for exercises conducted by thirty-eight immigrant girls employed by the concern.

A year ago few of the girls could speak more than a few words of English. They came from Russia, Italy, Austria, Hungary, and Roumania. When, at the request of the Sicher firm, the Board of Education established a class in the factory and made it a branch of Public School 4, all of the immigrants employed there received instruction in the morning. Their teacher was Miss Florence D. Myers.

The walls of the top floor of the loft building were hung last night with the records of the progress made by the young women. The proofs which entitled them to receive certificates consisted chiefly of essays about 100 words long. They were well written and expressed. This is the first school for immigrant working girls in this city and probably the first of its kind in the world. The speakers last night predicted that it would be the germ of a great movement.

The thirty-eight girls, who in their white dresses were as proud as the graduating class at any commencement in the country, were represented by Miss Rebecca Meyer, who told how much she and her classmates appreciated the opportunities afforded them of learning our language. Then other members of the class explained the evolution of the undergarment manufacture. Finally the whole class gave a demonstration of their physical culture exercises.

Dudley D. Sicher, who planned the school and induced the Board of Education to start it, told of the benefit the class had been to the firm, as well as to the pupils.

"This is the first attempt of the kind in New York City, possibly in the world," he said, "and is the beginning of a great movement to hasten assimilation necessary to national unity; to promote industrial betterment by reducing friction caused by failure to comprehend directions and to decrease the waste and loss of wage incidental to the illiterate worker.

"In order to extend this work of reducing illiteracy among the half million adults, mostly immigrants, in the City of New York, the active co-operation of school authorities, employers, labor unions, industrial authorities, and the public, is needed. It is the present belief of the firm that the workers who have been thus trained have gained from 20 to 70 per cent. in efficiency."

Prof. Henry E. Jenkins, who presided, said that one valuable result of such schools would be the making of patriotic Americans of immigrants. Supt. William H. Maxwell of the Board of Education said that when the school had been suggested to him he had cut all the red tape that stood in the way of it.

"I have heard a great deal about trades schools," he said. "I have read masses of literature criticising the Board of Education for not establishing more industrial and trades schools, but in all that I have read or heard there has been but little of practical value.

"But I was told a story a little more than a year ago by a lady who had seen a foreman give repeated directions to an illiterate immigrant girl for running a machine. The girl watched and nodded to show that she understood how the machine should be run. She took charge of it at once. It broke down almost immediately. It was explained to her by signs again. She took charge of it again, and a second time it broke down. Again she watched carefully, and nodded to show that she understood. This time when she went to the machine her arm was torn off.

"The accident was due to the fact that the girl could not understand directions. It led me to make up my mind that one of the greatest of industrial schools needed was one that would teach the English language to illiterate foreigners. Accordingly, when this chance came we grasped it eagerly."

State Commissioner of Education John H. Finley said that the success of the school offered a solution for one of the State's greatest problems, the education of the immigrant. Mary Antin, author of "The Promised Land," said that a system of instruction to immigrants, after the example of this school, would be fulfilling the promise which America had made to the world.

SAMPSON'S ALL TO FAMILY.

Life Trust Fund Income to Cousin Only Outside Gift.

Henry Sampson, the wealthy oilcloth manufacturer and collector of rare porcelains, who died on May 24 at his home, 14 West Fifty-eighth Street, left his entire estate, except one trust fund, which he established for a cousin, to his wife and two children. The exact value of his property has not been made public, but it is known to be much more than $1,000,000.

In his will, filed for probate yesterday, Mr. Sampson directed that his wife, Julia Page Sampson, shall have the use, during her lifetime, of their Fifty-eighth Street home with all its furnishings and all the works of art contained therein, with the sole exception of the collection of porcelains. This collection, he directed, should be sold and the money turned into the residuary estate. This sale, however, had taken place prior to Mr. Sampson's death, the entire collection of 1,000 pieces having been purchased for more than $1,000,000 last January by Edgar Gorer.

Mr. Sampson set aside 400 shares of Amalgamated Copper stock, and directed that the income should be paid, during her lifetime, to his cousin, Delia P. Morgridge, of Boston. This stock, at its present dividend rate, will yield $2,400 a year. After his cousin's death, the stock is to go into the residuary estate.

The residuary estate, is to be held in trust for Julia Page Sampson, who is to receive the income during her lifetime. After her death the money will go in equal shares to Henry Sampson, Jr., of Douglaston, L. I., his son, and Mrs. Annie Gillette, his daughter. Mr. Sampson directed that his house at 111 East Sixty-fourth Street, now leased by his sister, should be kept as a part of the estate and that his sister's lease should be continued.

The executors of the will are Henry B. Dominick, John M. Campbell and Henry Sampson Jr.

BROOKLYN A FLAGSHIP AGAIN

Famous Spanish War Cruiser to Head Asiatic Squadron.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—The cruiser Brooklyn, which has been stationed at the local navy yard for nearly ten years, and which at one time was ordered to the scrap heap, will soon sail for China to take her place as flagship of the Asiatic squadron.

The Brooklyn was Admiral Schley's flagship during the Spanish-American war, and led the fighting when the Spanish fleet was destroyed at Santiago. The ship was struck about twenty times by shells, and her sides still show where the blows were received.

Several years after the war the vessel was sent to the Philadelphia Navy Yard, where she was put out of commission. About a year ago work was begun on the vessel and she was completely overhauled. Today she is one of the best and fastest cruisers in the navy.

MITCHEL WILL MAKE EFFICIENCY RULE

Tells Mayors of State That He Will Bar Politics in Promotions.

WILL OPEN DOORS TO ALL

Proposes a Conference of Mayors of the Nation—Lay Urges More Parks in Cities.

AUBURN, June 4.—Mayor John Purroy Mitchel of New York City, in an address tonight before the State Conference of Mayors and City Officials, suggested that a nation-wide conference of municipal authorities be called to meet next year at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, under the auspices of the New York State body.

Mayor Mitchel referred to his recent study of municipal methods in Chicago and other Western cities, and said that in New York he intended to establish efficiency records for all city employes, upon which promotion would be based.

"We studied Chicago's municipal and county civil service and its plan of standardization of salaries of employes," Mayor Mitchel told the conference. "We saw the Bureau of Efficiency which they maintain, showing records of efficiency upon which all promotions are based. We need such methods in New York.

"It is our intention to run the affairs of New York on a business basis, and the reports that have come to me lead me to believe that we are going to be able to conduct the business of the city next year without increasing our taxes, and if we are able to do that then I do not see why we cannot go through the four years of our administration in the same way.

"We are going to try to establish standards by creating efficiency records and giving those men and women who have so long depended upon politics for advancement an opportunity to go ahead on the basis of merit and work done. The day of politics for help or hurt for city employes in New York City is past. We are going to put promotion and punishment on a just basis. There is no more vitalizing force than that of opening the doors of opportunity to city employes to advance in their work.

"In closing, I wish to say that I see no reason why all our conferences should belong to the cities of New York. It has occurred to me that it would be a valuable thing for all the cities of the country if they were to meet, say just once, next year at the Panama Exposition and interchange ideas and discuss their common problems, just as you have discussed them tonight."

Mayor Will of Syracuse indorsed Mayor Mitchel's views and urged legislation to remove salary limits in order to retain efficient men. Charles Downing Lay, in an address at the conference this afternoon, said that parks in cities would increase in number in the future.

"The day when the boy or the man can play ball on the vacant lot or on his own place is rapidly passing," said Mr. Lay. "Nor have many of us incomes sufficient to join country clubs. The community, therefore, must provide the facilities which the individual can no longer obtain."

The conference to-night elected the following officers for the year 1914-15:

President—Roslin M. Cox, Middletown; Vice President—Louis Will, Syracuse; Treasurer—George A. Brock, Lockport; Secretary—C. P. Capes, New York.

The following were elected members of the Municipal Bureau Council:

Joseph T. Lennon, Yonkers, Chairman; J. J. C. Irving, Binghamton; Otto Pfaff, Oneida; W. J. Griffing, New Rochelle, and Thomas M. O'Neill, Auburn.

Troy was named as the conference city in 1915.

COLLEGES ANTIQUATED.

Teaching Must Be More Lucrative, Bryn Mawr's President Declares.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—Miss M. Carey Thomas, President of Bryn Mawr College, in an address to the graduating class today expressed the view that if institutions of higher education in the United States expected to meet effectively and successfully the new demands that were being made upon them for more advanced and scientific teaching methods they would have to set themselves immediately to the work of making the teaching profession more lucrative and more attractive generally. By this means, she said, men and women capable of becoming brilliant teachers would not be diverted from the educational field by the rewards offered by business, commerce, and industry.

Dr. Thomas said the students of today were demanding new methods, more definite teaching, and other improvements in the educational systems to get the services of brilliant, up-to-date instructors.

Dr. Thomas believes the textbook and lecture systems in the colleges are no longer effective, and these antiquated systems must be supplanted by more modern teaching systems that will develop the reasoning power in students. If educators do not realize this, she said, "colleges will become places for the dead, not for the living."

THRONG AT WEDDING OF MISS CUMNOCK

HEDGE AND GARDEN EFFECT

Full Choral Service—Miss Eugenie A. Philbin Maid of Honor—Reception at Bride's Home—The Guests.

Gray skies and gusts of rain did not deter a large and fashionable gathering from witnessing yesterday afternoon the wedding of George Barnard Wagstaff, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff of New York and Babylon, L. I., to Miss Mary Cutting Cumnock, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Cumnock, in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square. It was one of the largest weddings of the Spring and Summer season.

The chancel of the church was decorated in white and green to represent an entrance through a hedge into a garden. Banks of shining green foilage made the hedge, which was topped by white peonies, and these ran down the ends of the hedge outlining the opening to the garden.

There was a full choral service, the choir coming down to meet and precede the bridal procession, the Lohengrin Wedding March being the processional. The Rev. Karl Reiland officiated.

The bride, who walked with her father, who gave her in marriage, a tall, willowy blonde, wore white satin draped with exquisite old point lace worn by three generations of brides, including her grandmother and mother. There was a long court train suspended by pearl straps from the shoulders, and this was lined with tulle frills, and on the one side, turned back at the end, were trails of orange blossoms. The corsage was of old rose point lace with elbow sleeves of the lace. It had a deep V-shaped opening, and under the lace there was chiffon. The satin skirt opened in the front, with rounded corners, over a deep flounce of point lace, giving a petticoat effect, and a wide scarf of point lace was wound in sash fashion around the waist and hips. The gown was also heavily embroidered in pearls about the hips. The bridal veil, wide and long, was of priceless old point lace, caught about her fair hair with sprays of orange blossoms, and her bouquet was made up of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Eugénie A. Philbin, was the maid of honor. Mrs. David Wagstaff was the matron of honor, and Miss Katherine Blodgett of Grand Rapids, Mich., a cousin of the bride, was the flower girl, although she was as tall as the bridesmaids and was dressed like them, but carried an oldtime nosegay with a paper frill. The four bridesmaids were the Misses Mai Duncan Watson, Maud Arden Kennedy, Josephine Nicoll and Margaret Barnard Wagstaff, a sister of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were in peach colored chiffon over taffeta of the same shade with bodices to match. The chiffon of the skirts was lifted and laid in deep plaits in front and back of the hips, falling in full folds, and the corsages were draped in folds from the shoulders to the waistline outlining deep V's, the edges being bound with satin of the same shade. The kimono cut sleeves came to the elbows and were of the chiffon, and there were silk girdles.

Their rather large hats were of sand-colored Neapolitan, with irregularly bent brims that formed sharp little points, and these were trimmed in sprays arranged to form irregular wreaths of small mignon and yellow roses. They carried long, flat arms bouquets of mignon and small pink rambler roses and ferns. The matron and the maid of honor were gowned like them, but their frocks were a much deeper shade of peach.

Mr. Wagstaff's best man was his brother, David Wagstaff, and the ushers were another brother, Samuel Jones Wagstaff; Moses Taylor Pyne, Jr., Elliot C. Cowdin, 2d, McKim Hollins, Edward F. Hutton, John W. Cutler, Louis A. Shaw, Albert H. Hoffman, George G. Bourne, Courtlandt Dixon Moss, Eveleyn Irving, and Frederick Frelinghuysen.

The church ceremony was followed by a small reception for the relatives and a very few intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom at the Cumnock town house, 111 East Thirty-ninth Street, which was decorated with palms, ferns, roses, and Spring flowers.

Mrs. Cumnock, the mother of the bride, who received, wore deep yellow taffeta with a short train of yellow chiffon and a tunic of ecru lace. The corsage, cut very low at the back, was of yellow chiffon veiled with ecru lace with elbow sleeves of lace. The girdle was of taffeta, and a cluster of yellow orchids was caught at the left side. Her large hat was ecru and brown straw massed with yellow orchids with orange spotted centres. Mrs. Walter Cutting, the bride's grandmother, wore a trailing white gown with an embroidered white moire coat and a pure white hat trimmed with white. Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, the mother of the bridegroom, wore a purplish blue chiffon coat and skirt with a figured blue tunic topped by a small high hat with high plaitings of black tulle rising from twists of black moire.

Among those at the church were Mrs. Oliver Harriman, in black chiffon and silk, topped by a wide-brimmed black tulle hat, with drooping black ostrich plumes; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Cumnock, Dr. Russell A. Hibbs and Mrs. Hibbs, Miss Juliana Cutting, James De W. WEDDED IN JOHN STREET.

Miss Helen L. Streeter Marries Rev. F. B. Harris in Historic Edifice.

The wedding of Miss Helen Louise Streeter, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Lewis Richard Streeter, and the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal Church at Long Branch, N. J., took place at 8 o'clock last evening in the historic old John Street Methodist Church. Bishop Luther B. Wilson, the resident Methodist Bishop of New York, performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Dr. James W. Marshall of the New Jersey Conference.

A wedding in John Street is an unusual occurrence these days, and it is only now and then that a church wedding is held below Chambers Street. The John Street Church, the cradle of Methodism in New York, is in the heart of the financial district, and the few pedestrians in the narrow street, which is usually deserted by 7 o'clock, were amazed last night at the sight of a bridal party and guests entering the old church. Seventy years ago there were many private residences in this neighborhood, and weddings at the church were of ordinary occurrence.

The bride is the youngest daughter of the pastor of the church, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of white crêpe de chine with a court train, with panels of satin and pearl trimmings. Her lace veil was that worn by her mother at her wedding, and was caught up by sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses.

Miss Mildred Streeter attended her sister as maid of honor. She was in flowered crêpe de chine trimmed with old rose taffeta, and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas.

Montfort Schley, took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, at Forty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Herbert Shipman, rector of the church. The decorations were Marguerites and palms. None except relatives were asked to the ceremony, about twenty in all, which was followed by a reception for about 200 guests at the residence of the bride's father, 24 West Fifty-fourth Street.

There were no ushers. Mr. Bonnell's best man was his brother, Geoffrey Bonnell.

Mr. Bonnell is a great grandson of John Harper, one of the founders of the firm of Harper Brothers.

SCHUMANN-HEINK'S STORY TOLD TO JURY

Singer Three Hours on Stand at Divorce Trial in Chicago—Shaken with Sobs.

MRS. DEAN CO-RESPONDENT

Depositions Tell of Rapp's Attentions to Her—Wife Indignantly Resents Aspersions Upon Her Good Name.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 4.—Silent, expectant, straining forward to catch each word, a crowd which filled Judge Sullivan's courtroom listened today to the shattered love story of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink and William Rapp, Jr.

For more than three hours the great singer occupied the witness chair.

"I didn't want a divorce," she told the jury brokenly. "I told my husband that I was happy as I was, with my children and my art."

For a moment the singer broke down. Sobs shook her body and tears coursed down her cheeks. Then she wiped her eyes and resumed the attitude of calm defiance which she had maintained throughout the trial.

Mme. Schumann-Heink testified that her husband, from whom she separated three years ago, had been very friendly with "a blonde lady in New York," whom she subsequently named as Mrs. Catherine E. Dean. Two depositions were read, one from Mrs. Julia Williams, a maid formerly employed by Mrs. Dean, and one from a New York detective, who told of numerous visits to a Fifth Avenue restaurant made by Mrs. Dean and Rapp. According to his deposition, the detective followed Rapp many nights from his office in West Thirty-fourth Street to various places where he met Mrs. Dean. The deposition of Mrs. Williams was to the effect that Rapp had lived at the apartment of Mrs. Dean for several months in 1913.

In his opening statement to the jury Elias Mayer, attorney for the complainant, had named Mrs. Dean as co-respondent.

"We will show," he had declared, "that this defendant lived in the apartment of the co-respondent at 337 Holmes Street, and that later they were together at 2,729 Manhattan Avenue. We will show that Rapp sent Mrs. Dean a diamond engagement ring, and that he wrote her a letter in which he said he had no steady income, but would send her $25 a week if she would be satisfied."

In the cross-examination Mme. Schumann-Heink frequently expostulated with her husband's attorney.

"Let me say what I wish, please," she begged. "I do not mean to say the wrong thing."

Not in Love with McNamara.

Rapp charged in a cross-bill that his wife had been too friendly with other men. She denied all such accusations. She said she never had any love for Edward McNamara, a one-time policeman, who visited her in New Jersey. She declared he came for music lessons, not for lovemaking—that they sang together on the stage.

"Who was with you in Caldwell, N. J.?" the attorney asked. "Wasn't there a man named McNamara?"

The question aroused Mme. Schumann-Heink's wrath. Her eyes blazed.

"I never have lived with any man," she answered. "I have lived alone since my husband left."

"I hadn't asked you that," the lawyer replied.

The singer told of a consultation with Rapp at her Chicago home last July. She testified that her husband said then he wanted a divorce.

"I didn't want a divorce, I told him," she said. "I am happy as I am, with my children and my art. I told him I would never think of marrying again. Always I said I never wanted a divorce."

In June of last year the singer went to Culver, Ind., to be present at the graduation of her son, Franz George Washington Heink, from the military academy there.

"Did you go alone?" asked Ben. M. Smith, counsel for Rapp.

"My daughter, my chauffeur, my cooks, my waiters, and a gentleman went with me," was the reply.

"And who was the gentleman?"

"Mr. George Baldwin."

The witness rented a cottage there and remained five days.

"Where did Baldwin live?" asked the lawyer, but an objection shut off the answer.

The singer's eyes filled with tears in speaking of improving her house in New Jersey. She apologized for her limited command of English. She said she had eight children—one adopted and seven by previous marriages. The oldest, she said, was 32.

Lawyer Smith directed his first queries to ascertain whether the witness, who was born in Prague, Bohemia, fifty-three years ago, had a right to sue in this country. She said she had been singing in the United States for fifteen years.

"Were you at home last Christmas?" she was asked.

"At home last Christmas? Of course I was; I couldn't forget the most important things in my life," came the answer.

Tidies Up and Does Washing.

Mme. Schumann Heink gave her residence as 3,672 Michigan Avenue. Her domestic traits were remembered by the spectators with smiles when, in insisting that this was her real home, she said: "When I am here I live there, and every day I help in tidying up and cleaning the place. I do washing, too."

A letter received by the complainant from her husband was read into the record by the singer's counsel. The letter was writetn in German under the date line, "437 Deming Place, Chicago, June 27, 1913." It outlined a plan by which the singer could obtain a divorce without opposition. Both in substance and in tone it was one of the most remarkable documents ever introduced in a courtroom.

"Dear Wife," it began, "my coming to Chicago is for the purpose of bringing about a conference with you to clear up our affair. Only a personal talk between us alone is possible, because I have to make propositions which can only be agreed upon personally between us."

The letter then enumerates seven advantages which the writer says would result from the adoption of the plan. Among them were listed an offer to permit Madame Schumann-Heink to be the complainant and a promise that her suit would be uncontested.

"This plan," the letter continues, "would be more respectable than a sensational proceeding fought out in open court before a gaping audience, and would avoid everything indecent."

The letter was introduced by Madame Schumann-Heink's attorneys. Its introduction also had been planned by counsel for the defendant. The translation read in court had been made by Sidney Stein of counsel for the complainant. Its accuracy was challenged by the defense, which will introduce an expert to retranslate the letter.

From the portion of the translation upon which the defense concentrated its attack it became evident to those in the courtroom that the defense was hinging its case upon some secret which the testimony previously had not even suggested. The German word "geheimniss" in the translation of the complainant's counsel appeared as "confidences." The defense contended that the proper translation of the word is "secret." The attitude of the defense was taken by those present as implying some sinister secret which it contended was referred to in the disputed word. That the secret was something in the life of Mme. Schumann-Heink was hinted in the argument of the defense.

Hans Schulger, a butler employed by the singer, testified that no man had ever spent the night at her home.

ORR, SUBWAY PIONEER.

Chamber of Commerce Hears of Rapid Transit's Beginning.

The Chamber of Commerce at its monthly meeting yesterday listened to addresses of appreciation of the life and services to the city of the late Alexander E. Orr. President Seth Low of the Chamber, Jacob H. Schiff, A. Barton Hepburn, Eugenius H. Outerbridge, and John Claflin were the principal speakers. After an appropriate resolution had been presented by Mr. Outerbridge in regard to Mr. Orr's death and adopted by the Chamber, President Low appointed this committee to attend the funeral today: A. Barton Hepburn, John Claflin, Eugenius H. Outerbridge, Henry Hentz, Cleveland H. Dodge, Jacob H. Schiff, John A. Stewart, Charles M. Pratt, J. Pierpont Morgan, Charles A. Schieren, Gates W. McGarrah, Elbridge G. Snow, Welding Ring, Howard C. Smith, and Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr.

In his speech, Mr. Low referred to Mr. Orr's efforts to have the Subway built. He said:

"After the plan had been made and adopted, Mr. Orr made every possible effort to interest large financial powers in the execution of the work without the slightest success; and it was begun only because an obscure contractor had more courage than the men reputed to be men of vision. This contractor undertook the contract, and, before he was obliged to qualify, he succeeded in securing from Mr. Belmont the financial backing that was necessary."

August Belmont discussed the construction of the Cape Cod Canal when the Chamber turned to the business of the day. The Hon. Ernest Siegfried, son of Jules Siegfried, Minister of Commerce of France, was the Chamber's guest at the meeting and luncheon afterward.

His own compositions comprise all varieties, from dances and songs to orchestra pieces. Some of his compositions were performed by the Manuscript Society and in Theodore Thomas's concerts. His chief work was a translation of Sechter's celebtated treatise, "The Correct Order of Fundamental Harmonies," which has reached its eleventh edition. Other musical writings of his have been used as textbooks in the Normal School of this city.

In 1875 Mr. Muller visited Franz Liszt at Weimar and had the satisfaction of hearing Liszt play his, Muller's, Symphony from the manuscript-score. In 1892 Mr. Muller visited Anton Rubinstein, who played Mr. Muller's two organ sonatas, and praised them highly. The late Mr. Dudley Buck pronounced Muller "the greatest contrapuntist of the country."

H. C. FAHNESTOCK, BANKER, IS DEAD

Vice President of First National and Director in Several Railroads Was in 80th Year.

ASSOCIATE OF JAY COOKE

Gave $50,000 to Cathedral of St. John the Divine and $100,000 to Nurses' Training School.

Harris Charles Fahnestock, for many years a prominent banker, died yesterday morning at his home, 457 Madison Avenue, after two weeks' illness from erysipelas and a complication of diseases. He was in his eightieth year. Gibson Fahnestock, one of his sons, who had been living abroad for a number of years, was notified of his father's critical illness two weeks ago and was at the death bed when Mr. Fahnestock died. In spite of his advanced age Mr. Fahnestock rallied from his illness early in this week, and it was thought that he had a chance of recovery. On Wednesday, however, he sank rapidly.

Mr. Fahnestock was Vice President of the First National Bank of this city and a director of the Southern Railway, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Rilroad, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the American Cotton Oil Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company. Although he never attended school after his sixteenth year, he made a close study of banking and was considered one of the foremost authorities on the subject in the United States. He was a trustee of the Metrtpolitan Museum of Art, of which he was formerly treasurer. He was a benefactor of the Post-Graduate Hospital, to which he gave a large sum of money in memory of his wife, who died in 1898. He donated $100,000 for a nurses' training school in 1899. In 1907 he gave $50,000 for the building of the west arch, or "crossing," of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Mr. Fahnestock was born in Harrisburg, Penn., on Feb. 27, 1835, and was the son of Adam K. and Sibyl Amelia Fahnestock, who owned a store in that city. He showed early inclination for business and while attending Harrisburg Academy, a preparatory school, also worked in his father's store. At 16 he obtained employment in the Harrisburg National Bank, of which he soon became paying teller. He became a partner in the old banking firm of Jay Cooke & Co., Washington, D. C., in 1861, and first attracted attention by negotiating for large war loans during the civil war. It was while in Washington that he first became interested in railroads, and he became treasurer of the Washington & Georgetown Line, the first line of horse cars in Washington. In 1866 he came to New York as a member of the firm of Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co., remaining in it until it suspended in 1873. During this time he was interested in the building of the Northern Pacific Railroad. When Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co. disbanded he made an arrangement with John Thompson and his son, Samuel C. Thompson, President of the First National Bank, who controlled it, by which he took charge of the bond department, with the agreement that in 1877 he was to become an officer of the bank and to obtain control of it. When he was elected Vice President and Director of the bank, and obtained control, in 1877, the Thompsons started the Chase National Bank.

Throughout his business career Mr. Fahnestock was an active church worker. He built the Sunday School of Epiphany Church, in Washington, D. C., while he was in the banking business in the city during the civil war. It was at this time that he entered the Episcopal Church, having been the son of Presbyterian parents. In New York he joined the congregation of St. Thomas's Church, and later became a vestryman. He was also a trustee of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the Charity Organization Society, and a member of the Century, Union League, Union, Metropolitan and Church Clubs, and a member and patron of the American Museum of Natural History.

MEXICO

Don't disappoint yourself by failing to order next Sunday's New York Times. The rotogravure section will present a series of delightful pictures showing something of the picturesque and historic charm of Mexico. The Pictorial Section will be crowded with remarkable photographs, including the first pictures ever made of the trophy rooms of the Roosevelt home at Oyster Bay, new portraits of well-known people, cup defender yacht and Belmont Park race pictures, and a very striking portrait of Miss Willard, who is to marry Kermit Roosevelt in Madrid next week. The magazine features include another article by ex-President Taft on the "Trusts," a study of the Russian-Jewish situation by Kurt Aram, a delightful interview with Justin Huntly McCarthy, and answers to some remarkable questions, such as, "Is Bertha M. Clay a man,—the author of recently written detective stories?" "Do we need a public defender as well as a public prosecutor?" "Are ocean disasters teaching safety devices?" These are only a few of the features arranged for next Sunday. Hundreds were disappointed last Sunday because unable to buy The New York Times. Place a definite order today with your newsdealer. The Promise Of A Profit

Human nature is so constituted that the promise of a profit is more than likely to outweigh sound judgment. So that, when it comes to investing for safety, don't let the question of profit enter into your calculations. Pay strict attention, on the contrary, to the quality of the security to be afforded your principal. If you work along this line, it is almost a foregone conclusion that you will have no need to worry about the prompt payment of either your interest or your principal. Our Circular 1434, describing a diversified list of conservative investments, will be sent you promptly on request.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Go Higher—More Hopeful View Taken of Rate Case and Legislation Outlook.

Two matters in which the financial community is keenly interested and about which it has lately expressed concern were discussed more hopefully yesterday. Fundamentally, opinion regarding them was hardly altered, but the Street's surface treatment of them was in more hopeful vein to a sufficient extent to influence market sentiment favorably. The first of these was the rate case, about which within the last few days misgivings had been expressed. Yesterday traders seemed to be impressed with the repeated assertions that the decision would be in favor of the railroads. The other matter was the proposed anti-trust legislation, of which it was being said in some quarters that Congress might adjourn without enacting these bills into law. This ran counter not only to what has been the general expectation, but counter also to the known determination of the Administration to have its programme of new corporation legislation carried through at this session. There are enough people in Wall Street who feel certain that this year will bring a change in the political complexion of Congress to make a postponement of this legislation appear tantamount to its defeat, and this point of view is taken count of in any thought which the Street gives to the possibility of a failure of this legislation at the present session.

Upon such changes in viewpoint on matters with which Wall Street discussion has long been dealing rests at the moment the day-to-day drift of stock market sentiment. Positive developments of real moment to the stock market have for some time been rare incidents of the news, and from without there has for a good while past come no strong impulse, either favorable or unfavorable, so far as the supply or demand for stocks is concerned. Meanwhile the great ease in money facilities the market expression of any hopefulness which is engendered among those who look forward to the favorable developments which are relied on to give increased impetus to business at large, and through that to the market for stocks.

Bearing as they do on the possible extent of any further gold demand which may be made on this market, the current statements of the great central banks of Europe are of weekly interest at present. The Bank of France this past week gained no less than $10,400,000 gold, but the report of the Bank of England, as was the case with last week's statement, while indicating that the gold drain on that institution has ceased failed to show any substantial gain in the Bank's bullion holdings. Evidently the record gold holdings which the Bank of France has accumulated renders the gold demand from that quarter less keen than it was, but so long as the English Bank does not make greater headway toward a higher percentage of reserve than it has lately made there will remain the likelihood of this market being called upon to contribute to the English gold supply, as it has already liberally contributed to the Continental demand.

The recent belief that the gold outflow had about come to an end was based in considerable measure upon the expectation that when the South African gold arrivals become available to the Bank of England, as they did in large part this week and last, that bank would be able to add largely to its gold supply. That expectation has not yet been realized, and New York therefore still faces the possibility of having to ship more gold to Europe. Sterling exchange was a little higher again yesterday, but the present advance is proving a much more deliberate movement than the rise which culminated ten days ago. This no doubt is in part due to the increased disposition to draw against foreign credits at this high rate of exchange, a disposition which is naturally increased by the prospect of heavy agricultural exports this Fall.

A sidelight on the confidence with which unusually large sales of agricultural staples to foreign markets are expected is supplied by the banking arrangements which are now being made by grain exporting houses. The banks are receiving requests from some such houses for large increases in the credits customarily extended to these concerns. These requests are based directly upon the present indication that the country will this year have a very large exportable surplus of grains.

A Railroad Millennium.

In local banking and financial circles it was thought yesterday that if all of Herr von Gwinner's speech to the American Luncheon Club in Berlin had been cabled it would have been seen that he had qualified in some ways his assertion that American railroads should be given a 50 per cent. increase in freight rates. An increase of that size, if made at one time, would so revolutionize business as to stop much of the traffic instead of increasing it. Fifty per cent. is much more than the traffic would bear. In many industries the margin of profit on articles produced is so narrow that even a moderate increase in rates would halt production, and there are comparatively few articles which could stand as much as Herr von Gwinner suggested. He would increase the railways' net revenues by hundreds of millions, where their managers would be well pleased to get tens of millions. The Eastern roads which are now trying to get a 5 per cent. increase figure that a horizontal increase of that amount would add $50,000,000 a year to their revenues. A 50 per cent. increase covering the entire country would add more than a billion dollars, and most of this would be carried through to net earnings—after prices of manufactured products had been advanced sufficiently to enable them to bear the increased cost of transportation.

Good Demand for New Bonds.

The offering of $30,000,000 of St. Paul 4½s was well received yesterday, and a large part of the issue was sold. The bond market is not greedy for new securities, but it has been comparatively free of them for a few weeks and appeared ready to absorb these bonds. As the bankers have not bought the $30,000,000 of St. Paul 4½s, but are acting as selling agents for the company, it is not likely that the unsold portion of the issues, if any remains, will come upon the market soon.

Lehigh's Earnings.

Weakness in Lehigh Valley shares in the past few days has carried the price down almost to the low figure for the year, which was 132½. Yesterday the issue sold from 135½ down to 134, but closed at 135. It would seem that if the talked-of dividend reduction comes at the meeting on June 17 it will not be forced upon the Directors by current earnings. The company's net operating income for the first ten months of this year decreased $2,350,000, an amount equivalent to 3.8 per cent. on the stock, but the indications are that the road will still earn its dividend requirements with a small margin to spare. The smaller demand for anthracite resulting from a great deal of mild weather last Winter was the principal factor in reducing the Lehigh's revenues. About 45 per cent. of the company's total revenue comes from this business.

Redemptions Show a Falling Off.

As a result of the recent Treasury notice to national banks that they would have to stand express charges on clean banknotes sent in for redemption there have been fewer of these notes sent in and a noteworthy decline in the volume of redemptions, thus accomplishing the purpose that the Treasury had in view. The local banks have lately sorted over more carefully than they used to the notes received from correspondents, and there has been, in consequence, less "sound" currency sent to Washington. Also, some of the institutions of the financial district which have had to make payments to the Sub-Treasury of money received on deposit as the product of internal revenue collections have delivered banknotes instead of legal tender, and the Sub-Treasury has looked after redemptions which otherwise would have fallen on the banks. Certain banks have continued to send down to the Treasury large amounts of banknotes for redemption, although not in the quantity common before the order was issued, while others have dispatched very little. The banks are watching closely for opportunity to put as much as possible of the currency which comes to them into circulation. Those institutions which supply cash to corporations for payroll purposes are making use of national banknotes where formerly considerable legal tender was employed.

Signs of Co-operation.

Since the banks began to curtail redemptions some if not all of them have had no deductions made in payments by the Treasury Department for banknotes sent in. The Treasury sends to the redeeming bank a warrant, calling for legal tender, which amounts to the face value of the redeemed notes, except when a charge is made for express charges entailed in sending to banks of issue notes still good enough for circulation. For a few days after the Government officials changed the former procedure the warrants were, in most cases, less than they would have been under the old order. But now several banks report that the full warrant is being received. This fact is interpreted as an indication of co-operation of the Treasury with the banks to overcome a situation which caused loud outcries from many of the latter when it first appeared.

Steel for Oil Fields.

The steel trade talked yesterday of a fair improvement of buying this week in numerous lines, which was taken in some quarters to be the fair sign of a good-sized tonnage movement. It is reported that the export business has been helped by orders for steel for development work in the oil fields of Mexico. Dispatches from the Tampico and Tuxpam districts would seem to indicate that plans are under way for important extensions of present operations, despite the uncertainties of martial activities in that country.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Investment Bankers' Association of America has issued a bulletin embodying the opinion of its counsel, Caldwell, Masslich & Reed, that the individuals of a partnership have a right to prorate in their income tax returns all the deductions from partnership income specified in Subsection B, and to exclude from such income interest received on municipal bonds, despite the ruling of the Internal Revenue Commissioner to the contrary.

The Union Trust Company has declared the usual quarterly dividend of 4 per cent. and an extra dividend of 1 per cent. on its $3,000,000 of stock, payable July 1. The extra dividend was declared to make the annual rate on the enlarged capital equal to one-third the annual rate paid on the former capital of $1,000,000.

The Federal Light & Traction Company will complete in the current year a comprehensive programme of improvements calling for a total expenditure of $741,000. Since its organization in 1910 the company has expended directly and through its subsidiaries upward of $10,000,000 in the purchase and development of public utility properties.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

London Market Quiet, but More Cheerful—Paris Closes Weak.

LONDON, June 4.—The stock market was quiet and more cheerful today, but continued weakness in consols discouraged any appreciable expansion in business. Home rails gained fractionally, while foreign rails receded, and mining, oil, and copper shares improved slightly.

American securities were quiet and firm during the early trading, and prices advanced from ⅛ to ⅝ over parity. Later the list weakened, and it closed dull.

PARIS, June 4.—Prices opened firm, but closed weak on the Bourse today.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

New high levels on the latest market advance were attained on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, but prices were shaded a little at the close. This reflected profit taking. United States Steel and Union Pacific were leaders in the upward movement, while among the specialties American Can was notably strong and active. There was an enlargement of activity compared with the day before, the sales totaling 28,720 shares. Continued very favorable advices regarding the outlook for the crops played a part in stimulating the market improvement. There was also more optimistic talk than of late regarding conditions in the steel trade. Transactions on the 9:30 o'clock opening call very generally reflected fractional advances compared with Wednesday's closing quotations.

WILLIAMS AT HEAD OF NEW LOAN BANKS

Places of Astor, Carnegie, and Others Who Resigned Are Filled by Directors.

BANK OFFICES TAKEN HERE

Won't Receive Deposits, but Will Sell Interest-Bearing Certificates to Get Funds.

Clark Williams, former Superintendent of Banks and former State Controller, was elected President of the Industrial Finance Corporation at a special meeting of the Directors at the Guaranty Trust Company yesterday. Directors were also elected to take the places of those who resigned recently.

The new Directors are Henry R. Towne of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, John Markle, anthracite coal operator of Jeddo, Penn.; Arthur Turnbull of Post & Flagg, Edwin O. Holter of Holter, Ingalls & Guthrie, Louis R. Cheney and Richard J. Goodman of Hartford, William H. Workman, Jr., of Los Angeles, Gordon Jones of Denver, and Gen. Julian S. Carr of Durham, N. C.

The Directors who resigned were Vincent Astor, Andrew Carnegie, Oscar S. Straus, Julius Rosenwald, Nicholas Murray Butler, W. S. Sloane, Theodore P. Shonts, L. S. Fuller, Edwin S. Marston, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman. These resignations followed those of Dr. E. R. L. Gould and Joseph S. Auerbach. It was explained yesterday that Dr. Gould had obtained the support of those named on the ground that the enterprise was purely philanthropic, and when he found that it was to be a business enterprise, though with sociological benefits, he resigned. The others followed suit.

At yesterday's meeting Arthur J. Morris, author of the "Morris plan" for establishing banks to make personal loans to workingmen formerly the prey of loan sharks, was made Vice President and General Counsel. Messrs. Williams, Markle, and Holter were added to the Executive Committee, of which the other members are Charles H. Sabin, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, Chairman; Raymond Du Puy, Arthur Hagen, William H. Craig, Arthur J. Morris, and Willard D. Straight.

The Industrial Finance Corporation succeeds The Fidelity Company of America, a Virginia corporation organized by Mr. Morris. The latter established industrial loan and savings companies in Washington, Richmond, St. Louis, Denver, Charleston, Columbia, (S. C.), Lynchburg, Memphis, Norfolk, Springfield, (Mass.), Philadelphia, Atlanta and Baltimore. For these it supplied part of the capital, the larger part being raised locally.

Thus the Fidelity Company was purely a holding company, its holdings in no case amounting to a majority of the stock of any bank and averaging about 20 per cent. These holdings have now been taken over by the Industrial Finance Corporation, which has an authorized issue of $2,000,000 preferred and $600,000 common stock. The minimum capital of the corporation has been subscribed, and the company will proceed at once with the organization of banks in this city and elsewhere. It has leased the sixth floor of the Kuhn-Loeb Building for its general offices and a local bank.

The "Morris plan" banks do not receive deposits in the legal sense, but sell to non-borrowers certificates on which it pays 5 per cent. interest. For all practical purposes the money paid for these certificates is the same as deposits and is added to the bank's capital in furnishing loanable funds. Deposits are also made by borrowers in effect. If $100 is borrowed, the customer pays $2 a week. Interest is charged at 6 per cent., or whatever may be the legal rate in the State where the bank is situated. The banks already in existence have more than 40,000 customers, the loans averaging a little over $100.

PACIFIC GAS EARNINGS.

Net for Year $6,871,000—Big Equity May Be Capitalized.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company reports for the year ended Dec. 31, 1913, gross earnings of $15,869,000, an increase of $1,395,000, and net income of $6,871,000, an increase of $558,000. The balance after interest payments was $2,969,000, an increase of $224,000. The company spent $9,091,000 for plant additions during the year, making total expenditures for the last eight years $38,514,000.

The capital stock outstanding was increased by $110,000 and the amount of bonds was decreased by $413,000. At the close of the year there was due the treasury for advances to construction account $10,905,000. Of this amount the California Railroad Commission has already authorized the capitalization of $10,000,000. Additional construction expenditures since the close of the year bring the total to $11,586,000.

A plan is soon to be submitted to stockholders for the permanent capitalization of the accumulated equity, which will involve cancellation of the $10,000,000 of bonds already authorized and the substitution of some other form of security. This plan is expected to place the company in a position to discharge its entire floating indebtedness, including the one-year notes, and provide cash working capital.

MORSE IN CANAL BARGE LINE

Banker and Son Among Incorporators of Company to Run Fleet.

ALBANY, June 4.—Articles of incorporation of the New York & Buffalo Steamship Company, which will operate a fleet of freight boats on the new barge canal, were filed today with the Secretary of State. H. F. Morse, a son of Charles W. Morse, the New York financier, holds 1,488 shares of the 1,500 shares of stock in the company. The elder Morse and the other eleven Directors hold one share each. The capital stock is given at $75,000.

The announced plan of the corporation is to operate thirty steel barges, ten of which are expected to be ready for service this Fall.

Besides the Morses, the Directors and incorporators are James W. Fleming, George T. Russell, Frank L. Roche, Frank E. Howe, and Frank McCarthy, Troy; Clifford S. Sims and S. L. Munson, Jr., Albany; C. Weiling Thatcher, Bennington, Vt.; M. Gilbert, Baltimore, and Cyrus Robinson, and John W. Hamilton, New York.

Mr. Fleming is a State Conservation Commissioner. Both Mr. Roche and Mr. Gilbert are connected with navigation lines controlled by Mr. Morse. Mr. Sims is Vice President and General Manager of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad Company.

BANKS IN GROUP 2 ALSO INSURGENT

TO HOLD MEETING IN UTICA

Insist They Should Be Represented by Men from Their Own Group, Not from Larger Banks.

Following the action of insurgents among the banks of Group 3 in nominating an opposition ticket for the election of the two Directors of the Federal reserve bank to represent the group, an insurgent meeting of Group 2 members will be held at Utica today.

Group 2 comprises the 159 national banks in this State having each a capital and surplus of more than $70,000 but less than $190,000. The Nominating Committee that was appointed at a meeting of Group 2 in this city named Robert H. Treman of Ithaca, President of the New York State Bankers' Association, for the Class A Directorship, and William Brewster of this city and F. F. Peabody of Troy to contest for the Class B Directorship.

The basis of the insurgent movement is the same as that in Group 3. Mr. Treman is President of the Tompkins County National Bank, which is in Group 1, that of banks having each a capital and surplus of $190,000 or more. The insurgents maintain that their representative should be from a bank of their own group. There is also understood to be opposition to either Mr. Brewster or Mr. Peabody, because they come from large cities, while most of the Group 2 banks are in small towns.

Among the bankers and business men in these small towns are more than a few who are ambitious to serve as Directors of the Federal reserve bank, and their friends are active in their behalf among the member banks of the group. As was the case in Group 3, a separate ticket probably will be put up by the insurgents at their meeting today.

The banks that signed the call for the insurgent meeting were the Citizens' National of Oneonta, Delaware National of Delhi, Sullivan County National of Liberty, First National of Franklin, First National of Edmeston, First National of Richfield Springs, and First National of Walton.

The Nominating Committee appointed at the earlier conference of Group 2 consists of B. E. Smythe, cashier of the Gramatan National Bank of Bronxville, Chairman; Howard B. Ward, President Le Roy National, Le Roy; Luther Gordon, President First National, Brockport; William W. Clark, President First National, Wayland; E. Alley, President Second National, Cortland; Delmer Runkle, President People's National, Hoosick Falls; W. J. Hamilton, President First National, Corona, and H. C. Morgan, President First National, Cuba.

Nominations made by any of these agencies are merely advisory. The actual nominations, under the law, must be made by the individual banks. The voting is to be done by electors, one chosen by each bank. Blank forms of resolutions to be adopted by the Directors of each bank naming its elector and such nominations as it may wish to make for one Class A and one Class B Director were received by some of the banks in this city yesterday from the Reserve Bank Organization Committee. These are to be certified by the cashier and returned to Washington within ten days. There ballot for each of the three groups will be made up, containing all the nominations. These will be sent to the electors, who must mark their choices and return them within fifteen days.

NEW HAVEN DEFICIT GROWS.

$1,108,000 for 10 Months Against Surplus of $3,649,000 a Year Ago.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford's earnings statement for April shows the results of the activities of the Department of Justice in seeking to break up an alleged transportation monopoly in New England through the elimination of reports for the Boston & Maine, Maine Central, and the Merchants & Miners' Transportation Company. It reflects some improvement over statements for last March and February, but not as compared to corresponding months of last year.

The New Haven in April had gross revenues of $5,518,000, a decrease of $165,000. The net corporate income was $238,000 less than the amount required for interest and rental charges. This compares with a decrease of $184,000 reported for April of last year. For the ten months to the end of April the New Haven road has earned $2,815,000 less than it earned in the corresponding period of last year. Its fixed charges exceeded its net income in the ten months by $1,108,000, whereas a year ago a surplus of $3,649,000 was reported.

The Westchester road, which has occupied such an important role in the New Haven hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, did a gross business of $34,340 in April at a cost of $41,385. That company failed to earn its charges by $13,000, against a deficit of $30,000 last year. For the ten months the Westchester's deficit is $223,000, as against $333,000 for the corresponding period last year.

ANSWER CHAMBERLIN SUIT.

Southern Railroads Say It Is Barred by Statute of Limitations.

The Texas & Pacific Railway Company and the Pacific Railway Company, joint defendants with the New Orleans, Baton Rouge & Vicksburg Railroad Company in the suit brought against them by George W. Chamberlin, a bondholder, filed yesterday in the Federal District Court a joint answer to the complaint, which asked that the merger of the Texas & Pacific and the Pacific Railway Company be set aside and that an accounting be rendered of the sale of certain lands on the Baton Rouge and Shreveport branch.

The railway companies enter a general denial of the statements made in the complaint, contend that it does not state sufficient grounds to constitute a cause of action, and assert that the complainant and his predecessor in title to the bonds upon which the suit is founded have been guilty of such laches that they are debarred by the statutes of limitations in the States of Louisiana and New York from bringing suit now.

BROKERS ARE HAZY ABOUT THEIR BOOKS

ACCOUNT NO. 30 A MYSTERY

Complaints of Customers to the District Attorney Are Under Investigation.

For three hours yesterday afternoon the partners of the failed Consolidated Stock Exchange firm of Stoppani & Hotchkin were questioned at the offices of Abraham S. Gilbert, the assignee, about 6,586 shares of stock which the expert accountants employed to go over the firm's books could not trace. The hearing brought no result, for each witness replied to the most searching queries directed by Leon Lauterstein, attorney for the assignee, that he had not the slightest remembrance of any transactions which could have required use of the securities outside of the routine of the firm's business. The market value of the stocks, according to the findings of the accountants, was in the neighborhood of $300,000 on May 18, the date of the failure.

In the course of the examination of Joseph H. Stoppani and Walter B. Hotchkin, members of the firm, revelations of an amazing indifference to accepted business procedure were uncovered. Both partners said that in the fourteen years of their partnership an accounting had never been made; that each drew on the profits without keeping any record of his expenditures, and neither had more than a hazy idea of the cost of running the several offices maintained in Manhattan and Brooklyn.

The ownership of a speculative account known as "No. 30" was also a subject of inquiry. Mr. Lauterstein referred to it as the "mysterious account with owner so far unknown," and although particular entries therein, including the record of short sales of 275 shares of Canadian Pacific, which involved over $50,000, were mentioned to refresh the memory of witnesses, the account was as mysterious as ever when the hearing adjourned.

Mr. Stoppani was asked if he had known on the day of the failure what the approximate amount of the firm's liabilities was.

"I did not," he replied. "I did not know anything about them." Further questions brought replies which showed that the witness did not possess a very clear idea about the daily conduct of the office, although he was the office partner of the firm.

"Did you ever know exactly how the business stood as regards profits or losses?" was asked.

"No," was the answer. "We never kept a profit and loss sheet. We tried to keep expenses down all we could, but we never bothered to find out how things were going more than in a general way."

"I understand," said Mr. Lauterstein, "that the account called No. 20 was the firm's speculative account. When stocks were bought or sold, did the partners consult over the transaction before it was made?"

"Oh, no," replied the witness; "each of us bought and sold as he desired. The firm did little speculating, though, and the account was not large."

The accountants' report, the attorney said, had shown a debit balance of $27,000 in this account when the assignee took charge.

When asked about the $300,000 of securities that the accountants reported on the books, but not in bank loans or in loans made on the Exchange or in strong boxes, Mr. Stoppani replied that he could not believe that this amount was missing, and said that a mistake had been made, in his opinion, in making up the records. Irving L. Ernst, attorney for the firm, said at this point that it should be borne in the minds of creditors and others present that statements in regard to the undiscovered shares were being made simply on the findings of the accountants. The checking up of accounts, he said, might show a much different state of affairs.

On further questioning Mr. Stoppani said that, while he usually knew what securities were placed in bank loans, there were times when the cashier, F. Maloney, took entire charge of the loans. The cashier testified at a previous hearing that he could tell very little about numerous transactions, of which he was supposed to have knowledge at the time they were carried through.

Mr. Hotchkin said, in reply to questions, that he had borrowed about a year ago approximately $25,000 from a sister and brother-in-law for his own account and without security.

"Did the money go into the firm's capital?" asked Mr. Lauterstein.

"I suppose so," replied the witness. "I simply put in the checks and said to the cashier, 'Here is some money.' I didn't think anything more about it."

The witness said he had not paid off any part of these loans, and was without any means to do so.

Mr. Hotchkin, who is Colonel of the Twenty-second Regiment of Engineers, appeared to know as little as his partner about the business. He said he had not the slightest knowledge of Account 30, and never kept a close eye on the way profits or losses were going.

The hearings will continue with the examination of employes who had charge of the books of the main office. Several creditors who said they had paid in full for stocks and had left their certificates with the brokers were present yesterday to find out what had been done with them. They were told that the investigation would have to go much deeper into the tangled affairs of the firm before the customers could learn where they stood.

Several complaints from customers of the firm have been made to District Attorney Whitman. While no action has been taken, the matter is still under investigation. One complainant was referred to the District Attorney in Brooklyn, another was told to go to a Magistrate.

DOANE MANUSCRIPTS SOLD.

Many Rare Letters Included in Late Bishop's Collection.

The sale of autograph letters and original manuscripts from the library of the late Bishop William Croswell Doane of Albany and from other collections was begun at the Anderson Auction Company's rooms yesterday.

George D. Smith paid $105 for a long and interesting letter by Robert Fulton, New York, Aug. 12, 1813, addressed to Commodore Lewis and relating to Fulton's last invention, a man-of-war propelled by steam.

"Indeed I see," Fulton says, "that such vessels may be so constructed that it is impossible to board or take them, and, contemplating it in every way, it bids fair to be one of the most extraordinary works of art in its results of immense and incalculable importance to our country. It must give protection to our coast, respect for our powers, and, I believe, liberty to the seas."

Another letter by Fulton, dated Brest, Sept. 8, 1801, and referring to his first experiments with the torpedo when he was trying to blow up British war vessels off the French coast, brought $47. A document dated Boston, July 15, 1700, and signed by Richard Coote, Earl of Bellomont, Colonial Governor of New York and Massachusetts, went to Mr. Smith for $25. It was during Bellomont's administration that Capt. Kidd, the pirate, flourished.

W. R. Benjamin paid $17 for a holograph letter by Field Marshal Blucher, whose arrival at Waterloo won the battle for the allies against Napoleon. A document dated Whitehall, Nov. 25, 1666, and signed by Charles II., commuting the death sentence of Sir John Towers to transportation to the Barbadoes, brought $9.50.

W. Muller gave $26 for a letter by James Fenimore Cooper, Paris, Oct. 17, 1826, to a publisher, containing interesting details about sales and profits of his books. A letter from Commodore Stephen Decatur, Aug. 9, 1817, to Robert Fulton, went to Mr. Smith for $30. A letter by Gen. William Henry Harrison, "Headquarters, foot of the Miami Rapids, Feb. 16, 1813," addressed to Gov. Shelby of Kentucky, brought $18.50.

A fine letter by Heinrich Heine, Paris, June 23, 1844, went to P. F. Madigan for $32. A letter by Samuel Huntington, Connecticut Signer of the Declaration of Independence, dated Oct. 8, 1790, sold for $13. A document dated Feb. 17, 1715, signed by Richard Ingoldsby, Colonial Governor of New York; Philip Schuyler and John Collins, was knocked down to Mr. Smith for $3.

A letter by Washington Irving, dated "Alhambra, July 27, 1829," and telling of his intended trip through Europe, sold for $18. Another Irving letter, dated New York, May 11, 1836, addressed to President Martin Van Buren and recommending Theodore S. Fay as Secretary to the American Legation in London, brought $23. An autograph note in the third person by Honore de Balzac to Frederic Lemaitre, the French actor, was sold for $16. Two holograph letters of Elizabeth Barrett Browning brought $41.

The sale will be concluded today.

SAYS IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

Newspapers the Best Medium, Expert Tells Electric Light Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—The report of a special investigating committee presented this afternoon to the National Electric Light and Power Convention indicated that even in an industry which is constantly growing and which now involves about three billions in capital, newspaper advertising is considered absolutely essential to prosperity and development.

The report was read by P. H. Kemble of Cincinnati, Ohio, Chairman of the Association's Special Committee on Merchandising and Advertising.

"Every central station must advertise in order to grow," Mr. Kemble said. "Yearly or semi-monthly advertising appropriations should be decided upon. Use all newspapers, but concentrate on those giving the best audience. Limit the advertisement to one idea. Spend the time and money to get the copyright, regardless of the cost of getting the argument into the mind of the reader. Advertise continuously."

Newspapers were placed first among all advertising mediums by Mr. Kemble, whose suggestions were based on long investigations in all parts of the country made at the special request of his organization.

TRADE DULL IN SPOTS, REDFIELD EXPLAINS

Cabinet Member Lays Some of the Depression in the East to "Mental Mourning."

THINKS CONDITIONS SOUND

Hears from Many Quarters That Men Who Are Talking Hard Times Really Are Prosperous.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 4.—William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, in a speech here today before the Chamber of Commerce, discussed business conditions throughout the country. In part, he said:

"If we would place the business atmosphere of the country on a sort of commercial weather map, such as is used by the Weather Service, we should find a curious condition. In the extreme Southeast and Southwest would be areas where the business barometer is high. All through the great central part of the country, where the bulk of our wheat is grown, would be another great area of fair weather and high pressure. Over the great cotton areas of the South would be no depression, not even unsettled conditions, but a normal, looking for great agricultural favors expected to come. High barometer also prevails where automobiles are made, in and about the lake area. Over the Northeastern States would be found a section of low barometer and marked depression. If the state of mind of the different parts of our country could be shaded in colors, the great body of the West would be white, while an area of dull gray would represent our Northeastern States.

Hopes for "Mental" Adjustment.

"One does not mean to deride a depressed state of mind in speaking of it as a psychological condition. The people that feel that way feel just as badly about it as if the condition were physical rather than psychological. The hope lies in the fact that the realities of the physical condition may so assert themselves ere long that the mental state will adjust itself to them and be relieved."

After citing reports of depression in various foreign countries, Mr. Redfield continued:

"Few men would be so bold as to deny the world-wide conditions which have been suggested. This is not an age in which the nations are separated. Their commercial and industrial alliances on the one hand and competitions on the other are close. That which affects one adversely is reflected upon the others. It is the merest childishness to select one of them out from the others and deal with it as if its own internal procedure were the sole cause of the conditions found in it.

Drop in Foreign Business.

"A good deal has been made of the fact that our foreign business during the month of April shows a decrease in the exports of about $37,000,000 and an increase in the imports of about $27,500,000, and that the merchandise transactions for that month show an apparent balance against us somewhat in excess of $11,000,000, and gleeful conclusions as to the effects of the tariff law are drawn by high-speed thinkers from rather meagre data. Looking plainly at the facts, we find them to be as follows:

"During April the increase of imports is found to be in the following items:

"Crude materials for use in our manufactures, $12,500,000; crude foodstuffs, over $4,000,000; partly manufactured foodstuffs, nearly $7,000,000.

"Here is an aggregate of $23,500,000 of a total increase of $27,500,000, which is entirely in foods and materials which our manufacturers use.

"Turning now to the exports for the month of April, in which there is a decrease of $37,000,000, we find $10,000,000 of it in crude materials for manufactures, $14,000,000 of it in foodstuffs, over $5,000,000 in partly finished manufactures, making a total of $29,000,000. The smallest ratio of decrease for the month of any of the great groups named was in fully finished manufactures. In other words, it is in the line of fully finished manufactures that we have held our proportion of business best.

"It is true, is it not, as one looks over the country that all the conditions upon which sound business should rest exist in full force and vigor? Few will contend that merchants are overstocked. Rather is the reverse true. None are so rash as to say overspeculation exists. Nay, on the contrary, the brokers complain of lack of commissions. Money is not so scarce that banks refuse legitimate borrowers. The reverse is true. We have sent large sums abroad of late without cramping our financial resources. It comes to me from more than one quarter of the country that men who are pessimistic in speech are prosperous in pocket. Things are not tied up tight when New York registers more automobiles than ever before and when that great industry is pushed to the full.

"If you and I get away from the crowded centres of our Middle and Eastern States where mental mourning exists for conditions that can never return, since the day of mastery is over and commerce must henceforth be a servant—if, I say, we get away from these centres into which the light is breaking, but which it has not yet fully illuminated, we shall find a different atmosphere.

"It is a small and pitiful thing that men should expect to reap political profit out of magnifying evils. However, the too willing howls of the apostles of evil are so obvious as well as so previous as to be on the whole more humorous than harmful. They make the judicious grieve, but they bring no anxiety to the thoughtful."

PLAN TOLLS VOTE SATURDAY

Senate Leaders Sanguine of This—Action on Amendments Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—A final vote on the Tolls Repeal bill not later than Saturday was the outlook in the Senate today. So sanguine of this were the leaders that they permitted an early adjournment in order that members might attend the unveiling of a Confederate monument at Arlington Cemetery. Voting on amendments is expected to begin tomorrow afternoon.

Senator Cummins, Republican, of Iowa today took the position that Great Britain's protest was of such a nature that it ought not have weight until the canal was in operation and there was an opportunity to observe whether the conditions arose of which Great Britain was apprehensive. He said that the English protest against the exemption of coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls was predicated on the assumption that the United States would be unable to distinguish between coastwise traffic and overseas traffic.

"Conditions proving this contention have not yet arisen, and the English protest is upon a hypothetical condition," he said, "and should be considered only when facts arise which give the protest weight."

Senator Cummins picked up the thread of an attack made the previous day by Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho upon Senator Simmons, Democrat, of North Carolina, and said that it required much courage for Senator Simmons to state frankly that he had only recently come to realize that a thing was a subsidy which all the world had regarded as a subsidy since 1901.

"But I cannot understand what reason has arisen," added Senator Cummins, "to make a thing a subsidy in 1914 any more than it was a subsidy in 1912."

Senator Borah had pointed out that two years ago Senator Cummins was strongly in favor of tolls exemption, although yesterday he made an ardent speech against it.

More About Votes for Salesmen.

A determined campaign is being carried on by the men back of the "Votes for Salesmen" movement to procure provision for votes for these men in the new State constitution. Delegates to the next constitutional convention will be urged to support the idea. Mark Eisner, the present Assemblyman from the Seventeenth District, Manhattan, who will probably be a Democratic nominee for delegate to the convention, will continue in the convention, if elected, the fight made by him in the State Legislature for the disfranchised salesman.

Denims and Romper Cloths Good.

There has been an excellent call of late in this market for denims and romper cloths, but the call for chambrays for the shirting trade has been rather limited. Especial interest centres around romper cloths because of the new lines recently brought out by two of the leading houses. One of these fabrics is 28 inches wide, while the other measures 32 inches in width. Both of these lines have been put on the market for the jobbing trade at prices which are said to be extremely attractive, and, as a result, they have been taken liberally. The momentary dullness of the shirting trade is lessening the call for chambrays.

Spring Prices for Men's Wear.

The men's wear primary market is quiet at the present time. The absorbing topic is the question of Spring prices. Little doubt exists but that they will be higher. The advances should range from 5 to 12½ cents. These increases will reflect this rising cost of raw material and will not be significant of better margins for the mills. Little or no profits have been the case in the industry during the past season and this condition is generally expected to continue. It is agreed that the real test of what the foreign manufacturers can do in this market will arrive with the coming season. They have become experienced in the requirements of the trade here, and that experience will be brought into full play.

Has a Silk-Marking Machine.

Handlers of silk who are looking for a device that will do away with the need of their measuring the goods after it comes from the finisher or when it is sold over the retail counter will be pleased to learn that such a machine is already on the market. It is made by a prominent firm of New England machine builders, and prints yards, halves and quarters on the back of the selvage of the goods. It is said that a number of orders for these machines have been taken among silk houses in this city lately, and that the first device has just been installed at one of the largest plants. The present device is the outcome of several years of experimenting. As well as the yard numbering machine, the firm in question controls three different processes for mechanically trade-marking every yard in a piece of cloth.

Japanese Tram Stock Higher.

The Yokohama raw silk market is quiet, but firm, and quotations on ready tram stock are $5 to $10 a picul higher than a week ago. Sales for the week amounted to 2,200 bales. Canton continues firm, with little selling pressure in evidence. Contracts are being refused by sellers on coarse sizes of new silk. Shanghai reports that the crop in the Tsatlee district has not turned out well. Prices are very firm, almost one-sixth of the new crop of steam filatures having already been disposed of. A better interest in tussahs has resulted in a slight improvement of prices. The Milan market is unchanged, with most of the filatures closed. High prices for the new cocoons are anticipated. The local market is rather quiet, though the absorption of stock continues steady. Stocks in the hands of both the mills and the importers are said to be very light. Prices are firm generally.

Clothiers Coming Together.

Clothiers who have returned from the annual convention, held at Atlantic City, are congratulating themselves on its success. While no active steps were taken on the various questions submitted to the delegates for their consideration, manufacturers who attended the sessions were quick to testify yesterday to the development of a better spirit in the clothing trade. "There seemed to be," said one, "a marked change in the hitherto rather cold relations existing between the members. Formerly every man guarded closely what he believed were the secrets of his business, but on this occasion every one seemed to be glad to give his fellow member what pointers he could. This was evidenced not alone in the speeches made by representative men in the industry but during informal conversations. The day when the clothiers will co-operate with one another for the common good instead of pulling against each other is near at hand."

Bad Faith Among Credit Men.

The June letter of the National Association of Credit Men calls particular attention to the topic of bad faith among credit men. On this point it says: "There is nothing that alarms us so much as the charge of bad faith among credit men. Credit cannot exist where there is demoralization, and there will be demoralization where men lie to each other or pass along word tending to lead another astray with reference to an account. There does not exist in any case that can be presented a valid reason or excuse for falsifying credit information, and there is much to be gained by being recognized as a credit man of genuine frankness in dealing with one's fellows. We view with jealous regard the whole credit fabric, and integrity is our constant effort." The letter also asks strong support of the members for the Clayton Procedure bill, known as H. R. 133. The purpose of this bill is to obtain relief from the present conditions in the courts through the preparation of a system of rules by the Supreme Court.

Printcloth Sales Off Slightly.

The strength of prices retarded buying a little in the local gray goods market yesterday, the buyers seeming unwilling to accept advances without waiting a day or so for a possible relapse. There was some nice business done in the course of the day, but it was out of proportion with the size of the bids which were made for goods at the old prices. Buyers were still bidding 5¾ cents for 39 inch 68-72s, but could not bring out any goods. The mills were firm in their demands for 5⅞ cents on this construction; 72-76s of the same width were held very firmly at 6⅞ cents. Bids of 4⅝ cents for 38⅞ inch 60-48s were refused by the mills, 4 7-16 cents being demanded for these goods. Reports from Fall River indicated added firmness in that centre, all of the mills there now asking 5 1-16 to 5⅛ cents for 38½ inch 64-60s. There is still strong evidence of unwillingness to sell very far ahead at current figures. Narrow goods, while not over active, are being held firmly on the basis of 3⅝ cents for 27 inch 64-60s. Fine yarn goods have strengthened in sympathy with the advance in other quarters of the market, and sheetings are being held firmly at levels touched in the recent rise; 48 square, four yard sheetings are selling well at 5¼ cents, while 48-52, 4.70 yard, goods are moving in a fair way at 4⅜ cents.

Post Office at Forest Hills.

Postmaster Alfred J. Kennedy of Flushing, L. I., announced yesterday that a branch of that office would be established at Forest Hills on July 1. Postmaster Kennedy accompanied a committee of taxpayers to Washington and they were assured by Daniel S. Roper, First Assistant Postmaster General, that the order creating the branch office will be issued in a few days. William J. Moriarity, clerk in the registry department of the Flushing office, will be superintendent of the new branch station.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Duties on a Variety of Goods Decided by the Appraisers.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers that a new product recently put on the market and invoiced as concrete essence of lemon was properly assessed by the Collector here at 20 per cent. ad valorem under the old tariff as an unenumerated manufactured article.

Charles H. Asche & Co. failed in a contention relating to the rate of duty on spools containing silk yarn. Duty was taken under the old law at 35 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for manufactures of wood. The importers claimed exemption on the ground that the spools are "usual" containers.

Merchandise imported by the Dohrmann Commercial Company, San Francisco, was returned for duty under the old act at 60 per cent. as decorated earthenware, whereas the protestants alleged a rate of 40 per cent. under the specific provision for Rockingham ware. Several witnesses for the importers appeared at the hearing at San Francisco, but had not seen the samples of the goods. A Government Examiner, however, who passed the goods testified that they were not of the Rockingham variety. Judge Hay decided the Examiner's testimony must prevail as to the character of the ware. A somewhat similar protest by the Parmelee, Dohrmann Company, Los Angeles, was also overruled.

Stern Brothers were sustained in a claim for lower duty on women's hats assessed for duty at 50 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 439 of the old law, as wearing apparel made of fur. The importers claimed duty according to value per dozen and 20 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 446, as hats made of fur.

Articles of Wedgwood ware imported by Byrnes & Lowrey were taxed under the old act at 60 per cent. ad valorem as decorated china or porcelain. Free entry was claimed under Paragraph 717 as artistic antiquities. Judge Waite holds that the articles are of the requisite age, and that the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury have been complied with. C. A. Stonehill, Chicago, was given free entry on leather screens, also claimed to be artistic antiquities. The Collector's assessment as manufactures in chief value of leather was reversed.

W. A. Brown & Co. were given free entry on coverings for fish products imported from Hongkong under the act of 1897. The coverings or containers were assessed for duty at the same ad valorem rates attaching to their contents. This action Judge Somerville holds was erroneous. The board's action will make it possible for the firm now to recover refunds many years after the actual importations were made.

TO READJUST BUSINESS.

Part of the Task of the Flavoring Extract Manufacturers.

The Flavoring Extract Manufacturers' Association yesterday concluded its fifth annual convention at the Hotel Astor after the discussion of many subjects of trade interest. The convention was the first to be held since the enactment of the present tariff, which for the first time puts on the dutiable list many ingredients formerly admitted free. This action it was said has made it necessary to bring about a readjustment of the extract business to meet the new conditions imposed by the law. Much time was devoted during the three days of the convention to discussions of ways and means to accomplish this result.

As a step in this direction, the President was empowered to appoint a special committee to increase the use and sale of extracts. A resolution was passed by the association commending Dr. Alsberg, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, for having established a board of co-operation for the purpose of attaining a greater degree of uniformity in the State and Federal pure food laws. A committee of five members will be named to co-operate with the board. It was also decided to appoint a committee from the membership to study the composition and analysis of flavoring extracts.

The association voted to establish a fellowship of $500 at the University of Michigan to be known as the Flavoring Extract Manufacturers' Association Scholarship. The beneficiary of the scholarship is to devote one-half of his time under the direction of the scientific research committee to the study of raw materials used in extracts. The Stevens bill legalizing the fixing of retail prices was indorsed. John L. Clawson, President of Clawson & Co., extract importers of Philadelphia, voiced the feeling in the trade when he said, in speaking of conditions, that it was hoped in time to so readjust the extract business as to put it on a satisfactory basis. At the present time, however, he said business is much depressed.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, S. S. Baer, St. Louis; First Vice President, F. L. Beggs, Newark, Ohio; Second Vice President, C. F. Sauer, Richmond, Va.; Third Vice President, J. O. Schlotterbech, New York; Treasurer, R. E. Heekin, Cincinnati, and Secretary, F. P. Beers, Earleville, N. Y. New members of the Executive Committee chosen were S. J. Sherer, Chicago; W. M. McCormick, Baltimore; S. F. Irwin, Philadelphia, and C. W. Jennings, Grand Rapids. The annual banquet of the association was held last night at the Astor.

EXCHANGE SEAT FOR $42,000

Drop of $3,000 in Price Attributed to Dullness in Trading.

Continued dullness in stock trading has again brought about a decline in the value of memberships on the New York Stock Exchange. The seat of William A. Mearns, which was posted yesterday for transfer to Bertrand L. Taylor, Jr., brought only $42,000, a drop of $3,000 from the price received for the previous membership sold.

Of three candidates for membership on the exchange whose names were posted two weeks ago, two were elected to the board yesterday. They are Benjamin W. Woodruff and Edwin H. Muir. The latter is one of the youngest men ever elected to membership.

BUSINESS NOTES.

At the annual meeting of the Wholesale Men's Furnishings Association yesterday the officers were re-elected for the ensuing year, together with the following Directors, who will hold office for two years: James R. Keiser, Samuel Broom, Arthur M. Reis, and Charles S. Merton. The Directors will meet on June 18.

Figures compiled by the Silk Association of America show that in the three months ended March 31, 1914, dutiable silk imports at the Custom Districts of New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Connecticut, Chicago, Ohio, and San Francisco amounted to $10,569,981, as compared with $7,645,837 in the same period in 1913. Duty collected on these goods amounted to $4,845,597, compared with $3,931,262 last year.

COAL TRUST CASE ENDS.

Arguments Concluded, but Decision Is Not Expected Until Fall.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—Counsel for the Reading Company and the Jersey Central Railroad, defendants in the suit to dissolve the alleged illegal combination which the Government avers exists in the anthracite coal industry, contended in their argument in the United States District Court today that the Reading and Jersey Central were not competing lines and that the Reading's control of the Jersey Central was not contrary to law.

Counsel for the Jersey Central asserted that the Reading had not obtained control of the Jersey Central to stifle trade, but that control was acquired by George F. Baer, President of the Reading, because he feared the Jersey Central was about to be purchased by the Baltimore & Ohio, thus depriving the Reading of an outlet into New York harbor.

G. Carroll Todd, Assistant to the Attorney General, said there was no evidence in the records of the case that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company had intended to purchase a majority of the stock of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Mr. Todd reiterated that there was a commingling of interests among the Reading companies and between the Jersey Central and the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, as charged by the Government.

In concluding his argument, Mr. Todd said the increase in the cost of producing coal since 1898 was 54 4-10 cents a ton and the cost at tidewater in the same period had increased 94 cents a ton.

A decision in the case is not expected until Fall.

PRENDERGAST RAPS M'ADOO ON SUBWAY

Threatens Appeal to President on Demand of $1,000,000 for Post Office Route.

NOT JUSTIFIED, HE SAYS

Believes It Part of an Anti-New York Policy and Thinks Wilson Should Be Heard on It.

Controller Prendergast hit out sharply yesterday at Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo because of his action in blocking the plans for the construction of the branch of the Seventh Avenue subway under the Post Office in City Hall Park. He asserted that the city was being victimized and that it was time the matter was brought to the attention of President Wilson.

The question will come before the Board of Estimate today, on the request of the Public Service Commission that the city adopt the proposed route through Spruce Street to William Street as a substitute for the original line under the Post Office and through Beekman Street to William. When this is reached the Controller is likely to introduce a resolution calling the attention of President Wilson to the situation. This is what he said yesterday;

"Mr. McAdoo's attitude is absolutely incomprehensible. I have read the deed whereby the Post Office site was transferred to the Federal Government by the city, and there is nothing there to justify Mr. McAdoo's action in demanding $1,000,000 for right of way under the building. The Federal Government is in the structure south of City Hall Park solely as a tenant, and it has no rights which can be jeopardized by the construction of a subway under the Post Office property.

"There is nothing in justice or in law to support Mr. McAdoo's action. I haven't been able to find any one to whom it was anything but incomprehensible. Now, in view of the fact that the City of New York has been unable to get any explanation from Mr. McAdoo, it seems to me that it is about time the matter was called to the attention of President Wilson himself.

"We have spent many years and are spending much money in working out our subway problem, and it is a question big enough for the President's personal attention. So long as the President says nothing to the contrary, it must be assumed that the Secretary of the Treasury is proceeding with his entire sanction. If so, is this only one more incident in a fixed anti-New York policy on the part of the Washington Administration? It would seem so. The Administration certainly would have refrained from designating New York as a Federal reserve bank city if it had dared.

"Of course, it is a pity to bother President Wilson about a matter like this at a time when he has the Mexican question and so many other troubles on his hands, but the City of New York is entitled to know why it is being victimized by the Secretary of the Treasury."

When the question comes before the Board of Estimate this morning it will, in all probability, be referred to the Transit Committee, of which President McAneny is the Chairman. He will then ask the Public Service Commission to submit to that committee all the correspondence which has passed between the commission and the Treasury Department.

In that is a letter informing the commission that Horace Ely & Co. has valued the easement under the Post Office at $1,000,000, assuming that there is no difference between the title of the Government to the Post Office site and that of the ordinary private owner to any other parcel of land. The Government, however, is restricted in its use of the site in City Hall Park to Post Office and Court House purposes only. As the main work of the Post Office is to be moved uptown in the next few weeks to the Post Office at the Pennsylvania station, it is contended by the Public Service Commission that the Government could never wish to erect in City Hall Park a modern skyscraper with deep foundations for court house purposes only.

It is recognized that in the face of a criticising Congress Secretary McAdoo might be embarrassed by proposing to give the easement to the city for a purely nominal sum, now that he has obtained from a real estate firm the $1,000,000 estimate of value. The city authorities, however, feel that Mr. McAdoo made a serious error in getting an estimate on the Post Office easement on the same basis of an easement under an ordinary building, especially as Congress had given to him specific authority to take from the city a merely nominal sum if he saw fit, and they hold that there is no reason why the city should be forced to expend a large sum merely to get the Secretary of the Treasury out of a dilemma which he contrived for himself.

McADOO WANTS TO BE FAIR

But Must, He Says, Fully Protect the Government's Interests.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo said today that he hoped within a few days to make definite reply to the Public Service Commission of New York about the Subway easement under the New York City Post Office building.

"The act of Congress," says Mr. McAdoo, "throws a great responsibility upon the Secretary of the Treasury, and as I am executing a trust, I must, of course, see that every essential fact is before me before a final decision is rendered.

"I can only repeat that I have every desire to be fair to the City of New York and to expedite the important work of the Subways, but at the same time I cannot be recreant to my duty, and I must, in the faithful discharge of it, see that the interests of the Government are fully protected."

PIERCE CO. STOCK INCREASE.

Oil Corporation Would Add $9,000,000 to Its Outstanding Stock.

Directors of the Pierce Oil Corporation have called a special meeting of stockholders for June 25 to vote on a proposal for increasing the authorized capital stock from $21,000,000 to $30,000,000. It is proposed also to amend the certificate of incorporation so as to classify all stock as common. The par value of the shares will be reduced from $100 to $25.

If the plan goes through it will make provision for the conversion into stock of the $10,000,000 6 per cent. debentures, while $6,400,000 will be reserved for the purchase of new properties or shares in other corporations.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

TWENTY-FOUR WEST THIRTY-THIRD STREET COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the 24 West Thirty-third Street Company, which erected buildings on leased land at 18 to 28 West Thirty-third Street, opposite the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, by Weschler & Kohn, attorneys for these creditors: Harris H. Uris Iron Company, $5,115; Church E. Gates & Co., $2,250, and John R. Smith's Son, Inc., $900. It was alleged that the company is insolvent and made preferential payments of $500. Judge Hand appointed Hugh A. Bayne receiver under a bond of $10,000, and stayed summary proceedings to dispossess the company. The company was incorporated in March, 1912, with capital stock of $10,000, and leased the land from the Astor Estate for twenty years, with two renewals. The ground rental to May 1, 1931, is $63,000 a year, and for the year 1932 $99,750. Two buildings were erected by the company, one of twelve stories at 20 to 28 West Thirty-third Street and another of six stories at 18 West Thirty-third Street. The large building is occupied by Bawo & Dotter. The buildings are said to have cost about $500,000, and it is also said that the owners of the property contributed $300,000 to the company toward the erection of the buildings. The net rentals after payment of all charges are stated to be about $15,000 a year. It was stated in the application for the appointment of a receiver that the company owes $55,000 to Oscar J. Mayer, secured by the capital stock of the company and an assignment of the rents of the tenants. Mr. Mayer, it is asserted, has collected rents to the amount of $32,000, and is obligated to apply the money to payment of the rent on the leasehold, but refuses to do so. The trustees of the Astor Estate have brought suit against the company to dispossess it, which suit was stayed yesterday by Judge Hand. One reason for the receivership is to collect the money from Mr. Mayer to pay the rent and taxes. J. Charles Weschler, representing the creditors' committee, has been in negotiation since April for the adjustment of the affairs of the company, and the bankruptcy petition was prepared in April, but the filing of it was postponed in hopes of a settlement. The liabilities are $60,819, unsecured on notes and open account; $55,000 to Oscar J. Mayer, and a claim of Ravitch Brothers, who are the financial backers of the company, amount not given. The value of the lease is estimated at $100,000.

DANIEL SLOTE & CO.—A petition was filed yesterday against Daniel Slote & Co., a corporation, wholesale dealers in blank books and scrap books, at 321 Broadway, by Charlotte A. Bowman, a creditor, for $5,228, balance of a note of the corporation dated Jan. 1, 1906, for $7,444. It was alleged that the corporation on May 19 admitted in writing inability to pay its debts, and that the creditors are less than twelve in number. The other creditors are Lucretia G. Corson, James H. English & Son, estate of Radford Kelso, Mrs. M. Kelso, John C. Hastie, and the Martin B. Brown Co. Liabilities are said to be $27,000 and assets $4,000. The business was started in 1874 as a firm. Daniel Slote, the founder of the business, it is said, was one of the "Innocents Abroad" party made famous by Mark Twain, and Slote is one of the characters in Twain's book. Mr. Slote died in February, 1882. In February, 1889, the firm made an assignment, with liabilities of $184,000, which were settled at 30 cents on the dollar. Afterwards Cornelius Corson, who was prominent in the days of William M. Tweed, became a partner in the business and after his death his widow, Lucretia G. Corson, carried on the business. Under the partnership arrangement between Cornelius Corson and Frank C. Bowman, father of the petitioning creditor, the surviving partner, was to pay to the estate of the deceased partner $25,000. After the death of the partners the present corporation was organized in 1905 with capital stock of $5,000 and agreed to pay Mrs. Lucretia G. Corson $10,000, to the estate of F. Bowman $7,444, and various amounts to three other parties, part of which has been paid. Mrs. Corson recently brought a suit in Niagara County against the corporation for $1,776, and yesterday Judge Hand restrained further proceedings in the suit.

MODEL BUTTON WORKS.—A petition has been filed against the Model Button Works of 329 East Twenty-ninth Street by these creditors: L. C. Hirsch & Co., $115; Minna Gottlieb, $500, and Usinger & Colgan Company, $30. The company was incorporated on Dec. 21, 1908, with capital stock of $5,000. When at 14 West Twentieth Street a fire occurred on July 18, 1913, in which several of the employes were severely burned, and Arnold Greenbaum, the Vice President, died from his injuries received in the fire.

JAMES PARK & CO.—A petition has been filed against Charles H. Watts, doing business as James Park & Co., exporter and importer, at 24 Stone Street, by these creditors: American Axe and Tool Company, Glassport, Penn., $370; Beecher & Gibbs Plow Company, Canton, Ohio, $103, and Anthony C. Brew, this city, $106. It was alleged that he was insolvent and made preferential payments. Liabilities are $11,000 and assets $3,000. Mr. Park and Mr. Watts began business together in 1905. Mr. Park died in October, 1909, and Mr. Watts has since continued under the former style. Judge Hand appointed Moses Ely receiver under a bond of $1,500.

JOHN ARTHUR POLHEMUS of 230 West 107th Street, formerly an insurance broker at 1 Liberty Street, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $30,994 and assets of $5 cash. Among the creditors are the estate of Louise Polhemus, $21,500; Union American Insurance Company, $2,248, (rent of offices;) Mutual Life Insurance Company, $300, (rent of office,) and Standard Audit Company, $1,605.

JACOB HANDLER, a buttonhole contractor of 94 Second Avenue, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $893 and no assets. The debts were contracted as a shoe dealer.

Creditors Asked to Assent to a Plan for Their Liquidation.

Creditors of the failed brokerage firm of H. B. Hollins & Co. are being asked to assent to a plan for liquidating the assets through a new company, to be known as the Equities Realization Corporation. It is proposed to sell all of the assets, including those in the hands of the receiver, to the new corporation and to give its notes, payable five days after the transfer of the assets, for 10 per cent. of the proved value of the unsecured claims, the remaining 90 per cent. to be paid out of the assets after they have been disposed of by the liquidating comapny.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Low pressure prevails throughout the country except in the Pacific States, the north upper lake region and the Southeast, while to the northward and northeastward of Lake Superior it is quite high.

A moderate offshoot from the Western depression has reached Southern New England and New Jersey, while in the Far West there are several independent centres of disturbance.

This distribution has resulted in more unsettled showery weather in the Northwest and extreme West and general showers and thunder storms from the upper Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic, the rains extending into Virginia and Western North Carolina, although not general in these States.

It is generally cooler over the rain areas. In the Ohio, the middle Mississippi, and the lower Missouri Valleys and in the Central Plains States high temperatures continue.

Fair weather will prevail during the next two days in the Southwest and the Far West, but over the northern, central and eastern districts showers will probably continue and will extend into the South Atlantic States.

Temperatures will remain high over the central and southwestern portions of the country and comparatively low over the north tier of States. Elsewhere they will not change decidedly.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast Friday and Saturday will be fresh to strong and generally north; Middle Atlantic Coast, fresh to strong northwest to north; South Atlantic Coast, moderate and mostly south, except east and southeast off the Florida coast.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Continued unsettled Friday and Saturday, with occasional showers and moderate temperature; gentle to moderate variable winds.

Western New York—Unsettled Friday and Saturday, with occasional showers; moderate to fresh northeast winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

12 M.	73	61	11 P. M.	67	65

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 65; for the corresponding date last year it was 72; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 66.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission has approved the following:

Report of Mr. Murray recommending that the commission grant the request of the Department of Bridges for an examination for promotion to stationary engineer (steam,) and that the examination be open to oilers, stokers, and licensed firemen, those being the only positions of lower but corresponding character.

Report of Mr. Murray relative to the communication from the Commissioner of Accounts, in which he gives reasons for the rating of "B" given certain employes of his office. Mr. Murray says that in accordance with the recent changes in the rules, it will be necessary for the commission to approve the recommendations of the Boards of Promotions of the several departments and that under these conditions, the reasons given in this case may be accepted.

Report of Mr. Rafferty recommending that the name of Patrick Cassidy be qualified on the list of the stationary engineer.

Report of Mr. Tighe recommending that the name of Irving I. Katz be removed from the preferred list of rodman, Grade B, for the reason that he declined appointment in the department from which he was suspended and at the compensation he was receiving.

Request of the Commissioner of Street Cleaning that Robert Gill, a hostler, be permitted to qualify in a practical test for change of title to blacksmith's helper. At the last meeting the commission approved similar requests and directed that the examination be held when the regular practical tests are given at the Fire Department repair shops in June.

Requests of the Department of Public Charities that the name of Julius Wolff, who resigned from the position of auditor on May 16, before the completion of his probationary period, be restored to the list of accountant, Fifth Grade, from which he was appointed.

United States.

The United States Civil Service announces an open competitive examination at the New York Custom House for general mechanic, for men only, on June 17, to fill vacancies as they may occur in the Departmental Service at Washington, D. C., and other services. The usual entrance salary is from $720 to $900 a year. HINTS AT SHOE MONOPOLY.

$6,000,000 Plant Purchase Violated Sherman Law, Suggests Judge.

BOSTON, June 4.—A suggestion that the purchase of the Thomas G. Plant Patents and Shoe Machinery business by the United Shoe Machinery Company for $6,000,000 was a violation of the Sherman Anti-trust law was made today by Judge Putnam in the Federal Court, where the United Shoe Company is on trial as an alleged unlawful monopoly.

In the course of the argument of Charles F. Choate, counsel for the company, Judge Putnam exclaimed:

"If this does not spell desire to get rid of competition with Plant, I don't know what does. Here is Plant, with the possibility of wide competition, and he is bought out to stop competition. I think that a clear case under the Sherman act."

Mr. Choate denied that the purchase was made for the purpose of destroying competition. He said that negotiations had been going on for some time before the purchase was effected, and from this he argued that if the defendant had desired merely to prevent competition it would have bought Plant out at the first opportunity.

"Supposing that we should find that it was a violation of the Sherman act," continued Judge Putnam, "could we do anything other than order the Plant patents sold?"

He added that the scheme of dissolution approved in the Standard Oil and the Tobacco Trust cases would not be applicable here.

Missouri Attack on Swift & Co.

Ten Persons Rescued from the Baltic by Tug in Midstream.

Owing to the big crowd of visitors who went to the White Star liner Baltic yesterday to see their relatives and friends away, ten people were carried away and had to be rescued by a tug in midstream, much to the annoyance of Capt Ransom, who stood on the bridge and frowned at the delay.

Miss Ella Couitt of Westcliffe on Sea, England, one of the survivors of the Empress of Ireland, who sailed on the Baltic, asked the stewardess for her life preserver and the nearest companion way to the upper deck, directly she reached her cabin. Other survivors of the tragedy on the St. Lawrence who departed on the Baltic were C. R. Burt of Toronto, L. Hyamson, A. J. Burdows, Charles R. Clark, C. D. Goodson, and the Rev. Joseph Wallett of 51 Finchley Road, Westcliffe on Sea, England.

PUTS A CZARDOM OVER RAILROADS

IT COULD MAKE OR BREAK

Through Control of Securities Issues—A Gigantic Interlocking Directorate—Unconstitutional, Says Jouett.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Enactment of the Rayburn Anti-Trust bill would have the effect practically of removing every railroad President, General Manager, and Director and of transferring all their powers to the Interstate Commerce Commission, George F. Brownell, Vice President and General Counsel of the Erie Railroad Company, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today.

"The members of the commission would become a system of interlocking Directors of vaster powers than anything dreamed of by Congress in proposing legislation against interlocking directorates," he declared.

"Would not the provision which gives the commission the right to veto any issue of securities tend to work discrimination?" asked Senator Brandegee. "Would not the result practically be to hand the railroad map of the United States over to the commission with the instruction, 'Here is the present map. It is within your power to say what railroads shall increase their mileage—extend their lines into virgin territory, for instance—and to say what railroads shall be stunted in their growth'?"

"I think that is a conservative statement of what the passage of this section of the Rayburn bill would mean," responded Mr. Brownell. "Indeed, I think it would go much further than that, giving the commission the right to supervise many of the small details of the management of the railroads.

"I am not opposed to the proper supervision of security issues. Reasonable regulation of that character is rather desirable than otherwise. If Congress were considering a law to that effect, which would exclude regulation by the several States, so that it would be the only supervision which the new security issues would have to undergo, and would so frame the legislation that it would not hamper the carriers in obtaining funds that they might need for legitimate improvements, we would not be here objecting to it."

Issues of $600,000,000 a Year.

In pointing out the impossibility of the commision scrutinizing all new security issues, Mr. Brownell cited the fact that since 1900, in the official classification territory alone, that is, north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, there had been $3,000,000,000 of securities issued. In the same territory for the last ten years there had been an average yearly issue of $210,000,000. Both totals, he said, represented new securities, and not refunding. Counting refunding issues, and taking in the whole country, he declared, there had been an average issue of $600,000,000 a year for the last ten years.

"The commission would have to scrutinize the issues of some 1,500 railroad corporations which now report to it," Mr. Brownell continued, "and this does not include all the corporations included in the scope of the bill, for that includes telegraph, telephone, and express companies, and some steamboat companies."

In response to a query from Senator Brandegee as to whether the evil deeds of railroads had not affected public opinion, Mr. Brownell declared he did not regard that as a prime cause of the reluctance of the public to invest in railroad stocks. Freight rates had been greatly decreased, he said, while the expenses of the railroads had been much increased in recent years. This increase would easily total from 25 per cent. to 40 per cent., he said.

"Railroads must issue new securities," he continued, "and they have been compelled to issue millions of dollars' worth of short-term notes. These must be paid, renewed, or defaulted when they fall due. The railroads could not stand a long delay on the part of the commission on obtaining permission to take care of these notes."

Mr. Brownell pointed out that in New York State a certain proportion of the capital stock must be issued and paid for, in the case of new railroads, before a road can be incorporated. This would be in direct conflict with the proposed law, he declared.

Venice and Russia Outdone.

Edward S. Jouett, general counsel of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, drew a vivid picture of the power the bill would confer on the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Not even in the palmiest days of Venice, nor in Russia," he said, "was ever such unrestricted authority given as it is proposed to give the commission and its agents in this bill. Under its provisions it would be possible for an agent of the commission to enter the office of the President of a railroad, examine whatever papers he might find there, without stating what it was he sought, make an ex parte report upon what he found, and blast the good name and fame of the railroad. He might be corrupt, and might use the information he obtained through the examination of the papers to the detriment of the road, or in aid of a competing line."

Mr. Jouett declared that in his opinion to confer such power upon the commission and its agents would be unconstitutional.

With the taking of today's testimony the committee practically completed its anti-trust hearings, and next week will take up the task of settling upon one or more bills to report to the Senate. President Wilson has not sent word to the committee that he is ready to accept any legislation which proposes to accomplish less than that offered in the House, and in the absence of such word from the White House an effort probably will be made to report out a comprehensive bill.

A motion is pending before the committee to report only a trade commission bill and defer action on other subjects until next Winter. Many Senators openly favor this plan.

No session of the committee will be held to-morrow, but A. P. Thomb, general counsel of the Southern Railway, will be heard Saturday. Chairman Newlands said to-day that Mr. Thomb would be the last witness.

OPPOSES LABOR EXEMPTION.

It Is Un-American, Says E. P. Wheeler, Commending Moore's Course.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Everett P. Wheeler of New York, President of the American Bar Association, has written to Representative J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania strongly commending Mr. Moore's course in opposing the exemption of labor and farm associations from the operation of the anti-trust laws. Mr. Wheeler declares that such legislation is neither American nor democratic and says that it is opposed to the whole theory of popular government to grant special privileges to any class. The letter follows:

The American Bar Association,
27 William Street,
New York, June 3, 1914.
Hon. J. Hampton Moore, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Sir: It is with great satisfaction that I read in the morning TIMES the report of your speech in the House yesterday. The very foundation of American liberty lies in our doctrine of equal rights. To give special privileges to any class of men is opposed not only to the Declaration of Independence, but to the whole theory of our government. In the Democratic platforms of 1908 and 1912 I find the following paragraph:

"Questions of judicial practice have arisen, especially in connection with industrial disputes. We believe that the parties to all judicial proceedings should be treated with rigid impartiality and that injunctions should not be issued in any case in which an injunction would not issue if no industrial dispute were involved."

Yet to my amazement I see a Democratic majority adopting amendments to a bill which does not treat the parties to judicial proceedings with "rigid impartiality," but compels favoritism. For instance, we condemn the Standard Oil manufacturers for endeavoring in the early days of their organization to drive competitors out of business. What is this but a boycott? This was considered so criminal by the Senate that Senators declared that they would rather have their cotton destroyed by the weevil than use any Rockefeller money to prevent the plague. Yet here we have a proposed act which makes it legal for a labor union to persuade persons to cease to patronize or to employ any party to a dispute. This is a boycott. We all know that in all labor disputes, both in Ireland and America, the boycott has been used in the most cruel manner so as to deprive the sick of medicine, the hungry of food, &c. Yet here is a proposition to legalize it when employed by a labor union, although it would be illegal if used by a corporation.

Such legislation is neither American nor Democratic, and the time will come when the sentiment of the American people will condemn it. In my opinion the great majority of our people do condemn it now. Allow me to express the hope that you will stand to your guns in this matter and expose the character of this legislation when it comes to a final vote. This seems to me especially appropriate for you, who are a Republican and therefore committed by your platform to "devotion to the cause of Republican institutions established by the fathers." In another paragraph that platform declares:

"It is important that the rights of every individual to the freest possible development of his own powers and resources and to the control of his own honestly acquired property, so far as those are compatible with the rights of others, shall not be interfered with or destroyed."

The Democratic Party, in the first paragraph of its platform, "re-affirm our devotion to the principles of democratic government formulated by Thomas Jefferson." This doubtless refers to the Declaration of Independence. This declaration states it to be self-evident that "all men are created equal," yet we have a proposed act of Congress which gives the labor unions special privileges of exemption from the administration of the law. George the Third was condemned "because he had obstructed the administration of justice," and yet this act prohibits the Judges from restraining unlawful acts by labor unions.

Can it have occurred to the gentlemen who proposed this legislation that, if the courts cannot decide these controversies peaceably, they will be decided by force? The shocking results of the latter method we see plainly in Colorado. Would it not have been better to have had the questions which have given rise to bloodshed there decided in an orderly manner by the Colorado courts?

Permit me to send you with this letter a copy of the last report of a committee of the American Bar Association which was adopted unanimously by that association at its meeting in Montreal last August. On Pages 10-16 you will find a statement with respect to injunctions. It may be of service to you in any subsequent discussion.

Thanking you again for your manly stand on this matter, I am

Yours faithfully,
EVERETT P. WHEELER.

$17,784,889 OFF MONEY BILL.

Fitzgerald Follows Up Economy Lecture by Paring Appropriation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Representative John J. Fitzgerald of New York, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, followed up his recent lectures to the House on economy by reporting from the committee today the annual supply bill for the sundry civil expenditures of the Government showing a reduction of $17,784,889 from the departments' estimate.

The bill, one of the largest of the annual budgets, carries $107,696,795, or $16,993,189 less than the sum appropriated for 1914. The largest item is $20,718,000 for continuing construction work on the Panama Canal, an increase of $1,942,607. For fortifying the canal $1,124,475 is named, a decrease of $3,984,875.

The House leaders purpose to take up the sundry civil bill immediately after the passage of the anti-trust legislation, which will be probably early next week. Most of the allowances carried in the measure are for certain fixed expenditures, and the provisions for that reason are more or less of the same character each year.

The reductions made by Mr. Fitzgerald and his colleagues of the Appropriations Committee are the result of several months' consideration.

TO REMIT INCOME TAX FINES.

Resolution Approved by Treasury Department Passed by Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The Senate to-day passed a resolution directing the Secretary of the Treasury to remit penalties imposed under the Income Tax act for failure to make return by March 1 or to make proper returns provided the infraction of the law did not result from a willful act.

The resolution, introduced by Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, a Democrat, reads:

Be It Resolved, That the penalties provided by the act approved Oct. 3, 1913, for failure to properly return income tax provided in the act be, and the same are hereby, remitted for the present year where said return was completed by June 1 of the present year, where failure to make said return was not due to a purpose wilfully to refrain from making the same, and penalties which have been paid are remitted and directed to be returned.

The same resolution, with the date limiting remission changed to July 1, was introduced in the House by Representative Lobeck of Nebraska, Democrat, today.

The resolution was approved by officials of the Treasury Department before it was introduced in the Senate. A controlling reason for suggesting the remission was that the income tax law was effective this year for the first time, and many mistakes in returns were made through misunderstandings of the requirements of the law. There have been many petitions favoring the remission.

NEW STREET CLEANING PLAN

Commissioner Wants to Try Motors and Dustless Devices.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Fetherston will ask the Board of Estimate today to appropriate $250,000 to carry out a street cleaning experiment in a certain district of the city.

Up-to-date appliances are to be used, and if the experiment proves successful the plan will be extended. The part of the city to be operated upon, provided the Board of Estimate grants the money, lies between Twelfth and Fortieth Streets and Sixth Avenue and the East River.

Commissioner Fetherston's plan is to have traction engines replace the ordinary horse-drawn vehicles in the collection of garbage, ashes, and the removal of snow. The garbage and ash carts are to be covered, and covered cans will be furnished to householders free of charge. There will also be a new system of street flushing.

TWO JUDGES RULED OUT.

Court Says Hylan and Roy Appointments Were Illegal.

Holding that the constitutional amendment providing for two additional County Judges in Kings County prescribed that the new places should be filled at a general election, Supreme Court Justice Jaycox in Brooklyn yesterday decided that John F. Hylan and Robert H. Roy had been illegally appointed to the county bench by Gov. Glynn. Under this ruling the two appointees must retire pending a decision by the Court of Appeals as to the validity of the Governor's act.

Justice Jaycox does not construe the acts of Mr. Hylan and Mr. Roy while sitting as Judges in the County Court as illegal.

PARK STANDS RESTORED.

Newsdealers Allowed to Resume Business in City Hall Plaza.

Park Commissioner Ward issued orders yesterday to have the newsstands which were removed from City Hall Park reinstated. The Commissioner was impressed by the many complaints he had received since he directed Louis W. Fehy, Secretary of the Park Board, to remove the stands as part of a movement to beautify the parks.

Whether the stands are to stay in the park permanently will be decided when Mayor Mitchel returns to the city today.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Builders Buy Upper Manhattan Parcels—Deal Near Times Square—$100,000 Bronx Estate Sale—$400,000 Purchase in Long Island City—New Rochelle-Brooklyn Trade—Morristown Acreage Sale.

Two deals in the upper Manhattan section which will result in two new apartment house operations added some activity to a quiet realty market yesterday. The northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 157th Street, a plot 125 by 100, recently improved with a one-story theatre and taxpayer by the Riverside-Viaduct Realty Company, (Newman & Jacobs,) has been sold by them to Dimock & Fink. In part payment the latter gave a vacant plot on the northeast corner of Audubon Avenue and 180th Street, 100 by 100, which the new owners intend to improve with a five-story apartment house.

In the immediate locality, the vacant plot on the northwest corner of Northern Avenue and 180th Street, 138 by 100, was purchased in a cash deal by the Haven Construction Company, Charles Flaum, President, from the Central Realty and Improvement Company, controlled by Sonn Brothers. The buyers are having plans prepared for the erection of three five-story apartment houses. Weschler & Kohn acted as attorneys in both transactions.

Deal in Times Square Section.

Another old dwelling in the Times Square section, 110 West Forty-sixth Street, was reported sold yesterday by Frederick Fox & Co. Pease & Elliman conducted the negotiations for the sale of the Hollins home.

It is now occupied by five four-story buildings and a five-story flat, the latter having recently been purchased by Mr. Underhill to enlarge his plot. Plans are being prepared for the new building by the architects, Hill & Stout, and the cost is estimated at about $350,000. The structure will be near the new Hill Publishing Company's building, on the southwest corner of Tenth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street.

TELLS HOW BAXTER SOLD HER MORPHINE

HE IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Police Find the Defendant Was Once Imprisoned and Lost His License.

Dr. Charles Baxter, until Wednesday house physician at the hospital attached to the Workhouse on Blackwell's Island, was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Deuel, in the Yorkville Court, charged with selling drugs to the convicts, and on another charge of having drugs in his possession illegally. He was held for the Grand Jury on the charge of selling drugs, and Magistrate Deuel adjourned until this afternoon the hearing on the motion of the defendant's counsel to dismiss the other complaint. His counsel was Arthur J. Levine of 150 Nassau Street.

Commissioner of Correction Katharine B. Davis and Deputy Commissioner Burdette G. Lewis attended the hearing. Although Commissioner Davis has denied that Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's campaign against the sale of drugs is connected with the present investigation, a representative of Mrs. Vanderbilt was in court.

The principal witness examined yesterday was Mrs. Susan Daniels of 100 West Eighty-sixth Street, who under the name of Rose Barry was committed to the Island by Magistrate Herbert on May 25. She obtained the evidence on which Dr. Baxter was arrested. She said that on May 26 she complained of ear trouble, and was assigned to the hospital by Dr. Elihu Katz, an interne, who has taken Dr. Baxter's place. On the next day she talked to Dr. Baxter and gave him two five-dollar bills, which she said were to be considered a retaining fee. Dr. Baxter asked about her health and told her that he would order morphine. Testimony which the witness attempted to give, showing that a woman known as Jennie Hill had acted as a go-between in her negotiations for morphine with Dr. Baxter, was not accepted by Magistrate Deuel.

The witness said that she gave Dr. Baxter two $1 bills with a note asking for morphine, and that on the next day, Friday, May 29, he gave her eight tablets wrapped in a piece of gauze. She told Dr. Baxter that Dr. Katz did not want her to stay in the hospital, whereupon she asserted Dr. Baxter replied:

"Don't worry. I'm boss here, and I'll fix you up."

On May 31, Mrs. Daniels testified, she told the doctor that it would be hard for her to get morphine after she got out, and she gave him two $2 bills and one $1 bill, all marked, which had been given to her by Commissioner Davis before she went to the Island. Dr. Baxter, she said, seemed greatly touched, and said: "I didn't expect that much from you."

On cross-examination the witness admitted that last Winter she served a sentence of six months, one month at the Tombs and the rest on the Island, for shoplifting; and that in 1908 or 1909 she had served a year in the Bedford Reformatory on the charge of stealing a coat.

Dr. Baxter's name was given yesterday as Charles F. Baxter, and it was said that he had used the middle initials F. and H. Inspector Faurot and Detective Harry Dattelbaum went to Riverhead, L. I., early yesterday morning to look into the case of the Dr. Charles F. Baxter, who was there convicted in 1900 of falsifying insurance papers. By comparing finger prints they asserted the identity of this man with the present defendant was established beyond doubt.

MRS. A. I. R. CHAPIN ACCUSED

Daughter of Rev. Dr. Irvine Arrested on Girl's Charge of Theft.

Detectives last night arrested Mrs. Anna I. R. Chapin, daughter of the Rev. Dr. I. N. W. Irvine, at her home, 73 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn, on a warrant issued by Magistrate Breen in the West Farms Court, the Bronx, charging her with the larceny of $100 from Miss Minerva Beeb of 876 Hornaday Street, the Bronx. She was locked up in the Tremont Avenue Station.

Mrs. Chapin's husband was with her when the arrest was made. Her father was the rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church in Huntington, Penn., when he was removed in 1900 by Bishop Talbot. He is now a priest of the Russo-Greek Church in Brooklyn. He visited his daughter at the station.

Miss Beeb, who came here from Syria, had been befriended by Dr. Irvine, who seven months ago placed the girl in charge of Mrs. Chapin, who then had an apartment at the Hornaday Avenue address. The girl, who had been jilted by a young man, gave $100 to Mrs. Chapin to keep for her. A week ago Miss Beeb was away from the house for several hours, and on her return, she says, found that Mrs. Chapin had removed her effects and had left no address.

When the Asphalt Softens

EVEN in these big, cool stores of ours, we are now thinking about the heat, and you must realize from the weather last week that it will not be long before your heels will make little dents in the asphalt pavement.

But the heat of the city will seem less and you will be better able to work and play if your clothes are of the kind we offer.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx
Suits of Palm Beach Cloth
$10.00

HERE is something very remarkable. These suits which have no waistcoats are so light and so easy to wear, that they are cooling just to handle. Even the thought of wearing one makes you feel more comfortable on a hot day. And the price, $10, is very little when you consider the value it brings.

Mohair Coats and Trousers $15.00

HART, Schaffner & Marx Mohair garments differ from others in that they have more style and are better tailored, and don't forget that we put as much value in these as in our other clothes.

The delays have been heartbreaking, especially with all the Clothes and Hats and Haberdashery we prepared for the opening waiting to get a place to show themselves.
